More than twenty-five years ago a family by the name of Judkins occupied the home. Mrs. Judkins was known to have buried money, several packages having been found by her husband following her death. It is believed that this money also was hidden by her.

The can contained one $20 and three $10 gold pieces. The can in which they had been placed was rusty, and the cloth which had been wound around the coins was decayed and fell to pieces when handled.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

An important item in the season's wardrobe is the one-piece frock of taffeta. This charming model has the skirt trimmed with tiny accordion plaited frills and this decoration reappears at the top of the deep cuffs of the bishop sleeves. Fastening at one side, the bodice gives full play to the graceful lines of the front. Hemstitched batiste is used for the neck finish. In medium size 6 yards 36-inch taffeta makes the dress.

Pictorial Review Waist No. 6596. Sizes, 34 to 42 inches bust. Skirt No. 6610. Sizes, 22 to 32 inches waist. Price of each number, 15 cents.

Pictorial Review Patterns may be procured at the M. Katz & Co. Department store, Fulton.

New Coat Model with Removable Collar.

For spring or summer this suit in cool green linen is admirable. The coat has double collars, one being of white linen.

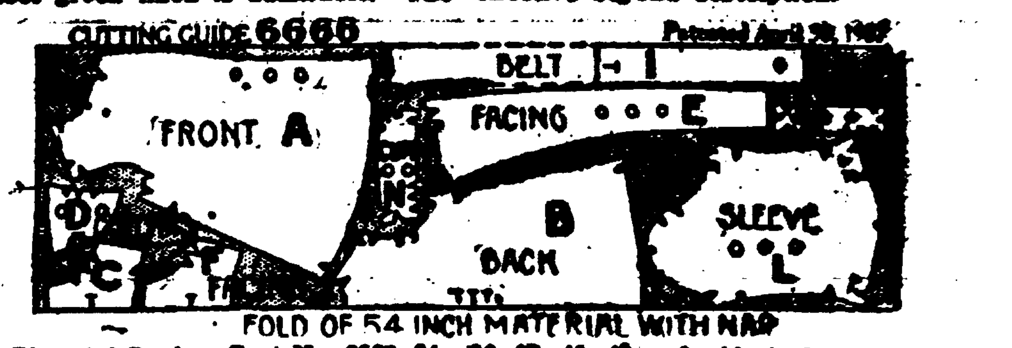
A lovely shade of cool springtime green linen is used for this model, the coat being trimmed with square collars and revers. One of the collars is removable and is perforated at the front for a square outline if that is preferred to the shawl effect. The sleeves are of regulation coat design, cut in two pieces and finished with turn-back cuffs. In medium size the coat requires 2½ yards 54-inch or 3⅝ yards 36-inch material. As most of the smart linens rarely exceed 40 inches in width, it will be necessary to cut the frock and the sleeve on an open width of material. If serge or cloth is used for the coat, fold the material as shown in the cutting guide.

The very important thing is to arrange the various parts of the pattern as indicated, placing each piece over a lengthwise thread where this is required and on the fold when necessary.

The belt is laid on a crosswise fold of material, if a stripe is used, for this is a favorite idea with French dressmakers. The coat hangs quite full below the waist. The removable collar frequently is made of heavy white linen. Sheer organdy, however, is quite as smart looking and probably will be preferred on very warm days.

Many smart, serviceable coats are developed in checked worsted, while others are made of white gabardine. The latter are plainly tailored and trimmed with large pearl buttons.

The new silks of the season offer ample opportunity for that elegant simplicity so earnestly sought and when understandingly handled are effective beyond description.



Pictorial Review Coat No. 6666. 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust. Price, 15 cents. Skirt No. 6614. Sizes, 16 to 20 years. Price, 15 cents.

The "Barefoot" Tire—
———and Why.

CONSIDER now the means by which many Tires have been given maximum Traction,—i.e., by means of a "sandpapery" texture in the Rubber of their Anti-Skid Treads.

Every time the Brakes are put on, to make such Tires grip the road, the relatively hard, unyielding, and comparatively brittle, texture of the Rubber in their Treads causes these Treads to grind away on the pavement, to WEAR OUT fast at the point of contact.

The sudden efficiency of their grinding-Traction also tugs so sharply on the Rubber Adhesive between the layers of Fabric in Tire as to separate these layers.

There is little "give" to them—just as there is little "slide" to them.

So, they gain Traction at the expense of Mileage.

Naturally such Tires require a great BULK of such Rubber in order to deliver reasonable Mileage before worn out.

And, therein they differ radically from GOODRICH "Barefoot" Tires.

Because,—the Safety-Tread on Goodrich Tires is made of "Barefoot-Rubber," a new, and exclusive compound which discards unnecessary whitish "frictional" ingredients that are heaviest and inert, as proved by their lighter weight.

HERE is how it acts in Automobiling,—

—When the weight of the Car bears on this clinging "Barefoot-Rubber" Tread, and the power is applied to go ahead or reverse, the wonderful stretch in the "Barefoot" Rubber Sole (or Tread) of the Goodrich Tire acts as a sort of Lubricant between the Fabric Structure of the Tire and the Road.

Then, the Barefoot-Rubber "Toes," of the Goodrich Safety-Tread Tire, CLING to the pavement (instead of grinding against it), in such manner as your Bare Foot would cling to a slippery surface—without Grind, and so, with the minimum of Frictional Heat or Wear for maximum Traction.

Goodrich "Barefoot-Rubber" is now made into Goodrich FABRIC Tires,—Goodrich Silvertown Cord Tires,—Goodrich Inner Tubes,—Goodrich Truck Tires,—Goodrich Motor Cycle, and Bicycle, Tires, as well as into Goodrich Rubber Boots, Over-Shoes, Soles and Heels.

Get a Sliver of it from your nearest Goodrich Branch, or Dealer. Stretch it thousands of times, but break it you can't.

That's the Stuff that GOODRICH Black-Tread Tires are made of.

EASTER NUMBER OF THE ORACLE

Credit is Reflected Upon the Youthful Editors of the High School Publication.

The Easter number of the Oracle made its appearance at the high school yesterday and is dedicated to Maria Achilli. "M. A. G., '17" contributes the feature story, The Girl From Texas, which is snappy and pleasing. It is a narration on life in the school dormitory and has a moral on snubbing.

An unusual story appears in the publication entitled, "And The War Came" by E. S. R., '16, which pictures the change in the City of Toronto as a result of the strife between the European nations. The spirit of the article is shown in the concluding paragraph which reads: "Herein lies the glory of war. Not in the carnage, not in the songs of hate, but in the loyalty of the boys who are willing to live in wet, cold trenches for months at a time or to make the most tedious marches, and in the faith and love that 'keeps the home fires burning' and the faces bright."

An instructive description of Indian stone implements and an article on nature in addition to the other stories tend to make the first few pages of the issue pleasing. Reviews on school activities and the usual number of "grinds" are also included.

MRS. FRANCES HOWE TAYLOR

Frances Howe Taylor, aged 47 years, wife of Elmer Taylor of this city died this morning at the Crouse-Irving hospital in Syracuse. She had been ill for the past two weeks.

Mrs. Taylor was well known in this section where she had always lived. Surviving, besides the husband, are two children, a daughter Esther and a son Irving, also two sisters, Mrs. Harry Stanton and Mrs. George Saffell and the mother, Mrs. George House, all of this city.

WEATHER FORECAST

Fair and somewhat warmer tonight. Sunday increasing cloudiness, probably followed by rain.

ODDS 7 to 3 AGAINST PEACE THIS YEAR

London—During the past few days a certain amount of peace insurance has been accepted by London underwriters. The rate covering risk that peace is not declared by the end of the present year is now 70 percent, indicating odds of seven to three against peace by December 31.

The risk that peace is not declared by June 30, 1917, is accepted at 40 per cent, indicating odds of six to four on peace within fourteen months

This insurance is quite apart from the insurance on shipping, and is largely taken by munitions factories which would be left with large stocks on hand by the determination of the war.

It is purely a cold-blooded business proposition.

FEAR SHACKLETON'S SHIP IS IN TRAP

Buenos Aires—Increasing anxiety is felt here concerning the fate of the ship Endurance, of Lieutenant Sackleton's Antarctic expedition, which was expected to arrive during thel ast week in March. Relie plans are being made.

If the Endurance does not arrive by the first week in May it will be taken for granted that she either met with disaster or is trapped in an ice-bound sea.

EASTER, 1916

She thought of the men in the trenches,
Of their wives so hungry and worn;
And then in the heart of this woman
A brave resolution was born.

With fervor she flew to the attic
And there mid the camphor and dust,
Surveying her last summer's bonnet,
She weakly vowed: "Wear it I must.

"When thousands of women are starving
'Tis shameful for me to indulge;
What care I if this season's headgear
Does show same new angle or bulge?"

She brushed and she straightened with ardor,
Then put on her last season's straw,
And, glimpsing herself in the mirror,
Was stricken with horror and awe.

Then, doffing her last year's offender,
She packed it with wonderful speed
Expressed it to some worthy office
That cored for the poor ones in need.

With conscience serene, then, and quiet
She entered the swellest of shops;
With joy in her heart she selected
The cutest of new-fashioned "tops."

WITH THE SUFFRAGISTS

The "Suffrage Special" bearing a troupe of speakers, reinforced by nation wide suffrage celebrities including Mrs. Belmont and Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch, left the city of Washington April 9 to make the circuit of the suffrage states with the object of rousing the women voters to support only the candidates of that political party which includes woman suffrage as part of its political program.

Besides speeches from the car end all along the route big meetings and demonstrations will be held in the most important cities of every equal suffrage state. The "Suffrage Special" will re-enter Washington on May 13. It is sent out by the Congressional Union in the interest of nation wide woman suffrage via a constitutional amendment.

bankruptcy and indefinitely postpone the commencement of economic of recovery.

The Nation, which as the organ of the advanced liberals has opposed talk of revenge and the permanent division of Europe into two alliances, says:—

"Europe has this week reverted to international usage known as diplomacy. Cannon go on roaring, but statesmen have begun to to talk to each other. Herr von Vethmann-Hollweg has challenged Mr. Asquith to explain himself. Premier Asquith has responded, and in turn the German Chancellor must deal with the English rejoinder."

The Nation says "No trace of envy of Germany's prosperity and no plan of revenge for her cruelties" will be in the words or the spirit of the treaty which she will be asked to sign.

ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH.

Diet Hints For Sufferers Afflicted With This Trouble.

Acidity of the stomach and ulcerated stomach are largely on the increase in both England and America, if statistics are to be believed. And Dr. Willard J. Stone points out in the Journal of the American Medical Association that these are the two countries in which the consumption of sugar is greatest.

Dr. Stone recommends an almost starch and sugar free diet for persons troubled with acidity. He says the following articles of food may be eaten with safety: Fresh fruit pulp or fruit juices, such as grapefruit, oranges, peaches and watermelon, without sugar; broth, soft boiled or poached eggs, fish, chicken, broiled or baked meats, bacon, milk, tea, cream, butter, green vegetables, such as asparagus, spinach, cauliflower, watercress, endive, squash, carrots, turnips, lettuce, fruit and lettuce salads, with olive oil dressing containing a very small quantity of lemon juice; Brazil nuts, pecans or filberts.

The following foods are prohibited: Candy, sugar, sirups and condiments; the fresh fruits which contain more than 10 per cent carbohydrates, such as apples, pears, bananas, cherries, currants, plums; of the vegetables, peas parsnips, beans, potatoes, corn; the cereals, rice, macaroni, bread, crackers cocoa, chocolate and coffee.

Franklin as a Printer.

A letter of Charles Wilson Peale, who painted the first portrait of Washington, is dated Oct. 23, 1814, and discusses inventions, windmills, etc. In it he says:

"Dr. Franklin when he was a young man went to London and worked in divers shops and in different parts of the printing business. I heard a curious anecdote of him. He hired himself to work at press in an office. When a friend of the owner of the press came to see him, the printer told his friend that he was in great want of a compositor and asked where he could find one. 'I am much surprised that you should want a compositor when you keep a man at the press (pointing to Franklin) who is the best compositor in London,' he said."

Diplomats.

"Old Millyuns says that since he made his pile of money he feels like a neutral nation."

"Why is that?"

"Because he has so many diplomatic relations."—Judge.

Eiderdown.

Eiderdown is one of the poorest conductors of heat, hence its use as a bed covering.

Pain in the Head.

Pain in the forehead or aching and pain in the back of the neck is, in the majority of instances, caused by indigestion and constipation. Persons with perfect digestion never have a bad taste in the mouth nor complain of headache. Whatever the cause of the indigestion may be, it can be temporarily relieved by a laxative dose of medicine.—Pittsburgh Press.

Natural Ability.

"How this patient does keep up!"

"Of course he does. He's an aviator."—Baltimore American.

Evidently in Love.

"I told that boy," remarked the teacher, "to remain after school and write some word 100 times. But I don't think it was any great punishment."

"Why not?"

"I noticed that he wrote the word 'Rose' 100 times with an ecstatic smile."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Every one that flatters thee
Is no friend in misery.
Words are easy, like the wind;
Faithful friends are hard to find;
Every man will be thy friend
Whilst thou hast wherewith to spend;
But if store of crowns be scant,
No man will supply thy want.
If that one be prodigal,
Bountiful they will him call,
And with such-like flattering
"Pity but he were a king;"
If he be addict to vice,
Quickly him they will entice;
If to women he be bent,
They have a commandment;
But if fortune once do frown,
Then farewell his great renown;
They that fawn'd on him before
Use his company no more.
He that is thy friend indeed,
He will help thee in they need:
If thou sorrow, he will weep;
If thou wake, he cannot sleep;
Thus of every grief in heart
He with thee doth bear a part.
These are certain signs to know
Faithful friend from flattering foe.

Nearly 4500 Greet Peacock on First Day of Campaign

All streets led to the Peacock tabernacle for the three services yesterday. As early as 10 o'clock in the forenoon Broadway and 1st st., presentd a spectacle unusual for those thorofares, as they were crowded with masses of people whose faces indicated that something of great moment was to occur. About 1600 persons attended the morning service and 890 in the afternoon, while the banner audience of the three services entered the portals for the evening meeting meeting—about 2000.

Getting acquainted with the members of the Peacock forces formed one of the pleasing features of the morning service which was opened by the Rev. Charles Olmstead who led the audience in prayer. He then introduced the Rev. Mr. Peacock, who in turn paid the same compliment to the members of his party, including Miss Spear, who will conduct meetings in the shops, among business women, and prayer meetings was presented, then followed Miss Painter who is participating in her first campaign, Mrs. Dvidson, Mr. Davidson and Mr. Warth, respectively.

Mr. Peacock made one pleasing announcement, viz: that the day's collections were the heaviest in the experience of the party in any of the cities so far visited, they resulting as follows: morning, $165,-92; afternoon, $20.05; evening, $57.09.

The evangelist prefaced his sermon by saying that all offerings will be used to defray the expenses of the campaign. The audience was also informed that Fulton's tabernacle is the best in every way that has been provided for his campaigns.

The big choir which has been drilled for weeks by Dr. Knapp demonstrated that the local leader has brought the organization up to a high standard. The choir was handed over to Mr. Warth at the morning service. Mr. Warth is one of the best choir leaders of the country. He made friends of probably every person in the tabernacle at the opening meetings. He knows how to arrange the singing to make it an enjoyable feature to the audience.

Mr. Peacock's morning sermon was in part as follows:

"My friends, I believe we are here today because we are interested in the Kingdom of Jesus Christ. And if we are not interested in the Kingdom of our Lord and Master we ought to be. No man or woman will ever be the man or woman he or she ought to be until they do become interested in their Lord and Saviour. In order to be well rounded out in this life or fully developed it is necessary to develop every part of our being. Some people get the idea into their heads that if they develop the intellectual and physical they can let the spiritual alone. They feel they are fully developed. Now it is a mistaken diea. No individual is fully developed who has not developed the spiritual side of his nature. We have in this world quite a number of lopped sided people. And so many people are lopped sided becaused they have not been caring for the spiritual man. We are living in a material age. In age where many people are living for this world and this world alone, Some people are living to get rich. Others are living to gratify their evil appetites and desires. Others are living just to have what they call a good time. Now because of this spirit in the world, it is our duty, that is those of us who have accepted Jesus Christ as our Saviour, and profess to be His disciples, to do everything in our power to help those outside the King dom of God. It is our business to help them get into the Kingdom of God.

Called for a Purpose

We have been called into the Kingdom of God for a purpose. I sometimes think that many people fail to realize that they have been called into the Kingdom for a purpose. Mony people come into the Kingdom through selfish motives. They come in to save their soul. This is all well enough in its place. but it doesn't go far enough. We should come into the Kingdom of God with a higher and broader end in view. We should come into the Kingdom of Christ with the determination if God will give us the power, we will do all we can to make others happy and lead them to a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ. I think this is what Jesus meant when He said to Peter, 'When thou are converted strengthen thy brethern. My friends it is a glorious thing to be saved. It is the grandest experience it is possible for us to have in this life. For an individual to realize that the burden of sin has been lifted from the soul and that he has been reconciled to God, and that condemnation no longer awaits, is the most glorious thought that can come to the immortal soul.

When Paul reached the point where he realized that his sins had been removed through the atoning blood of Christ, and that he had been reconciled to God and that condemnation no longer awaited him, in his joy he cried out, For I am persuaded that neithor death, nor life, nor angels, And I believe this is the experience of all those who have been saved through the blood of Jesus Christ.

"Dr. Gregg says, "The world is dying." Dying for what? Sermons? No. Books? No. Religious novels? No. Religious newspapers? No. For fine spun theories? No. For creeds? No. What is the world dying for? For this downright, straightforward, honest, loving, personal testimony for Jesus Christ. This is what the people of the world want. They are dying spiritually all around us, and the one thing that can help them is the story of your conversion and mine. Tell them what God has done and can do for the lost soul. My friends we are saved to do some things. Too many people have the idea that when we accept Jesus as our Saviour we are to sit down and wait for Gabriel to blow his trumpet and take us home to glory. We have nothing to do but just wait. This is a mistaken idea. We have a work to do. We are indebted to others. And if we were really in earnest in the service of the Master we would be anxious to do all we could for Christ. Many people in our churches are like the colored people worshiping in the barn. We are just making fun. Too many people are making fun. We are not willing to make the sacrifice for Jesus. Now before we are willing to do this we must feel our responsibility in this matter.

Oh Yez! Oh Yez! Fulton Fans, Dress Up for the Show

This morning the windows in the business section presented evidence of activity. Someone it is evident intends winning the prize for the best decorated window. The three shields to be given as prizes in decoration and the fourth to be given for the best written advertisement placed in a home paper, are on exhibit at the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

When the judges begin their work at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning the business section will no doubt present an unusually attractive appearance. The merchants as a whole are entering into the spirit of the movement. The game of cooperation is as highly interesting as any other game, and the more enthusiasm used the more fun to be had out of the result. If the good work goes on the "crape hanger" will find himself crowded out after awhile.

The stores will remain open on Thursday evenin. Sixteen hundred personal invitations have been sent to the rural districts, and at 8 o'clock a band concert will be given by our unexcelled Elk's Band on the Plaza. The merchants will sit round a festive board in the most cooperative fashion on Thursday evening, and at this time the prize winners' names will be announced by the judges.

Every good and loyal Fulton woman should on Wednesday morning throw dull care to winds, dress up little James and Susie, and come down into the business section to view the efforts of our local merchants. Sometimes it's just as much fun to be a "fan" and applaud from the grandstand as it is to be in the game.

Give our local merchants the benefit of your appreciation for their effort even if you aren't yet cured of buying out of town.

NAVAL AVIATORS DROP BOMBS ON TURKISH CAPITAL; LONG FLIGHT

London—In a particularly hazardous flight from the Aegean Sea over the Sea of Marmora three British naval aviators dropped bombs on Constantinople on Friday evening. The Admiralty issued this statement on the raid last night:

"On Friday evening three of our naval aeroplanes carried out a raid on Constantinople. Bombs were dropped on the Zeitunlik powder factory and aeroplane hangars. Another naval aeroplane visited Adrianople and dropped bombs on the railway station. All returned safely.

"The flight to Constantinople and back measured three hundred miles. Although fine weather prevailed at the start, an adverse condition supervened, with wind, rain and thunderstorms."

The raid on Constantinople is the longest flight in the course of the war, the previous record having been held by a French airman, who flew from Nancy to Stuttgart and back, a distance of 240 miles.

Flight Commander J. R. W. Smyth-Piggot, who led the Constantinople raid, already has received thed istinguished service order medal for an exploit last November, when he attacked the railway bridge of the Orient Railway at Kuleli-Burgas.

This is the second time that the Zeitunlik powder mills have been attacked, they having been bombarded by a submarine which reached Constantinople.

PRAY ALWAYS

In the afternoon: Evangelist Peacock selected the text from Luks18:1. "Men ought always to pray and not to faint, and pray without ceasing." He showed the important place prayer occupied in the Christian life and how absolutely essential it was to effective work in the church. He said in part:

I want to speak now on the sub-

CONSCIENCE

We can be true to mankind at large only if we are true to ourselves. If we are false to ourselves we shall be false to every one else. We have a lofty ideal to serve, a great mission to accomplish for the cause of freedom and of genuine democracy and of justice and fair dealing throughout the world. If we are weak and slothful, and absorbed in mere money getting and rapid excitement, we can neither serve these causes nor any others. We must stand for national conscience, for national discipline and for preparedness—military, social and industrial—in order to help the soul of this Nation. We stand for peace, but only for the peace that comes as a right to the just man armed, and not for the peace which the coward purchases by abject submission to wrong. The peace of cowardice leads in the end to war, after a record of shame.—Theodore Roosevelt.

THE WEEK OF TRADE WINDS

People living inland have little cause for thinking of trade winds, but those who have traveled upon the ocean should remember hearing the captain say, today we have the trade wind with us. Some of us know that north of the Equator there is a steady northeast wind, and south of the Equator it is always a southeast wind. In the south it would be impossible to stand the heat almost all the year round but for the trade wind that blows in off the sea to temper the heat of the sun.

In one sense a trade wind is a commercial term. It is in its application to the present week in Fulton —DISPLAY WEEK, for the trade winds here will blow away the torrid heat of the craziness which has characterized the methods of the past, the methods, or lack of methods, if you please, which have driven to other places the trade that by all laws of the rules of business belong to this community. It is high time that the trade winds should be invoked to create friendly competition in advertising, window trimming, etc. It is possible that eventually they may drive over the Equator the nasty, torrid craziness which prevents the retail merchants of Fulton from rolling up large sales, irrespective of some other unfavorable conditions. It is possible that the trade winds may blow away the reputation of unfair dealings, of bad articles dealt in; and that they will here keep the atmosphere of business life sweet and clean and safe at every point.

Again we say, HAIL TO THE MERCHANTS OF FULTON, the Chamber of Commerce, and to all who contribute to the success of DISPLAY WEEK, which begins on Wednesday. May this week also be the means of shutting off trade winds that pump into the city any of the airs which, among other things, bring our people into competition with inflated advertising.

ANOTHER BUMPER YEAR

Seed time is here again, and with it opportunity. For two years in succession we have had the greatest crops in our history. Why should we not have a third? Forethought and careful tillage can bring it.

Never has a nation been so blest as ours. The only notable harvest elsewhere are Death's. Europe's fields are torn by trench and shell and trampled in a bloody mire. Her few safe places are tilled feebly by boys and women and old men. The chief crops gathered this year, at last, will be the manhood of the nations, mowed down in its prime.

Here every man can plow his field and spade his garden and prune his orchard without fear. Our only trenches are for drainage or irrigation. Our high explosives are used to blast away rocks and stumps. The holes blown in our soil are for the planting of trees.

We have the richest soil in the world, and the most of it. Last summer and the summer before our farmers made nearly as much money as all the belligerents together spent on the great war. Their products amounted to $500 for every family of us. They ushered in a prosperity of which we are only beginning to grasp the present dimensions and future possibilities. They provide food for our hundred millions, and a big surplus for the hungry nations. If necessary, they could feed the world.

Why should we not be as assiduous in production as Europe is in destruction? Why should we not exercise as great strategy in agriculture as other nations exercise in war? Why not mobilize all our knowledge and energies and resources? Why not utilize our vacant land and make our poorer soils productive? We could make two grains of wheat grow where one grew before. We could make millions of acres of waste land green with grain and bright with blossoms.

While other lands are flowing with blood, we can make ours overflow with milk and honey. This is in truth the Promised Land, and we have never yet fully realized its promise.

Great crops mean food, wealth and power. We want all these. And we are not wholly selfish about it. We can use them to good purpose, and we will. The world needs the products of our soil; it needs our money; it needs the power we can wield for peace and the rebuilding of civilization. The more wheat, corn, potatoes, beef, hogs, cotton and cane we raise this year, the better it will be for the whole human race.

So let's get busy, whether we have a 10,000 acre estate or only a big city back yard.

Opinions

WANT NOTHING BUT WHAT IS FAIR

Manufacturers want nothing but what is fair. When conditions are so changed that duties can be lowered without interfering with that Protection to American industry which has been so essential to and has done so much for our national prosperity, there will be general consent to their reduction, and it is a part of the Republican policy to reduce them. This does not mean a sweeping revision which destroys the Tariff as a revenue producer and puts the American working man out of employment. —Philadelphia Telegraph.

FOR CHEAPER COUNTY GOVERNMENT

Among a number of good features which fell by the way when the proposed constitution was voted down last fall was a proposed change which would have permitted several optional forms of county government. The people who are positive that improvement in the present form of government can easily be made have not given up the contest for the improvement, however, and therefore the present Legislature finds two bills before it designed for that improvement. Both bills are supported by the County Government Association of New York, this association being the outgrowth of a meeting at Schenectady in 1914 of persons interested in county government.

One of the bills is backed by Senator Horton, while the other is sponsored by Hamilton Fish, Jr. The Senate bill is in the form of a concurrent resolution and proposes an amendment to the constitution to allow a reform of the county government. Assemblyman Fish's bill would reform the government as much as may be under the present constitution.

The Senate bill would permit a county to adopt by referendum any of several optional forms of government, and it provides that all laws passed by the Legislature shall be applicable to all counties.

The assembly bill also provides for an optional form of government, but it conforms to the present constitution, consequently it retains the present constitutional officers. It provides for a board of supervisors, but the number shall not exceed five, to be chosen by popular vote. This board would have greatly increased powers and may appoint a county manager to be on the job all of the time. He would manage all county departments, except the courts, sheriff, district attorney and county clerk. The board would appoint all heads of departments and supervise their activities. The bills ought to be passed for they would not change the government in any county where the people want to pay for their present top-heavy, and costly system, while, at the same time, it permits any county which wants a change for the better the opportunity to have it.

There is no centralized, responsible head to county government as it is now framed. In Oneida county the nearest thing that comes to it is a board of supervisors with 48 members who meet four times a year, loaf some days or weeks each time, then hurry through what they must do and go home. The county business is big enough to be attended to at all times, and to have an executive to attend to it. Such an executive or board of executives can be had for much less than it requires to pay 48 men in their salaries, fees and expenses.

Imagine conducting a large corporation with 48 men and a number of other elected officers, each man for himself! The only reason a county can do it is that it has a great source of wealth which the officers can draw on as they see fit. —Utica Observer.

SECRETARY LANSING WILL BE NEXT PRESIDENT

No matter who is elected at the coming election, says the Washington Star, Robert Lansing will be the next President, following the expiration of Woodrow Wilson's term on March 4, 1917.

Secretary of State Lansing will rule the United States from noon of March 4, 1917, to noon of March 5, 1917. He will be President for 24 hours. President Wilson was elected in 19112 and took the oath of office March 4, 1913. His term of office will, according to law, expire at noon on March 4, 1917, when a new President would ordinarily be sworn in to succeed him or himself sworn in to succeed himself.

But March 4, 1917, falls on Sunday. The newly elected President will therefore not be sworn in until noon of March 5, 1917. And the law says that the Secretary of state shall act as President when the President and Vice President cannot so act. And the Vice President cannot so act in this case because his term of office expires with the President's and begins with the President's.

Antlered Hosts to Hit Peekskill Trail

If there is any one particular characteristic that has made a lasting impression upon any person who has ever had the good fortune to visit the village of Peekskill-on-the-Hudson, in the county of Westchester, Empire State, it is the cordial welcome extended to any comer to its confines and the warm and earnest hospitality accorded the stranger while within its gates.

It is this fact that the village of Peekskill wants to sink deep into the hearts of every Elk in the State of New York when the announcement is made ever and anon—and oftener as the second week in June draws near—that the fourth annual meeting or convention of the State Association of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks is to meet in Peekskill-on-the-Hudson on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, June 6, 7, 8, 1916.

Peekskill has no Niagara Falls to offer as a side show a la Buffalo. Peekskill is not possessed of world famous spas and the accompanying hotels and sine qua non of a Saratoga as an attraction to visit "between the acts." Peekskill has no elaborate system of parks, nor beautiful public buildings, nor Genesee Falls and Sam Patch traditions as per the Flower City of Monroe County. Peekskill has no stately piles of stone yclept the capitol or trolley suburban rides or historical political associations as has the capitol or our State at the head of the river on which it is located. Peekskill has no great white way or forty-story sky scrapers, or Central Park or group of fifty-seven variety theatres and all that goes to make up the only New York. But, all said and done, one thing Peekskill has, always has had and will always have, is and that said hospitality is all that the word implies will be poured out lavishly during the week in June that the Elks meet as it has been poured out whenever a convention of any people have come to the birthplace of Chauncey Mitchell Depew. And the best and strongest statement of all is the statement that the supply of hospitality is never, never exhausted.

Now, Peekskill wants not only the Elks of Fulton but everybody in Fulton who can leave our town for a few days to visit Peekskill during convention week. They will be assured a cordial welcome in the little old town on the banks of the Hudson which is this year celebrating its centennial, the village charter having been granted to Peekskill in the year 1816.

The members of Peekskill Lodge, No. 744, B. P. O. E., are preparing a program that will be the greatest ever. A series of events that will overtop anything the biggest Elk from the biggest lodge in the biggest city at the biggest convention ever saw, heard or even conceived in his most lurid imaginations.

The convention gathering of the B. P. O. Elks will really begin on Monday evening, June 5th, with a dinner to the officers and delegates by the citizens. The session will last over the three days following, ending with a grand parade on Thursday afternoon. On Tuesday, by invitation, a visit will be made to the plant of the Fleischmann Manufacturing Company, the largest yeast factory in the world; open house has been declared by the local Knights of Columbus and at the home of Peekskill Lodge, No. 744. On this evening a band concert will be given by the military band on the open plaza and a ritualistic contest will also take place.

On Wednesday, beside the sessions of the convention, there will be an outing with clambake for all the delegates, while the ladies will be given an excursion to Bear Mountain Park and West Point. A highway carnival and dance will take place on Park street and a midnight frolic will be given to the visiting Elks at one of the local theatres. Adjournment of the convention comes on Thursday, ending with a parade of the marching clubs.

There will be plenty of available places to accommodate all visitors in Peekskill during the convention, and no rates will be raised. In addition to the local hotels, many boarding houses will be available and the various hotels in the vicinity will also welcome the guests. Accommodations for hotels may be made in advance by writing to the convention committee.

Special rates have been granted by the railroads in New York State to Peekskill for the convention, and it is not unlikely that many excursions will be arranged by both rail and water for those who care to attend. Make your plans early to go to Peekskill.

RECORD ACTIVITY IN SHIPBUILDING

Orders For 250 Vessels Being Executed In Our Shipyards.

FEW FOR FOREIGN TRADING

Most of the Ships Under Construction Will Be Used In Adjacent Waters or by Private Firms—All European Countries Active, Too, In Spite of the War That Rages.

American shipyards have today under construction or contracted for approximately 250 vessels of all classes, with about a million tons displacement.

These figures indicate the greatest activity in the American shipbuilding industry, the largest number of vessels and the greatest tonnage ever under construction at one time during the last fifteen years.

Orders for twenty ships having a displacement of over 60,000 tons were placed in February. In that month six ships, with a gross tonnage of 31,329, were delivered by the shipyards.

While these figures would seem to foretell the return of the American flag to its former pre-eminence upon the seas, as in the days when the American clipper poked her nose into every port in the world, analysis does not bear out this deduction.

Competition Not Considered.

Detailed reports concerning the vessels that are being built in the thirty-two shipbuilding plants in the United States, including the great lakes yards, do not reveal that the American overseas merchant fleet will be either greatly enlarged or that United States shipping interests are seriously contemplating competing with foreign lines for the ocean carrying trade.

The number of ships over 3,000 tons under construction is 122. Of these sixteen are 3,000 to 4,000 tons, ten are 4,000 to 5,000 tons, forty-seven are 5,000 to 7,000 tons, thirty-three are 7,000 to 10,000 tons, and sixteen are 10,000 tons and over.

While these figures would seem to indicate a considerable addition to the ocean carrying tonnage of American registry, they do not tell the real story unless taken in conjunction with detailed reports on construction made by various shipbuilding plants.

There is no distinction, for instance, in the above figures between vessels that will ply on the great lakes, those for the coastwise trade and those destined for overseas service.

It is perfectly apparent from an analysis of detailed reports that less than 10 per cent of the vessels now building in American yards are destined for the overseas trade and that the majority of those that will enter the transoceanic trade are oil ships.

The following figures show the distribution of tonnage under construction:

| Districts. | Number. | Gross tons. |
|---|---|---|
| Delaware river, etc. | 65 | 221,968 |
| Chesapeake bay, etc. | 48 | 221,466 |
| Pacific coast | 31 | 172,158 |
| Great lakes and rivers | 64 | 142,183 |
| New England | 19 | 68,678 |
| Others | 8 | 4,877 |
| Total | 229 | 881,330 |

The shipbuilding activity is not confined to the United States. Even though there is war in Europe, the shipyards of the European countries are quite as active as those in the United States, and their operations are not confined to the building of naval vessels.

Great Britain Busy.

For the year 1915-16 it is stated that 1,506,925 tons were under construction in the United Kingdom. The yards of Denmark are fully employed for two or three years. In France the yards are almost wholly engaged in naval work. The Netherlands plants are filled with orders up to 1917-18. Japan is busy with naval and merchant work, and in Norway the yards are so full that owners are sending work to the United States. Only in Italy is there depression in the shipbuilding industry because of the shortage of coal.

The French government, however, has a project in hand for increasing the French merchant marine by providing for government loans to shipbuilding enterprises. A bill has already been presented authorizing the expenditure by the government of $19,800,000 during the war and during the first twelve months after the signing of the treaty of peace.

TO PROVIDE BIRDS WITH FOOD

Ten Thousand Black Cherry Trees to Be Planted In Pennsylvania.

Nearly 10,000 seedling black cherry trees are to be planted this year under the auspices of the state forestry department as part of the general plan to provide food for insect killing birds in the wooded portions of Pennsylvania. The use of cherry trees has been adopted instead of planting grapevines, which were set out on experimental tracts in state reserves last year, and it is expected that the trees will furnish both timber and food.

Many of the trees will be planted along roadsides to encourage bird life in farming districts. Some will be planted on state reserves and others will be given to individuals who have been working with the foresters and who will permit observations to be made. The trees were all raised in the state's nurseries.

The passing of J. T. Trowbridge, the poet and story writer, seems to mark the close of an era peculiar to American letters. A child of the log cabin age who worked his way up by slow stages, he was a representative of the class, not, however, confined to literature, which is commonly supposed to have had its day, never to be reproduced. Trowbridge's work outstripped its author in popularity. The man's personality has long been forgotten by the generation for which a new idol springs up every year. And perhaps interest in the new idols will endure because they will continue to appeal, as Whitcomb Riley is doing. One lesson from Trowbridge, Riley and the rest is that the day for such development is not done, as so often alleged. Jack London began at the bottom; Cy Warman was a locomotive driver; Masefield, the very newest, a common sailor. The times are not out of joint for growing up in the midst of but in spite of hardship. Widespread wealth and higher education increase the number of the fortunate born, but the toiler of today has advantages not enjoyed by the boy Trowbridge and his contemporaries. All the appliances of culture are at hand and mediums for trying out the genius of the fledgling.

The disclosures in the Baff murder case in New York city show up money madness in a most abnormal phase. It was a business competition fight, and when the approach of the holiday season would furnish Baff an opportunity to hurt his competitors they hired gun men to do him to death. This was the spirit of the bandit transferred to the supposed higher walks of civilization. The killing of the gambler Rosenthal a couple of years ago was the result of a quarrel among criminals of whom the worst could be expected, but the responsibility of the Baff murder seems to rest upon scores of dealers who blandly pose before the public as reputable business men.

More and more England is calling upon women to help out in war. In the days of the suffragette outbreaks women were taunted with their inability to go to war. A nation at war soon discovers that the struggle is not confined to the hostile front. The women of England have been drafted into various commercial and manufacturing industries for which they were fit, from the beginning of the war. Then followed their organization into a corps of farm hands, with a distinctive uniform and badge to indicate war service. Lack of a war record can no longer be alleged against the sex in England.

Since the opening of the big war United States exports have increased enormously, 70 per cent being the increase reported for 1915. The volume of exports for 1915 was over $3,500,000,000. For the same period the home trade of the United States, according to reliable statistics, was $500,000,000,000. That is about 100 times the volume of foreign trade in its banner year. These figures indicate that the United States is its own best customer and the foreign trade at its best a mere bagatelle.

EFFICIENCY VICTIMS.

What Is to Be Done For the Toiler Who Can No Longer Keep the Pace?

What is to become of the efficiency victims—that is, the old men who have served the useful days of their lives in a calling, only to suddenly find themselves ruthlessly thrown on the scrap pile to work their way out as best they may? If there is one thing more bitter than another it must be to be told, "Your usefulness to us is over; you are discharged." That is what in these days of efficiency method is occurring every day to men who have been faithful to their tasks day after day and year after year, and, then to be told without warning that they are out of date is not calculated to give peace of mind. It is not human to expect a man to take such a situation in a philosophical manner; his whole being has been shocked; he thinks of his old helpmate who has traveled the road with him, sharing the ups and downs, the sorrows and pleasures of the journey, and to have to go home and tell her that he has been discharged because he was too old, too old.

What provision is to be made for such victims? Some provision must be made for them. If misfortune has followed them and the wages he made did not allow for a saving for an old age, there is nothing but the poorhouse or be dependent on some one else, who indeed may not be able to stand the double strain, but out of the goodness of heart, charity and love will undertake the burden. Other countries have taken this task up and disposed of it by a pension system; is it not better to do that than to pay an equal amount to maintain the various plans now employed?

It is time we woke up to an ever increasing situation. The greater the introduction of efficiency methods the greater will become the necessity for the protection of the victims resulting therefrom.—Tobacco Worker.

COMPENSATION FOR WIDOW.

Pennsylvania Board Awards Big Sum to Workman's Dependents.

The family of J. W. Rosenberger, who was killed on Jan. 24 by a fall from a roof in South Ardmore, Pa., while working at his trade, was awarded compensation that will total $5,176 in a decision by William B. Scott, Pennsylvania workmen's compensation board referee for the district. Rosenberger had been employed eleven months by W. E. Mitchell, a contractor, at $3 a day. He left Mitchell and went to work for M. Harvey Nace, another contractor.

The dispute over the amount of damages to be paid was raised by Nace, who said Rosenberger had agreed to work for him for $12 a week. This did not seem reasonable to the referee, who held that a man would not leave his position for one paying less and so awarded compensation on the basis of $18 a week. This was the first case of its kind to be decided.

The awards to Mrs. Rosenberger and her children, Paul, Harry and Mildred, extend to Aug. 31, 1930. Mrs. Rosenberger receives compensation at the rate of $9.90 a week for 300 weeks, at the expiration of which time the three children receive $6.30 a week for 185 weeks. At the expiration of the latter period Harry and Mildred receive $4.50 a week for 109 weeks, and at the expiration of this period, June 21, 1927, a further compensation is awarded to Mildred of $2.70 a week for 167 weeks.

Clerks Waive Jurisdiction.

As a result of a conference at A. F. of L. headquarters, Washington, between representatives of the A. F. of L. and the international unions of longshoremen and railway clerks, the following agreement was reached: "Where men are employed in marine warehouses, their work consisting of moving freight to and from marine warehouses to deep water vessels of seaports and the great lakes, the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks concedes the jurisdiction of these men to the International Longshoremen's association."

INSTITUTES GET GOOD SUPPORT

Legislature Has Appropriated $60,000 for Promotion of Worthy Cause.

Appropriations, the total of which is more than $60,000 arep rovided for the maintenance of Farmers' Institutes and Farm Bureaus. Commissioner of Agriculture Charles S. Wilson has announced that the proposed Farmers' Institute and Farm Bureau appropriations are approved by Governor Charles S. Whitman, who is appreciative of thew ork which the bureaus do for the farming interests. For the Farmers' Institutes approximately $36,000 is to be provided for in the appropriation bill and for Farm Bureaus a total of approximately $25,250.

The Farmers' Institutes consist of lectures by authorities on various subjects of vital interest to agriculture. The attendance at these Institutes shows their value and the extent to which they are appreciated The Bureau also issues bulletins containing much information valuable to the farmer.

To the support of each of the 36 Farm Bureaus in the State $600 is provided from State funds The Federal Government and the County authorities each provide the same amount The agents in these bureaus in the various counties demonstrate improved farm methods and also furnish valuable information on agriculture.

"Governor Whitman is familiar with the functions performed by these bureaus," said Commissioner Wilson, "and he realizes their value to agriculture. It was with his strong approval that the amount for each Bureau were provided for in the appriproation bill."

Commissioner Wilson said the highest efficiency would be sought in both Bureaus and that the Department would do its utmost to make them still more valuable to agriculture.

MILLIONS FOR LICENSE TAGS

Albany—All previous automobile registration records are being smashed these days at the office of Secretary of State Hugo. Cars are being licensed at a rate better than 2,000 a day. Receipts from the 1916 registration of motor vehicles, chauffeurs, etc. but exclusive of motorcycles, amounted to $1,477,363, or practically one and one-half millions up to April 10th. This is an increase of $262,000 over the same period a year ago.

All told 171,977 cars have been registered in this state so far this year as compared with 142,576 a year ago now. In the New York City zone this year's registration is running better than 18,000 over the first two and a half months of 1915.

Predictions of over 300,000 motor vehicles for New York State this year seems likely to be verified if the present registration is maintained for any length of time. Every county in the state is showing an increase that in many cases is little short of marvelous. If any prospective owner is holding back through a fear of advancing gasoline the fact is not manifesting itself if the present registration figures can be taken as a criterion.

Up to April 10th, 2,992 motorcycles had been registered in compliance with the new law, 408 of the number being rated as commercial. Out of the whole numbeer registered, 1.602 were from the New York zone, 911 from the Albany and 479 from the Buffalo zone. Up to date the receipts from the motorcycle registration amount to $7,448.50.

MAY MAGAZINES

Beer Drinking Discouraged in German Army

In the May American Magazine Dr. Edwin F. Bowers says:

" To prove, out of their own mouths, that the Germans are not nearly so enthusiastic about beer as some beer-boosters would have us believe, we have but to glance at these excerpts from an army pamphlet entitled 'Alcohol and the Power of Resistance,' circulated widely among German soldiers:

" 'There is no justification for calling beer 'liquid bread;' a glass of heavy beer costing twenty-five pfennig has no more nourishment than a piece of cheese costing one pfennig. Almost all excesses and disturbances in the army are traced to drink. * * 'It is mostly beer that causes the mischief. Beer is not the harmless drink it is supposed to be.' "

A Mistake in Dress that Sometimes Costs a Job

In the May Woman's Home Companion Grace Margaret Gould tells how women should dress in hunting positions.

"The capable young business woman out of work too frequently makes one mistake, yet that's sufficient," says Miss Gould. "She has just one purpose in mind—to get a position. Experience has taught her the importance of the first impression.

"Therefore she has her tailored suit pressed and cleaned, her shoes shining and her gloves new; but her hat or her hair proves her stumbling block. Perhaps she reasons she looks a bit too prim, so, instead of buying a small, smart hat, say of canvas and satin with lacquered leaves applied for the trimming—up to the moment in style, and in harmony with her suit—she buys a cerise sailor with a towering purple bow, and puts it on at just the wrong angle. You know the angle counts a lot in dress. Now if she adds to this a purple nose veil with big dots, and especially if her hair is overdone, it is a pretty sure thing that the effect she gets is the effect that loses her that position."

PUBLIC SCHOOLS CARNIVAL MAY 3

Best Ever is Promised By Directors of the Different Departments—The Quirk is Selected.

Nothing in the line of entertainment in Fulton is looked forward to with greater interest than the annual carnival given by the pupils in the Public Schools under the direction of principals and teachers.

Every preparation has been completed and the directors of the different events from every school in the city report that the entertainments will be the best ever.

The following are the directors in charge of the carnival:

Over 400 school pupils will take part in the carnival. That everyone may attend popular prices for admission will prevail. All balcony seats 25 cents each; all lower floor seats 35 cents.

The advance sale and exchange of tickets purchased of pupils will begin at the box office of the Quirk on Thursday, April 27 at 4 p. m.

Barriers Couldn't Balk Strategy of City's Patrolmen

Policeman Thomas Allnut's strategy proved too much for the speed show by Charles McEwen and "Toughie" Worden early this afternoon. By adopting the ruse of separating when the officer was in hot pursuit of them, the two young men who admit having taken a quantity of brass and lead from a building of the Hunter Arms plant, were able to keep out of the meshes of the police officer temporarily.

The chase was a long one, the course pursued being over roofs, fences and other barriers in the southern end of the city near Pratt street. Thep oliceman was able to capture McEwen and after taking him to headquarters started out with Officer Brown to capture the other man. Figuring that "Toughie" would be in hiding alongside the railroad tracks in the vicinity, the officers started for that neighborhood and were just in time to see the fugitive crawl from a coal car on a sliding and dart for an open lot. Espieing the officers, he ran back to the shelter of the car and figured on getting away by running alongside a number of "empties." The two policemen had seperated and when Officer Allnut caught sight of "Toughie," the young man ran in the opposite direction, right into the hands of Brown.

Worden admitted to Chief Dyer that they had taken the metal from the Hunter plant. He also stated that he had been employed in the woolen mills up until today but had laid off. He admitted that he had a gun but sold it today. Both of the boys have been arrested before.

Japan's Gulf Stream.

The sea currents which flow along both coasts of Japan consist of a warmer current coming from the south and a colder one from the north. The former is the Kuroshio, or Black current, which takes its rise near the equator, being produced by the Pacific trade wind. It is so called from its color, which is deep indigo in fine weather, though ashy pale on cloudy days. The colder currents are the Oyashio and the Okhotsk, the former of which originates in the vicinity of the peninsula of Kamchatka and the latter near the mouth of the Amur river. The predominance of the one or the other of these currents causes a great difference in temperature.

Bandit Alive, Says Pershing; Mexicans Attacked Americans

San Antonio, Texas—Major Robert L. Howze, in command of a picked squadron of the Eleventh Calvary, wired a report from Santa Cruz, near Parral, tonight. He stated as a fact that Villa is in the mountains southwest of La Borja, or Santa Borja, which is fifty miles northwest of Parral and comparatively close to Satevo.

Major Howze sent his message by Mexican telegraph to Consul Letcher, at Chilhuahua, asking him to transmit it to General Pershing. Letcher wired it to General Funston.

Forty Carranzista soliers, including a major, were killed in the fight at Parral Wednesday, according to a detailed report made by General Pershing to General Funston.

Major Frank Tompkins, whose M and K troops of the Thirteenth Cavalry were the Americans engaged, was slightly wounded in the breast. Two Americans were killed and six wounded, including them ajor. But one Mexican civilian was killed.

Beginning as a mob demonstration against Tompkin's men, whom he had taken into Parral, the riot soon developed into a definite military action, with Carranza soldiers, led by their officers, taking the aggressive.

The mob element practically entirely disappeared from the action when 300 Carranzista soldiers of the garrison flanked the Americans out of a position they had taken behind a railroad embankment at the edge of the town.

From that time on Tompkins's men fought a rear-guard action nearly all the way to Santa Cruz, a village eight miles to the northeast. Colonel W. C. Brown came up at Santa Cruz with Major Young's squadron of the Tenth Cavalry, and late Wednesday night Major Robert L. Howze arrived from the north with his picked squadron.

Major Howze himself had a new series of actions to report. From La Borja south to near Santa Cruz he had fought several forces whom he took to be Villista men. One of his men was killed and one wounded. His encounters occurred Wednesday, also. He was unable to report whether or not any of the Mexicans were killed.

Nearly 4500 Greet Peacock First Day

ject of prayer. I wonder how many of the people in this audience are praying people? I wonder how many of us pray without ceasing? Christ said unto the people that they ought always to pray, and not to faint. Christians should be above all others distinguished as people of prayer. Christ has left us an example. We find that Jesus spent much time in prayer. After laboring hard, during the day, healing the sick, giving sight to the blind, making the lame to walk; and the dumb to speak, casting out unclean spirits and curing all manner of disease. He would go out into thed esert place and spend the whole night in prayer. He realized that if He was to have power over these things which I have mentioned, He must be much in prayer. For out of touch with God would have robbed Him of His power. This is true not only of Jesus, it is true of all the professed followers of Jesus. When we are out of touch with God, we are powerless. Shut off the electricity and we would be powerless. Remove the fire and steam from the locomotive and it would be powerless. Shut prayer out of your life and you will be powerless in the Kingdom of God. The prayerless church member is of no value in the work of the Lord. He has no power. Men receive power through prayer. For the praying man has power.

Quite frequently we get discouraged. We lose heart too easily. We think God is a long time in answering our prayers. We should not do this. In 1826 Fimey went to the city of Auburn. Owing to jealousy and false reports about his work, a large uniono f ministers and churches was formep to oppose him and prevent the spread of the revival. He writes, "I said nothing, butg ave myself to prayer. After a season of great humiliation, God assured me that He would be with me, and that no opposition should prevail." The revival soon became powerful. As he was passing through the city five years later, in broken health, a large numbeer of leading men who had opposed his work, presented a written appeal to him to preach again for their salvation. The first converts were the leaders of the opposition. Owing largely to the prevailing prayers of one man, "borne on by agony of prayer," several hundred were converted in the six weeks of his visit.

I give you these facts to show you that God does hear and answer prayer. If we want to have power for God, we must pray without ceasing. We must pray in accordance with the revealed will of God. We must have the right kind of motive. We must be guided by the Holy Spirit. We must pray in faith. God is always ready and willing to answer if we come in the right spirit. Christian friends, obey the words of Paul; "Pray without ceasing," and you will be true to your high calling and you will find mora joy and happiness in any other place.

LAY ASIDE WEIGHT

At the evening service the evangelist took for his text, Hebrews 12:1. "Let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us and letu s run with patience the race that is set before us."

"In the preceding chapter the writer discussess the nature and power of faith. He has shown clearly what has been accomplished by those who have had implicit faith in God. The argument is that in numerous instances, the saints of ancient times even under fierce trials were sustained by faith in God. It has done what nothing else could do. It has enabled them to bear, and it has shown its power in inducing men to give up at the command of God, what the human heart holds most dear.

We will never feel sorry for trying to do good. Whatever our religion may have cost us, we shall not feel that we began to serve God too early, or serve Him too faithfully. Whatever pleasure or splendid prospects we give up in order to become Christians, we shall feel that there has been more than a compensation in the consolations of religion, and in the consolations of religion, and in the hope of heaven, and that by every sacrifice we have been gainers. When we reach heaven, we shall find that we have not endured one pain too much, and that through whatever trials we have passed, the result is worth all that it has cost. Taking those that have gone before as our examples, let us go cheerfully on our way, soon the journey of trials will be ended, and soon what are now objects of faith will become objects of fruition and in their enjoyment how trifling will seem all the sorrows of our pilgrimmage below.

"nI view of what has been said in the previous chapter the apostle says: Let us lay aside every weight and sin which doeth so easily beset us, and run with patience the race that is set before us, looking to Jesus as the author and finisher of our faith, who for the joy that was set before Him, endured the cross, despising the same, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God.

The reason so many people are grouchy and miserable is because self is ruling. Oh! so many people are living for self and selfish interest. They need to see some other sights. You just forget self and selfish desires and do something for God, and for your fellow man and you will feel better and get more joy out of life.

Another thing we must lay aside is discontent. How many people are miserable in their business and in their church because of discontentment. They are dissatisfied all the time. And they make every person coming in contact with them miserable and unhappy. Now there is a discontent which is right and proper in its place because it makes us want to rise higher in our spiritual life. That kind of discontent is all right.

Then another weight wem ust lay side is pride. Pride keeps many people from serving God. Pride robs many people of their usefulness in this world. Pride goeth before destruction and a haughty spirit before a fall. Pride makes people boast of what they do. Pride makes people do things for show. You look at the life of Jesus Christ. What kind of a man was Jesus? What kind of a spirit did He manifest? Was He a proud man? No, Jesus was made of the right kind of material. He was a man with the spirit of God in His heart.

Another weight is pleasure. Now I don't want any of you to misunderstand me. I like fun and pleasure just as well as any other person. I believe in people enjoying life. We are not called upon tol ive the life of a hermit. I think the Christian people ought to be the happiest people in all the world. They ought to sing because they are happy. They ought to sing because they are alive. They shbuld know that God's eyes are on the sparrow, and they chould know that God watches and cares for His own people in this life and in the life to come.

Now, pleasure is all right. But the trouble with a whole crowd of people, is, they have no interest in anything else. Then there are different kinds of pleasure. Some pleasures are wicked and sinful in the sight of God. These should be laid aside. Anything that will be detrimental to our spiritual welfare should be laid aside. Never go any place or do anything where you can not have Jesus go with you and you would not like to have Jesus know about. Let the spirit of God guide and direct you in your pleasures and you will be kept by the power of God.

Now, we all have one besetting sin. It is one thing with one person and another thing with another. You know your and I know mine. Paul says, "The besetting sins will come again and we must fight with all our might in order to win the victory." One is insincerity. How many know the meaning of that word? The word is derived from two Latin words meaning without wax. This is true to many lives. They ore without wax. They are insincere, you can't trust them. It must be an awful thing to be so fickle and treacherous. Thew orld is full of people of this stamp and type.

CONVALESCENT CHILDREN.

How to Amuse a Child Doomed to the Bed Awhile.

A child recovering from an illness is apt to be fretful and peevish, demanding any amount of patience on the part of a mother or an attendant.

If the child is a boy modeling in clay will be found entertaining, and by helping him form different animals and houses many an irksome hour will be whiled away. If a girl, try paper flowers or paper dolls. Children also enjoy making scrapbooks. Cut attractive pictures from old colored magazines, for it should always be remembered children like bright colors. Young children can cut if they are not competent to paste.

Never let a child who is recovering from an illness sew, for it will prove tiring, the work being too intent, whereas paper clothes for dolly are sure to be enjoyed without fatigue.

A pair of toy scales and supplies, in the shape of rice, sugar, raisins and salt, to keep shop, will please a small child, and mother, of course, will do the buying.

Expensive toys are not necessary to make a child happy, for nine out of ten will prefer some simple homemade affair or an amusement they create for themselves.

That Untidy Top Drawer.

Much is gained if, instead of making linings or pads for the bureau drawers, the drawers themselves are made dainty and ready for the receptacles of articles.

First give the inside as many coats of white paint as are necessary to give a clear white tone, and then a coat of white enamel. This gives a perfectly smooth surface, which is fresher than any other lining could be.

The drawers look neat and attractive, and when cleaning is desired a simple wiping with a damp cloth produces perfect cleanliness.

The same idea could be carried out with all shelves, cupboards and drawers in the house, whether for linen, china or kitchen utensils. They are more easily cared for than when arranged with other covers. This process makes a good substitute for the highly recommended glass shelves.

Salad Supreme.

Arrange lettuce hearts on individual plates and place in the center of each one sections of oranges and celery, cut in Julienne strips. Garnish the top with chopped English walnuts and dates cut in small pieces and serve with a light mayonnaise.

GUARDED TWENTY BILLIONS.

Clerk at Treasurer's Office Has Seen Great Increase In Finances.

Major Alfred R. Quaiffe, civil war veteran and a Libby prison survivor, for fifty years an employee of the office of the treasurer of the United States and for thirty-one years the custodian of the vaults of the treasury, has recently celebrated his eightieth birthday. The position of vault clerk was created especially for Major Quaiffe, and he took the post Oct. 20, 1885, at a salary of $2,500.

In the thirty years he has served there has passed through the vaults something like $20,000,000,000. The average value of the money handled every year has increased from $168,000,000, when he took charge in 1885, to $241,000,000 in 1895, [illegible],000 in 1905 and about $1,000,000,000 for the last five years. The daily balance of cash on hand is pretty steady at $167,000,000.

SHIPPERS AND HIGHER DEMURRAGE CHARGES

Shippers of produce and others who long ago came to the conclusion that demurrage charges in New York were high enough, will be interested to learn of a plan by which the rates may go even higher. The facts as set forth by the Merchants' Association of New York are these:

"The Interstate Commerce Commission has approved an agreement between the American Railway Association and the National Industrial Traffic League, of which Mr. J. C. Lincoln, manager of the Merchants' Association's Traffic Bureau is a member, with relation to the 'average agreement' and demurrage charges. The American Railway Association had under consideration a proposal to abrogate the 'average agreement' and to increase demurrage charges from $1 to $3 and $5 a day in accordance with the length of car detention. A conference between the association and the league resulted in a decision to make no change in the average agreement' and to increase the demurrage charges from $1 the free time. The present demurrage rate of $1 per day is to apply for three days, and thereafter the charge would be $2 per day."

Very Considerate.

One rather cool evening the good minister of a certain church was eloquently addressing his congregation on the beauty of leading an upright life when he suddenly paused, glanced round the building and beckoned to the sexton.

"Jones," said he as the sexton approached the pulpit, "open a couple of windows on each side of the church, please."

"Beg your pardon, sir," returned the sexton, with a look of surprise. "Did I understand you to say open the windows?"

"Yes," was the cold, hard rejoinder of the minister. "It is not healthy to sleep with the windows shut."

Italian Staff of Life.

To those who know the Italian staff of life only in one or two forms it will come as a surprise that there are some forty-four varieties, all carefully differentiated. Neapolitan macaroni is usually made simply of household flour, well mixed, rolled flat and then shaped by various machines, but the paste may be mixed with other ingredients. Thus tagliatelli is produced by the addition of eggs, and into the composition of gnocchi potatoes, butter and cheese enter. Italian children may learn their letters and numerals from edible copies, and leaves and shells are some of the many forms which macaroni takes as biscuits do with us.—London Chronicle.

Economy Hints

A penny saved is a penny earned.—Benjamin Franklin.

GRIP is a serious disease, and persons affected with it suffer from cold in the head, fever, headache and marked backache. There are many cases with fever and prostration as the only symptoms.

Although serious, grip is not often fatal, though there may be fatal complications, of which pneumonia is the most frequent. Cold in the head alone is frequently called grip and, although usually only an annoyance to adults, may be serious in young children, causing diseases of the ear and mastoid. Tonsilitis and quinsy sore throat are also erroneously called grip. People catch these diseases by breathing into their noses and mouths the fine spray from the noses and mouths of persons who have the disease. This fine spray is produced by the act of coughing, sneezing and talking and may be carried from the affected person four or five feet through the air.

To avoid grip, colds and tonsilitis (1) keep in good physical condition, (2) get plenty of sleep with windows open, (3) avoid crowded and badly ventilated places, (4) do not get near people who have coughs and colds, (5) do not get close to people while talking, (6) keep your feet dry and (7) don't clothe too warmly and become overheated.

If you get a bad cold, sore throat or have fever (1) send for a reliable physician, (2) turn your head away from people when coughing and sneezing, (3) do not go near children, (4) do not take remedies without competent medical advice and (5) take care of a cold. Many colds develop into bronchitis or pneumonia.

FOR LIGHT HOUSEKEEPING.

How to Run Your Fireless Cooker Without Fussing.

There are a number of things which a housewife must keep carefully in mind if she is to have success with her fireless cooker and make it save her time later and expense. One is that if food is left indefinitely in the cooker it will sour. Soups, stews, vegetables and such things must be removed after twenty-four hours and less in hot weather.

Another thing is that some foods require a longer time on the fire before being put in the cooker than others do. Cereals may require only ten minutes and tough meat half an hour. It is best to find out something about the length of time the different things require before beginning to use the cooker. Generally speaking, all indigestible things require longer cooking than other things. Oatmeal, beef stew, corned beef and beans need more time than steamed puddings, rice and chicken.

A third thing that should never be forgotten is this: Everything that takes a long time to cook is improved and the process hastened if when the time is half up the pail is removed and reheated without opening it and put back again.

How to Make Cutwork, Which Is Coming In Again.

You must have at least one piece showing a cutwork design if you wish to be up to date in the needlework field. This type of fancy work is being revived very strongly and is used for cushions, runners, scarfs, etc. The work is very simply done, as it calls for nothing more than the buttonhole stitch.

Either side of the portion of material that is to be cut out is first outlined with a running stitch. It is then buttonholed, the purled edge facing inward. When you come to a place where a bar is indicated, stitch over to the other side and return on the same thread by wrapping it around and around your needle; then proceed with the over and over stitch until you come to the next bar, when you repeat. Instead of wrapping the thread around the needle many embroiderers make buttonhole stitches across each bridge so that the bridge will be firm.

How to Perfume Handkerchiefs and Lingerie Without Saturating Them.

A very clever way to perfume handkerchiefs and muslin underwear: Supply your washwoman with a good sized piece of orris root, which she is to throw into the water in which your handkerchiefs are boiling. When they come back to you from ironing they will be redolent of the orris root. Then you can slip them between the folds of a sachet filled with violet powder, and they will not lose their fragrance. Violet and orris scent together make a real violet odor.

How to Remove Warts From Children's Hands.

Touch the warts with acetic acid, being very careful not to get the acid on the surrounding skin. Lunar caustic is also recommended as a sure cure for warts. Apply the caustic with a small orange stick. Several applications may be necessary.

How to Clean Leather, Especially a Soiled Handbag.

A tablespoonful of oxalic acid dissolved in a quart of cold water cleans cowhide, pigskin and sole leather very satisfactorily. Try it on an old pair of cowhide hike boots and see.

HOW TO START A POULTRY PLANT WITH FIVE DOLLARS.—Five dollars will start anybody in the poultry business and produce profitable results if judiciously invested. The man or woman who is starting from the very beginning had better invest in twenty to twenty-five day old chicks at a cost of $3.75, leaving $1.25 for material to make a homemade fireless brooder. If twenty out of twenty-five chicks survive babyhood there will probably be twelve cockerels and eight pullets. Sell the cockerels in the summer as broilers. They will bring $1.50 a pair. Use the money received for them to purchase a good rooster of whatever breed the chickens belong to. Mate him to the eight pullets the following spring, and you should be able to raise at least 200 chickens, besides having had eggs from your pullets during the winter. They should have begun to lay in October or November, and their eggs can be sold or used on the family table until March or early April; after which time, when they are mated to the rooster, the eggs must be used for incubation only.

The following November you should have from 100 to 150 pullets and be getting fifteen or twenty dozen eggs a week, which at an average of 40 cents a dozen will bring in from $6 to $8 a week, and your little poultry plant will be firmly established on a paying basis with the promise of yielding $50 to $60 a month by the third season.

CARE OF RUGS.

How to Keep Your Floor Coverings So They Will Last.

It is inadvisable to attempt to clean valuable rugs yourself for obvious reasons, but during spring months the best way to clean rugs at home is to turn them right side down and tap them gently with a light flexible stick or piece of rubber on the wrong side and then sweep them with a dampened broom.

Do not under any circumstances use the ubiquitous vacuum cleaner on a rare rug, since it loosens the nap when drawing out the dust. Rugs should never be packed away for summer where they cannot have monthly inspection at least. The washing of rare rugs is a simple matter for the expert, but nearly impossible for the housekeeper. Never fold a handsome rug when putting it away. Roll it in sheets of newspaper and camphor between, and then wrap it in newspapers and sew it up tightly in an enveloping sheet of nonwool covering.

A WORD TO THE WISE.

How to Pass For Being Intelligent Even if You Aren't.

The most intelligent people and the most beautiful are those who see things and get all possible pleasure out of them. An exhibition of indifference to things about you is not an evidence of intelligence. Intelligent people are those whose eyes are open, and that is the way to become intelligent. Such people, also, are the most interesting, sometimes so much so that, even though they lack physical beauty, that is forgotten in admiration for their intellect.

The victim of indifference victimizes all about her. Her friends may look upon her and admire her beauty, but if she is decidedly uninteresting even a little of her society is generally an overdose.

JUST DIP 'EM.

How to Keep Your Garden Labels From Rotting and Fading.

Gardeners frequently have trouble with plant labels rotting. The labels when used in the garden are subject to wet and heat during the season, causing the portion that is in the ground to rot; the label falls over and is lost, and the gardener loses the name of the plants. A good way to preserve wooden garden labels is to soak them in a solution of sulphate of iron. Dry the labels and then soak them in a strong solution of limewater. This results in the formation of insoluble sulphate of lime in the wood and preserves the labels from rotting.

HOW TO RID THE CANARY OF VERMIN.—Sometimes a canary will droop and stop his song, his vitality preyed upon by lice almost microscopic. One of the simplest as well as the surest ways to relieve him is to hang a piece of soft muslin over his cage nights, in the morning removing the several little black dots that rest upon it. This process repeated for a week or ten days will quite rid the bird of vermin, and he will take up his song again.

How to Plant Seed to Get the Best Results.

A good rule to follow in planting seed is to put it in the ground at a depth about four times the diameter of the individual seed. If the soil is dry it should be pressed down firmly after sowing. In transplanting, also, the soil should be pressed tightly over the roots.

A Restoration

By BARBARA PHIPPS

When I was a girl of twelve I one day looked in a mirror and was struck with the difference between my appearance and that of my brothers and sisters. While they resembled one another, I looked like none of them. Their hair and eyes were black; mine was auburn. They were stocky of figure; I was taller than any of them and lithe. Besides these differences, their faces were unrefined; mine, I was pleased to notice, was rather pretty. I was also better dressed than they.

It did not exactly occur to me that I had been born of other parents, but from that time I began to suspect that there was something in me different from what was in them. When I was fourteen my mother, who was as different from me as the others, told me that I must earn by own living. At the same time she confessed that she was not my mother. She said that when I was a baby I had been given to her to be taken care of, and up to that time a certain sum of money had been paid her regularly for my keep and a specific amount to be spent on my clothes. These payments had been stopped, and this was why I must shift for myself.

Since the day I looked in the glass and discovered the difference between me and the others of the family I gradually lost whatever of affection I had felt for them. When therefore she whom I had supposed to be my mother informed me that I must earn my own living I was content to leave them. I found a position as nursemaid for a little boy two years old and lived in the house where I was employed.

The mother of my charge was kind to me, and one day I told her my story. She was very sympathetic and told me that my experience, together with my appearance and a native refinement there was in me, led her to believe that I was the child of persons of the upper class. This is all she said to me. I wondered if she would not offer to help me find my parents, but she did not. When I spoke of trying to find them she said that it would be like hunting for a needle in a haystack, especially since they did not wish to be found. Were this not so they would seek me. The fact that my allowance had been cut off was especially discouraging.

Had it not been for this last mentioned fact I believe I should have made an effort to find those of my own flesh and blood, though I don't know how I could have made a beginning. As it was, I was obliged to be content with my lot. The only objection to it was that I had a feeling in me that I had been born in a higher sphere than that of nursemaid.

One day when I was seventeen years old my supposed mother came to see me and told me that a great change had taken place with regard to me. She was commissioned to take me to my parents.

"But," she said, "they don't know where you are, and it depends upon me whether you reach them or not. If you go to them you will be rich and can afford to pay me for what I do for you. Here is a note for $10,000, due when you come of age, a year from now. If you will sign it I will not only return you to your parents, but will furnish the evidence that you are their child."

I referred the matter to the father of my charge, and he said that it seemed best that I should sign it. I being a minor, it would not be legal anyway. I signed the note, and the same day the woman drove with me to a handsome house, and on entering I was received by a lady who took me in her arms and wept over me. I had become used to noticing my appearance in contrast with those of my own supposed station, and no sooner did I see this lady than I knew by my resemblance to her that she was my mother. Her hair and mine were the same shade of auburn.

Later a gentleman came and took me on his lap and caressed me. He was my father.

It was many years before I got all the reasons for my having been put in charge of the family with whom I grew up. My father made a clandestine marriage with one to whom his parents were opposed. Soon after I was born my father consented to abjure his wife, and I, when born, was hustled off without its being known to my grandparents that my mother had been married or I born to her. My parents agreed to all this, expecting that it would be temporary. But my grandparents were relentless, and my parents, becoming poorer and poorer, at last were unable to remit my allowance. My grandfather was finally taken ill and on his deathbed relented. He had left his money to charity, but at the last moment changed his will, leaving the property to his son.

Immediately after his death my parents sought me. It turned out that my supposed mother had received $10,000 for my return. The fact that I had also been forced to pay the same amount was not pleasing to my father, and he threatened to prosecute the woman for fraudulent conduct unless she surrendered the note I had signed. This she did.

For a long while after the great change in my life I could no nothing but think about my newborn happiness, and it seemed that my father and mother were bent on making up the many years they had been deprived of their child by the affection they lavished on me.

All this occurred many years ago. I am now happily married.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

BREAKFAST RELISHES.

ENGLISH MUFFINS.—A quart of flour, a teaspoonful of salt, two large teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one and a quarter pints of milk. Sift together flour, sugar, salt and powder. Add milk and mix into smooth batter a trifle stiffer than for griddle cakes. Have griddle heated regularly all over, grease it and lay on muffin rings, half fill them and when risen well up to the top of rings turn over gently with cake turner. They should not be too brown, just a buff color. When all cooked pull each open in half, toast delicately, butter well, serve hot on folded napkin.

Nut Bran Muffins.—Mix together a cupful of bran flour, half a cupful of white flour, two teaspoonfuls of sugar, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, half a teaspoonful of salt and a cupful of finely chopped nut meats. Add one and a half tablespoonfuls of melted butter, moisten with sweet milk, beat thoroughly, drop from a spoon, allowing space between each, and bake in a moderate oven.

Rice Waffles.—Rice waffles served with strained honey or maple sirup are a delicious cold weather luncheon dessert. To make them rub a cupful of cold boiled rice through a fine sieve, add a teaspoonful and a half of soft butter and a tablespoonful of sugar. Sift together a cupful of flour and a teaspoonful and a half of baking powder with half a teaspoonful of salt. Add this, with two egg yolks and milk enough to make a thin batter, to the rice; then fold in the white of the eggs, beaten stiff and bake in greased waffle irons.

Gluten Gems.—A pint of gluten flour, a pint of milk, an egg, a fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Mix the flour and salt, beat the egg, add the milk and stir into the dry mixture. Add the baking powder, beat well, fill greased gem pans two-thirds full and bake in a quick oven.

Soda Biscuits.—Sift a quart of flour with a heaping teaspoonful of soda, adding a pinch of salt. Take a piece of lard or butter the "size of a fist" and rub into the flour and soda. Then wet with sour milk until the dough is soft enough to roll out. Cut out the biscuits and set in hot pans, leaving room between, and bake in a very hot oven. Do not mix or handle any more than is necessary and you will have flaky biscuits.

HOW TO PROVIDE FOR THE FIREPLACE AND ITS ATTRACTIVENESS.

Suitable andirons are not always easy to find, and frequently one sees a beautiful fireplace spoiled in appearance because it has been supplied with andirons and accessories out of proportion and of an inappropriate style.

Sometimes to a luxurious big living room is given a pair of little old time andirons which would do exactly for a cosy colonial bedroom, while small fireplaces are often thoughtlessly furnished with huge, heavy, modern andirons.

For rooms done in a quaint old time style of furnishing some of the reproductions of the Hessian designs of andirons painted in gay colors are good.

A complete set of fireplace furnishings may include an old brass fender with claw feet, a pair of steeple topped andirons, shovel, tongs and heavy rings to hold them to the jamb of the fireplace. Such a set would fit well in a modern colonial house.

Interior decorators say that a fireplace is not complete without a brass roaster and corn popper. The latter are on the style of the old time bed warmers. Several extremely well appointed fireplaces, strictly suited to the quaint environment of the room, have the copper bed warmer and the copper trimmed bellows hanging on a carved copper hook at the side.

Brass kettles in odd design hanging on a crane, flat toasters of brass and the long adjustable handled marshmallow forks are shown this season.

A HYGIENE NOTE.

How to Clear the Complexion Without Dosing Your System.

A glass of hot lemonade taken night and morning is a good thing to clear the complexion. Squeeze half a lemon into a tumblerful of boiling water, sweeten very slightly and drink as soon as it is cool enough.

Another thing a girl with a muddy complexion should do is to have a quick all over soap and water wash every morning with very hot water and then a sponge down with cold, ending up with a good rub with a rough towel.

As to food, don't eat rich, highly seasoned things. Light homemade pastry doesn't hurt; neither do plain cakes, but don't go in for tinned salmon and lobster, curry or rich, heavy cakes, and don't drink much coffee or cocoa.

Now, as to the way to treat your face itself: If your skin is really very thick and muddy it is an excellent thing to wash it every night at bedtime with very hot water and "green soap." Lather your face well and you will find the soap brings away blackheads and is most cleansing, but it is only suitable for really thick skin. It is apt to irritate a fine or thin skin.

Let the soap remain on a few minutes, then rinse it off in very hot water.

In the morning sponge your face with cold water and then wipe it over with eau de cologne and water or a little camphor and water.

How to Avoid Nervousness In This Rackety Age.

No one can help feeling nervous at times in this age of rush and racket, but every woman should remember that the more she controls this feeling the longer she will retain her beauty. It is quite possible to put on the brake, as it were, and not let the nerves run away with us. If people fret you it is not necessary to be rude to them. Try instead to avoid them.

Don't read books that irritate you. Books are plentiful. Therefore put away the offending volume and choose another. If a noise at night worries you don't let it continue to do so. Get up and see to the matter and put it right.

Don't let yourself get into the habit of being bored. It is not worth while. When you feel it coming on [illegible] at once into some task that w[illegible] your time and energy. I[illegible] better run away from certain things than let them irritate you.

How to Provide a Suitable Recepta For Soiled Linen.

A wicker hamper is perhaps the ideal laundry container. But it must be kept clean. One enameled white looks so clean that it is hard to remember that it may harbor impurities, even germs. It must be washed in hot water occasionally and dried in the sunshine, and then occasionally it can be further refreshed with a clean coat of enamel.

How to Remove White Spots on Your Pet Mahogany Furniture.

The white spots which hot dishes often leave on tables and other wooden surfaces can be removed by applying a mixture composed of equal parts of alcohol, olive oil and pure cider vinegar. Shake well before using. Rub well with a woolen cloth and polish with another soft woolen cloth.

How to Mend a Lace Curtain Without Large Expense.

A simple way to mend lace curtains after cleaning them is to take a small piece of old lace curtain or net the size of a hole, dip it in a little cold starch and place on the curtain to be mended; then press with a hot iron. It does not show it was mended.

WHY HUSBANDS LEAVE.

What Statistics Show About Wife Deserters.

Why do so many husbands run away?

A statistician connected with the bureau of public welfare has been trying to answer the question.

After investigating thousands of cases of desertions he finds that the husband's action can usually be ascribed to one of the following causes:

Ill health and peevishness of the wife.

Slouchiness of the wife either in her own person or in her housekeeping methods or both.

The wife's habit of nagging or gossiping.

Dislike for children on the wife's part.

This statistician found that the strongest incentive to reconciliation in cases of family discord is almost invariably the child. He also found that very few wives are deserted who are—

Physically well and mentally cheerful.

Able to contribute to the family income either by outside labor or by frugality in home management.

Affectionate and home loving.

Sympathetic and considerate of their husbands.

The very interesting and valuable statistics which he collected prove that native American husbands are more prone to desert their wives than are the foreign born.

They also show that married life is the happiest when husband and wife are nearly alike in age, nationality, religion, moral standards, temperament, health and physical strength.

Mohair For Spring.

Mohair and worsted mixture is a fabric peculiarly suited for spring wear. It is light, cool, has a lustrous, silky sheen and because of its springy texture is perfect for the new flaring skirt and cape coat. Mulberry is a new color, which is especially glowing and soft in the mohair and worsted weave, and the new Bolling green is notably rich and distinguished in this material.

A Lanvin frock shows green mohair and worsted in stitched bands on a skirt of green georgette crape. The close bodice buttons straight down over the bust with white pearl buttons, and the long bishop sleeves are of the green crape with white satin cuffs. The collar is of white satin veiled with green georgette crape.

New Use For Peanuts.

Here is a new use for peanuts. Says a doctor: "Eat a handful of peanuts before retiring. They quiet the nerves of the stomach." What do you think about that? Isn't that a rather interesting sleeping potion? Then we are also told to eat them after each meal as an aid to digestion, provided they are fresh roasted. Bought salted peanuts are good, but homemade ones are better. So easily prepared, it is a wonder more people do not try them.

HOW TO CROCHET A PRETTY SILK PURSE.

Material required: Half ounce crochet silk, dark green or red, 1 hank steel or gold beads, No. 10, steel crochet hook, No. 18. Make a chain (ch) of 35, work 1 treble crochet (tc) 1 ch into the 4th ch from the hook. Repeat with 3 ch and work * 1 tc, 1 ch into each space between the tc stitches of last row and repeat from * to end of row. Work 5 more of these rows, break off the silk and make a second piece to correspond. In the 8th row of the second stitch join to the first with a single stitch and commence to work around with 3 ch. Work 3 rounds in the same manner, joining each with a single stitch. At the place where the two sides are joined one will be higher than the other. After the 4th round is joined work one round thus: * 3 d c, 4 ch, miss 3, repeat from * to end of round; end 1 dc. Break off thread and string the beads on to the silk with which you will continue.

From this point you will begin the beading. The rounds of beading are worked * 1 d c into the last stitch of the group of chain of previous round, 1 d c into the next d c, leaving 1 d c of last round not worked into; repeat from * all around. This will make a diagonal strip of solid crochet. For working in the beads draw the silk through once in each d c, then draw a bead close up to the hook before finishing the stitch. The beads will be on the inside of the work, i. e., on the opposite to that on which you are working, and will follow the diagonal strip. Work 13 rounds in this way and then 2 rounds of 3 ch, 2 d c, 1 round of 2 ch, 2 d c, 1 round of ch, 1 d c and draw up for the end of purse. When finished turn the beading side outward. Sew the two sides of the mouth on a pair of cross bars with a ring and drop for the other end of the purse.

FOR THE HORSEWOMAN.

How to Ride Horseback Even if You Aren't a Cowboy.

In riding sit erect and don't slouch along. Don't try to be a cowboy if you are not. We have the real simon pure cowpunchers and broncho busters, also we have the tinborn variety of the same species. Steer clear of the latter; also be careful not to get into this category yourself.

Remember that a horse is only flesh and blood and not an auto. He gets tired and thirsty, and for goodness sake treat him accordingly. Because he is a livery horse and you are paying his hire treat him white just the same. Remember that some one else rode him yesterday and another will probably do so tomorrow. Give your horse the same kind of a deal you yourself would demand if you were in its place; even a broncho has "feelin's" and will appreciate your thoughtfulness.—Outlook.

How to Make a Unique Dust Cloth For the "Shower."

The next time you are invited to a novelty shower in honor of a bride to be or a bachelor girl who is getting ready for a two room apartment have ready a two in one gift. By this is meant a duster and glove combined. Buy a piece of cheesecloth measuring twelve inches square and then get another about eight inches square. Featherstitch the smaller to the larger piece, allowing one side to remain unattached. Trace the outline of some one's right hand on the little piece of cheesecloth and stitch along the lines directly through the two pieces. By slipping the hand in the fingers thus formed the neat little housekeeper can dust her furniture and protect her hand with the one article.

Should this gift seem insufficient you might make a bag of dark green calico. Make it fifteen inches long and nine inches wide. Finish it with a casing and run green tape through it. Across the front of it outline the word "Duster" with yellow cotton.

How to Make Clam Broth That Is Delicious For Luncheons.

A delicious clam broth may be easily prepared by the following methods: Scrub and rinse the whole clams until the shells are bright and clean. Place on the bottom of the cook pot, hinge side up and close together. Cover about half the height of the clams with cold water and bring to the boil, when the clams will open and discharge their juices. Strain and serve. A little pepper and butter will improve the flavor.

How to Beat an Egg Quickly Without the Fuss of Whipping it.

Break the egg into an ordinary glass tumbler. Place a piece of clean tissue paper on the top. Hold it firmly down all round to keep out the air. Place the other hand on the top of the paper and shake the tumbler vigorously two or three times. The egg is then ready to use without any further effort and is as well beaten as if whipped for ten minutes.

How to Make Quince Marmalade For Breakfast Rolls.

Quince marmalade is made by grating or grinding the peeled and cored quinces fine; then to one cupful of quince pulp add two cupfuls of water and two and a half of sugar. Boil an hour, stirring often, and then pour into jelly glasses.

STYLE TIPS.

About Capes, Frills, Scarfs, Ribbons and Other Frivolities.

Skirts are to be longer, if we are to believe a certain rumor which comes from Paris—not very long, but not quite so abbreviated as they have been for some time. Some of the evening gowns, on the other hand, are closely draped and clinging, falling in at the feet with narrow pointed trains, and as different as possible from the fluffy skirted creations which we are now wearing.

Then the new lingerie is very fascinating, but not a single scrap of lace is to be used for decorating it by those who wish to be really up to date. Silk, ninon and crepe de chine have taken the place of lawn and cambric and are simply ornamented with very fine hemstitching or silk embroidery and rows of handwork in faggot or chain stitch or buttonholed slots for inserting ribbon. Flesh pink is still the most popular color or an exquisite shade of pale parma violet mauve.

For afternoon frocks there is a distinct tendency to copy old fashioned modes, such as the styles of 1830 and the latter part of the eighteenth century. Silk gowns are made with panniers very much looped up at the sides and back over contrasting underskirts. The sleeves will be close fitting for afternoon frocks, with a little puff at the top, while for evening dresses they are made with a tiny puff all by itself.

Tailor mades are completed with little capes across the shoulders or falling down the center of the back as far as the waist line. Most fascinating of all perhaps are the quaint neck ruffles in velvet or taffetas that make such a pretty frame to the face. These will be designed to suit the particular gown and will have a tiny bunch of flowers or a bow of colored ribbon in one of the old fashioned shades, such as sevres blue or vieille rose, attached to one side.

Long ninon or taffeta scarfs are also designed to match the various frocks, often in black, lined with a contrasting shade and bordered with a narrow ribbon ruching or embroidered with sprays and wreaths of small flowers in silks and ribbon work. Anything, indeed, that gives a suggestion of the days of long ago is a feature of the newest design.

Copper Dishcloth.

Among the cleaning agents there are two recent additions to the list that are well worth while. One is the copper wire dishcloth, which comes in three sizes, for the cleaning of pots and pans and is much more effective than the chain cloths, as it does not chip or crack the enamel. The other is steel wool; this comes in a roll, and a little bit pulled off, which has the feeling of a bunch of horsehair and looks not unlike it, will clean enamel ware perfectly simply by rubbing it over the surface. It may also be used for brasses and glassware. Use with it a non-alkali soap, if any, and always rinse the article and polish with a dry cloth after it is cleaned.

Pleasant Prospect.

"Yo' ain't stopped at de Palace hotel befo', is yo', boss?" inquired the colored man who was piloting a just arrived traveler from the railway station to the hostelry.

"No. But what makes you sure of it?"

"Unkase yo' gwine dar now, sah."—Puck.

A MODEL TOPCOAT.

One of the Newest Designs For Spring Utility.

All the latest dictates of fashion are observed by this topcoat of deep buff broadcloth cut with a cape and all fullness shirred at the hips. Please observe how plain the front and back hang. The novelty buttons match the smart buckle on the collar, and the trim brown turban takes a little bunch of crab apples in front.

"Really, I don't know. It never was before I got married. If it has been since I of course would have no way of finding out about it."—Chicago Herald.

Splendor of Venus.

Venus is the most brilliant of all the planets. When east of the sun she appears in the west after sunset, but when near the western elongation she gives only matinee performances before sunrise. Through the telescope she presents much the appearance of burnished silver without spot or blemish. So dazzling is she that astronomers have been able to discover little concerning our neighbor, except that she is surrounded by an atmosphere filled with clouds, making it doubtful whether any view of the solid body of the planet can ever be obtained. Even through that veil she is sometimes so bright as to cast a distinct shadow.—London Telegraph.

BROWN BILL PASSES; WOULD GIVE CITIES GREATER HOME RULE

Albany—By a vote of 30 to 10, the Senate has passed the proposal of Majority Leader Brown, intended to amend the Constitution by authorizing the Legislature to confer greater home rule powers on city governments. Minority Leader Wagner made an unsuccessful attempt to substitute the Mills proposal which was recommended by the State Conference of Mayors and which would write into the Constitution the specific grants of power the municipalities are seeking. His motion was defeated 11 to 22. On the vote on final passage of the Brown proposal, Senators Carswell, Cullen, Dunnigan, Greiner, Hamilton, Joseph Patten, Ramsperger, Simpson and Wagner, Democrats and Bennett, Republican voted negatively.

Albany—Not a Democrat voted for the Horton state constabulary bill which passed the Senate last night, 26 to 11. Minority Leader Wagner attacked the measure as the foundation for the beginning of a political machine. The negative votes were cast by Senators Caswell, Cullen, Dunnigan, Hamilton, Joseph, Patten, Simpson and Wagner. Democtats, and Jones, Lawson, and Lockwood, Republicans, Senators Argetsinger, Burlingame, Christman, Halliday, Mullan, G. T. Thompson and Walters, Republican, and Boylan, Carroll, Doll, Foley, Heffernan, Sullivan and Walker, Democrats, were not recorded. The measure carries an appropriation of $250,000 for the expenses of forming a state constabulary on the plan now in operation in Pennsylvania.

Albay—A resolution providing for the final adjournment of the present session of the Legislature on Thursday at noon, was adopted by Senate and Assembly last night amid the applause of the members. Democrats on both sides took the adoption of the resolution as an opportunity to joke the Republicans good naturedly.

In Assembly when the adjournment question was put many of the Democrats voted in the negative. In the Senate Minority Leader Wagner congratulated the Republicans upon the adoption of the resolution.

"It's the best thing you have done this year," Wagner declared, but before he could proceed with his remarks the President's gavel cut him short.

U. S. TROOPS RETREAT MORE THAN 50 MILES

ElPaso, Tex.—American troops in Southern Chilhuahua have retreated more than fifty miles northward owing to evidences of increased hostility on the part of Mexicans toward the pursuers of Francisco Villa and lack of supplies. This information which came from reliable sources, reached military authorities at Fort Bliss today. Mexican animosity is now preventing the United States troops from purchasing food that they were able to get with American gold in Northern Chilhuahua.

4 CHARRED BODIES TAKEN FROM WRECK

Westerly, R. I.—The bodies of four victims, charred almost beyond recognition, were taken early today from the smouldering ruins of the local express into which plowed the Gilt-Edge Flyer, splitting open the rear car of thel ocal and trapping the thirty or more passengers in that car last night.

The search was continued as rapidly as the cooling of the ruins would permit, in the fear that more bodies were hidden in the blackened wreckage.

G. C. CHAUNCEY ASKS DAMAGES

Wants $115,000 for Land Seized by State---Was Valuable as Water Power Site.

Syracuse—Two large claims went on trial yesterday in different parts of the Court of Claims, while the defense to the Battle Island Paper compan's for $1,875,000 continued before Judges Ackerson and Fennell.

George G. Chauncey of Fulton asked $115,000 for a lot six-tenths of an acre in size that is situated on the bank of the Oswego river on a firm rock foundation. The claim is being tried before Judge Paris by Attorneys Piper & Rice of Fulton. The valuation on the land is made because of its foundation and its proximity to water power and manufacturing district. Archie C. Ryder is the deputy attorney general contesting the claim.

On account of the presence of an oil well on Horace W. Knight's property in Seneca Falls, $100,000 damages is asked by the executors of his estate, Willis G. and Horace D. Knight. The property also has three houses, valued with the land at $15,000. The oil well is valued at $85,200.

One of Series of Claims

The Knight claim is one of a series of similar claims being introduced by Attorneys Hogan, Byrne & Byrne of this city before Judge Webb. E. F. Schepp, a real estate expert, was the first witness. The claim is being contested by Deputy Attorney General Frank K. Cook.

In the state's defense of the Battle Island Paper company's claim, August Richter, a paper manufacturer from Northnumberland, N. H., was put on the stand as an expert shortly before noon. In the forty minutes thot he testified before the close of the morning session he condemned the the water power as worth less for the manufacture of sulphite because it fluctuated so much near the plant. In view of the conditions, he said, thew ater power had only a speculative value that would vary according to the use it was to be put to from $20,$000 or $25,000 to $50,000 or $60,000.

With trade conditions as they were at the time of the appropriation, Mr. Richter said that the mill could not have been run at a profit even with steam or electric power because the cost of manufacture was greater than the selling price. This testimony was all in answer to qestions of Deputy Attorney Generals Edward J. Mone and Sanford W. Smith, and will be subjected to cross-examination.

Stewart Cross-examined

L. B. Stewart of Watertown, who was the State's trade expert, was grilled by Charles E. Spencer and George W. Driscoll in cross eramination for two hours. They developed the fact that his conclusions were based upon his experience in one mill in Michigan and not upon a general survey of the paper industry.

Judge Cunningham heard the claim of Gilbert Dreer of the town of Schroeppel, Oswego county, for $250 damages for the overflow of the Oneida river on his farm bordering Scott's swamp. The claim was made through Attorney Ira P. Betts.

BATTLE ISLAND WINS ON APPEAL

A decision has been received in the panies involved and that it might be bankruptcy of the Hunter Brothers Paper company against Frank B. ## SHOULD LIVE UP TO TRADITION

The Borrowed Timers Given Glimpses of What Is In a Name by a New Minister.

The men of The Borrowed Time Club met at the Presbyterian church, Monday afternoon. The address was given by Rev. F. N. Darling, pastor of the Baptist church. His topic was "The Wise se of Time." Part of his address is given here:

You men are living, as the very name of your organization implies, on what is called "borrowed time;" time which you had no real right to expect would be given you. Time appears very differently to you now than it did when you were boys, sixty or seventy years ago. And because you take a different view of it, it means more to you than it did then.

Perhaps the gift we most easily and most generally misuse and leave unused is time. None of us use it as economically as we do our money. Some people are by no means economical or frugal in their use of money; but if we would be as careful to make good use of our days as we do of our dimes and our dollars, we should get far more done than we do.

Times goes very rapidly. Almost before the year seems to have started we find ourselves saying goodby to it: the beginning and the end are very close together. And the plans we make and the purposes we have in mind when the year begins we somehow fail to work out before the year comes to ts close. The reason that we make so little headway is not that our intentions are not good; but largely because we are so prone to put oc till tomorrow what does not absolutely insist on being done today.

Time is the most valuable possession we have. It ought to be out most valued possession, but unfortunately it is not, except when some crisis comes. It is our most valuable possession berause the way we use it determines the trend of our lives. Your life isdifferent from mine and one man is a carpenter, one a farmer, one a doctor, and one a business man; and all according to the way their spend their time.

And looking at life from the standpoint of character, we find again that it is our use of time that tells the story. What we are today, we are in large measure because of the way in which iut time has been spent. One man is tricky and sellsh, unscrupulous and underhanded; and his neighbor is the exact opposite. What makes them so different? Largely, the way they have spent their time. They have developed that particular brand of character by living one day at a time in just that way. Each day has been a brick in the building of the life.

Boys grow up into a manhood which is worthy or unworthy, mainly according to the way they spend their time. I do not believe that most boys who go wrong do so because they are bad at heart, but just because they are veritable dynamos; and the energy and the life which is pent up in them must have vent and must express itself somehow. It is my firm conviction that if we who are older would see to it that places and means are provided for boys to use in right ways their God-given animal spirits and their natural boyish energy, nine out of every ten boys who are now heading in the wrong direction might be saved to lives of real worth and usefulness.

Character, which after all is the man himself, is formed slowly. It is a process not of revolution, but of evolution, of growth and development. How true those words, "As the twig is bent, the tree's inclined."

"For the structures that we raise
Time is with material filled:
Our todays and yesterdays
Are the blocks with which we build"

Time is our most valuable posses-

FRENCH REPULSE ANOTHER STRONG GERMAN ATTACK

Again the Germans have launched a powerful infantry attack against the French positions extending from the River Meuse to Douaumont and again they have been swept back, except where they obtained a footing in a small part of the Chauffour wood, by the guns of the French. Heavy casualties were inflicted on the attacking forces along the two and a half mile battlefront.

The Germans have kept up their heavy shelling of Hill No. 304, northwest of Verdun and the second line of the French in this region, probably with the intention of again throwing their infantry forward in an endeacor to capture these important points—keys to the Verdun position on the west.

Elsewhere along thel ines held by the French there have been only bombardments and mining operations. Numerous German positions have been bombed by French aircraft.

On the British front in Belgium and France the heavy bombardments by the British and Germans continue unabated. The artillery activity in the sector between Saint Eloi and the Yyres-Comines canal has been especially marked.

The Germans have poured shells on the Russian positions along the Divina river at the Ikskull bridgehead and about Dvinsk and vigorous artillery duels have been in progress in thel ake region south of Dvinsk.

In Galicia along the Stripa river the Teutons have made several attempts against Russian trenches, but all of them were repulsed, according to Petrograd.

The big guns on both sides are in action along most of the Austro-Italian front. In the Sugana valley the Austrians delivered attacks against the Italians from the Largensea torrent to Mont Callo, but they were everywhere repulsed.

In Asiatic Turkey the Russians on the Black sea coast have captured the town of Surmeneh and pushed westward against the retreating Turks to Arsene Kelessi, less than twelve miles from the important fortified town of Trebizond.

The Russians are anticipating no easy conquest of Trebizond, according to unofficial advices from Petrograd, the town having been, heavily fortified and reinforced with three complete divisions of troops. The Turks are declared to be resisting furiously the onward press of the Russians against Baiburt, northwest of Erzerum, in the attainment of which the Russians hope to join hands with their men fighting in the Black Sea littoral.

The British government hereafter will regulate the shipments of American packing houses to all neutral European countries for the period of the war, according to aan aggreement reached between the government and the packers in the settlement of the cases arising from the seizure of Great Britain of cargoes of packers products.

PROGRESSIVE CITIES

The beautifying of a city is a movement that grows greater each year. A few years ago the people who advocated the planting of flowers for the benefit of the community were looked upon as "queer." Today live wires in every community recognize the commercial value of a clean, beautiful city.

Cincinnati, Ohio, ranks as one of the foremost cities in this line of progress. The Garden Club of Cincinnati. Recently this club placed on sale 6000 rambler rosebushes and in less than a day were sold out. A second supply was secured. A recent newspaper clipping states:

"The work of the Garden Club is bringing excellent results, especially the plans for beautification of the highways in this country. Along Wooster pike, one of the principal highways leading into this city, rosebushes have been planted in great abundance for a distance of several miles. The bushes are in such number as to make the thoroughfare a vertiable lane through flower land when the blooms begin to come "This is but the beginning of the campaign," Mrs. Samuel Taft, president of the club, explains. "We expect to do similar work on all the main highways leading in to this city."

The club has extended its activities to several other directions. Announcement has been made that the club will furnish expert advice on the planting and care of plants to any amateur gardener asking for it. Education in the planting of trees also has been taken up. The club seeks to make owners of property realize that quick growing trees are not always the most desirable. In laying out subdivisions and streets, especially, does the club wish to improve the selections. Such trees as the sweet gum, the pin oak, the Schmerler maple or the tulip are fostered by the Garden Club.

There was a time when electric signs set at the city's entrance endeavored to beam a welcome upon the visitors of the city. Today the keen-eyed visitant will note that a community of people who are so alive as to beautify its highways with flowers and shrubbery must be a thinking, acting, community.

Aside from the added commercial value, the beauty of a city has also another, and perhaps not a lesser side.

THE CHAMPION DUCK

The glory of Lady Eglantine is dimmed. That marvellous hen, who attained world-wide fame and a valuation of $10,000 by laying 315 eggs in one year, has been outdone—and by a quacking duck. A duck, too, of no particular pedigree and not groomed with elaborate care. Just a plain Rouen duck named Peggy, belonging to Mrs. R. C. Banister of Newark, N. J., to whom she came as a gift intended for Thanksgiving dinner.

Peggy's performance is a sort of relay race—and how she can relay! She started in on January 12, 1915, and produced an egg every day for 85 days. Then, after ten days of threatening to "set," she got back on the job and laid regularly for 90 days. From July 16 until July 26 she rested, and then laid steadily until December 23, 150 days. She had then made a world's record of 325 eggs in twenty-two days less than a year. She took a month off, and went at it again on January 26, and at last report was still laying unweariedly.

MAKING HIMSELF UNPOPULAR

As a first step in his self-imposed task of "educating business" Mr. William C. Redfield, Secretary of Commerce, has undertaken to expose what he describes as the hopeless inefficiency of American corporations. The great majority of these, Mr. Redfield asserts, conduct their affairs in an unbusinesslike way, most of them having no idea of production cost and other matters deemed essential to business success.

Apparently, though Mr. Redfield does not say it in so many words, the only really efficient corporations are those which it is part of the democratic stock in trade to denounce as wicked "trusts." By anticipating Mr. Redfield's advice these children of iniquity have grown and prospered, only to become targets for demagogism.

Mr. Redfield's exposure of the fact that their efficiency is the principal crime of the hated "trusts" will not please Mr. Bryan and his trust baiting chorus. Nor will it particularly please the government ownership branch of the present administration —which seems to mean the whole administration.

Lor it is notorious that of all corporations in the land the least efficient is the American government, to which they would entrust the conduct of all branches of business.—N. Y. Herald.

THE TRIBUNE'S POSITION

Newspaper men watching the recent career of the New York Tribune are not surprised that it has declared for the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt by the republican convention. It is good business judgment and reflects credit on the counting room if not entirely ethical in a newspaper sense. The Tribune, through some bad management somewhere, fell from its high estate and reached a low circulation. It saw rival metropolitan papers going ahead of it on every hand and it has been rather feverish in its activities to regain lost ground by using new ideas and has succeeded very well. No other New York paper was supporting Mr. Roosevelt, though, undoubtedly there were great many Roosevelt followers, and so the Tribune seeks to gather them in to increase its circulation, even if it has to eat all its professed sentiment of four years ago. No doubt those responsible for the conduct of the Tribune are moved by a conviction of the legitmacy of the new departure, but, neverthless, the paper's accuracy as a weather vane will be looked forward to with some interest. If it has struck it right and indicated accurately which way the wind blows, it can take a great deal of satisfaction in its course. At any rate, there was an open field and it has taken possession of it.—Watertown Times.

THE "HOLD THE LINE" NUISANCE

One of the telephone companies, which welcome suggestions from outsiders regarding improvements in service, recently received a letter containing the following utterances:

"In my opinion nothing is so great a source of annoyance to telephone users, nothing results in so great a loss of temper and time, as the inconvenience of being called to the telephone and then having an office boy or the office telephone girl tell you to 'hold the wire' until the calling party is ready to talk. If there's waiting to be done it's the calling party's obligation to do it."

Almost every telephone subscriber has suffered the inconience which is the subject of this just complaint. It is natural enough for an occupied man to give to a subordinate the task of obtaining desired telephone connections, especially when calling a number that frequently is "busy," but he should remember that the time of the person called may be quite as valuable as his own. It is certainly the height of discourtesy to "call" a subscriber and then by unnecessary delay to encroach upon histime. The proper way to deal with this telephonic nuisance is to wait a reasonable interval and then "hang up."—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

BIBLICAL MASTERPIECE AT THE QUIRK TODAY

In presenting to the public this wonderful representation of the life of Christ, we wish to point out a few facts in connection with its production. The tremendous undertaking entered upon by the producers of this great film, which contains about eighty thousand photographs, has required eight months of artistic industry, the employment of specialists in authoritative research, forty actors, hundreds of supernumeraries, droves of sheep and a caravan of camels — a kaleidoscopic procession. No effort nor expenditure has been spared to achieve the relization of a high ideal.

All of the many authorities upon the subject were consulted and the works of the late Dr. Schick and Tissot, the great French painter, who spent twelve years in the Holy Land when he was painting his remarkable series of religious pictures, were found most helpful. The furniture used in the various scenes was especially made to resemble, as far as possible, that used at the start of the Christian era, while the apparel of the various actors was designed by and made under the direction of a tailor of Cairo, who is considered the greatest expert on ancient Eastern dress. This man went especially to Palestine to cooperate with the producers.

The setting of the temple scenes was build according to the details given in Dr. Schlick's works, and it is typical of the thoroughness with which the taking of this film was carried out, that a building which had taken a month to erect, was pulled down after a scene lasting ten minutes had been pictured therein.

AUTO-BUS MAKES FIRST JOURNEY

City Officials Guests of Proprietors of Fulton-Hannibal Transit Company.

The initial trip of the new 16-passenger bus which was placed in the Hannibal-Fulton passenger service by the Wilson & Scott Company this morning, was made yesterday afternoon, city officials and business men enjoying a ride in the new vehicle as guests of the Wilson & Scott Company.

The party received a hearty welcome, at Hannibal where a stop of half an hour was made. The villagers gathered around the car, viewing it with much interest. The start was made from the City Hall here at 2 o'clock, returning at 4. Upon the return a photograph was made by D. S. Hollenga, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce.

Without a doubt the new vehicle will prove popular as a means of making excursions. Rough spots in the road are passed over by the big wheels without any amount of jar. Conversation may be carried on by passengers without annoyance. As soon as the car reaches a speed of 20 miles an hour, an automatic control which is sealed, shuts off the power. In going down hill, the car will pick up speed, but upon reaching a speed of 20 miles an hour it will be slowed up by the safety mechanism.

Yesterday's guests were: Mayor Lewis, Aldermen E. O. Baker and Robert McKay; Superintendent of Public Works Rumsey, D. S. Hollenga, John J. Jordan, W. J. Scott, Myron Freedman, F. W. Richardson, J. W. Gillard and Theodore J. Wilson.

AUBURN CONVICT IS PURSUED

Well Known Here As Desperate Character---Chief Dyer and Force In Quest of Amos Parker.

A photograph and information and carrying a description of Amos Parker, escaped convict from Auburn prison, reached police headquarters here yesterday. Parker is well known to the local police, having been arrested on several occasions in the past. He was born in Oswego, and has always given thep olice in this vicinity trouble. He has served three terms for burglary.

Four years ago when Chief Dyer, with Patrolmen Fox and Pare, went after Parker and a pal in the vicinity of the E-Z Opener Bag company's plan. Parker showed his desperate character by firing at the officers immediately upon sighting them. Plenty of bullets were exchanged, the two men firing from the shelter of foliage, shrubbery and other growth, through which they were eventually able to make their escape. Another time Parker and Officer Fox "met" on the Fair Grounds.

The warden of Auburn prison furnishes the information that Parker, together with Fred Bailey, another prisoner who escaped with him, might join a yegg gang. The escape of the two men on April 14th followed closely upon the escape of another prisoner who secreted himself underneath a coal car in the prison yards and got safely away by riding the rods underneath the car when it was taken from thep rison premises.

Parker, alias Patrick Joyce, and Bailey were "trusties" and were engaged in prepafing thep rison stage for a play soon to be given. They scaled the prison walls and made a safe getaway.

W. H. SPANSWICK LEASES PLANT

Fulton will not lose one of its industries, according to anthentic reports current this morning. It is that of the Spanswick Manufacturing Company, in Erie st. Mr. Spanswick as an individual, and not as the president of the company that was, has secured a lease from the former owners of the building for an indefinite number of years. This does not comprise the only good news in connection with the retention of the plant in this city, as it is known to certain persons that capital sufficient to run the business in a way more satisfactory than in the past will be furnished Mr. Spanswick by out-of-town interests.

Some weeks ago Mr. Spanswick announced that the plant was slowly ending its existence as one of the city's industries, and that from that date no additional orders would be executed. On this account the news of the morning has a cheering effect upon persons who desire to see Fulton retain every one of its industries.

SHOULD LIVE UP TO TRADITION

sion because the future depends so absolutely upon the present. Today, as far as character is concerned and very largely as far as opportunity is concerned, is the outgrowth of yesterday; and tomorrow will be the odtgrowth of today. A boy will succeed or fail in the work of life just about in proportion to how he uses or misuses the opportunities he has to get ready for it. If he wastes his opportunities and makes no proper use of his time, when the testing time comes he will not be ready. It has been very truthfully said, "Opportunity is opportunity only to him who is ready."

And I want to impress upon the minds of you men the fact that the same law holds good with referenne to that future which stretches on beyond "earth's little while," the future we call eternity. If we live sightly, we have no occasion for worry as to the future. You iecall the words of the poet, "How long we live not years but actions tell." Someone has made an addition to that, so that it read a like this:

"How long we live not years but actions tell;
For he lives twice who lives the first life well."

Time is only the beginning... It is just the ante-room to eternity. There is another world we do not see, and which our hands do not touch; and into the world the paths of life are leading. Therefore is time our most valueable possession, and if we are wise it will be our most cherished and most valued possession as well.

If this is so, what follows? Let me give you words written by David many centuries ago. The words are a prayer: "So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom." To put the thought into more modern phraseology, we should read it about like this: "Help us to spend our time wisely." What does Scripture tell us of the way in which we ought to spend our time? For if it enjoins wisdom, it surely ought to tell us what the course of wisdom and prudence is.

I want to call your attention to just two things said about it. and the first is this message from the prophecy of Micah; "He hath showed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?" Here we find something tangible. "Do justly;" be honest and square, give every man a square deal, This boings us pretty close to the Golden Rule, to treat others as we would have them treat us. But this is not all; there are plenty of people who are honest to the last cent who are ready for eternity. "Love mercy;" this too is urged upon us. Be more than just; go more than halfway; do what is required of you, and more beside. That second-mile spirit which Jesus commended is involved in this idea of showing mercy. But we must go a step farther: "Walk humbly with thy God." We are in relations with God. Do we realize that the eternal and holy God is walking alongside us every step of the way? If we do, are we walking humbly with him? Are we walking according to his judgment of what is best and right, in a humble, teachable spirit? No man is walking humbly with God who does not nquire what God may want him to do or where he may want him to go.

And the second thing I want you to notice in Scripture concerning the wise use of time and the truest and best way of living is this statement of Jesus concerning himself: "I am the way, the truth and the life." The way to live, then, is the way he lived. Jesus is God's pattern-man; and you do not need to be told what that means. We are to make our lives the wisdom of God." Then is Christ is the wisdom of God, his life is the great objection lesson of what God considers wisest and best, and we can do no better than to make our lives like his.

So I would urge upon every one of you men gathered here this afternoon that you make sure that each day is lived wisely. He who can see the end from the beginning surely is wiser than we know not what even the morrow shall bring forth. Let us then seek to walk in his ways, and day by day do his will.

This we read in the Book of books: "He that doeth the will of God abideth forever."Nothing is wise for us to do which cuts us off from eternal life; and if doing the will of God is what ensures eternal life, then that, anh only that, is the part of wisdom.

NECKWEAR AND VEILINGS.

Fashion Cues About Two of the Important Accessories.

Among neckwear it does not matter what the design of the collar if it has an open front. While there are a few extreme dresses seen with high collars, the majority are made with low, flat collars or those with high backs and low fronts.

Some cape collars are made to lie flat, while others have collars with high standing backs attached, with the points turning on either side forming a V.

There are many attractive styles in collar and cuff sets. The collars may be either flat or with a high back and low V front. The cuffs are medium in depth and follow out the design of the collar. Some sets are simply finished on the edge with hemstitching or a picot edge, while others are elaborately trimmed. Ruffles of lace or net about an inch in width are sometimes arranged on the edge in as many as four rows and are finished at the head with hemstitching. The same idea is carried out on the cuffs. Among novelties are leather collar and cuff sets. They are in colors as well as white.

Guimpes and vestees are in many attractive styles. Net, organdie, batiste, voile, marquisette and georgette crape are the materials employed in their making, with embroidery and lace for trimmings.

Plaitings of net, organdie and malines are used in various ways. Plaitings on wide bands are used to wear inside of a high fur or coat collar. Plaitings are also used in making collars, the plaitings being used on both the upper and lower edge of the ribbon band surrounding the neck.

Loose flowing face veils will be much worn this spring. Some are circular; others are draped. The circular veil with a round opening in the center which fits over the crown of the hat is used to quite an extent. Lacy effects with woven scroll patterns are especially effective in veils of this kind. Some are gathered on to an elastic band, allowing it to be adjusted over the crown of the hat. Some hang in straight lines to the shoulders, while others are finished with a ruche or band, which may be caught around the throat. Veils usually match the color of the hat.

FOR NEEDLEWORKERS.

One of a Set of Six and a Bigger Centerpiece.

When you lighten your housework this spring by putting aside heavy tablecloths and using doilies, a set of these illustrated will be satisfactory. The lace is the revival of Battenberg braid and buttons built around a centerpiece of Mexican drawn work.

Try These Short Cuts.

There are all sorts of short cuts for sewing on the market. The endless task of working buttonholes may be eliminated by using the worked buttonholes, which may be purchased by the yard at the low cost of 6 cents, suitable for the little folks' underwear. They come worked in fine lawn for shirt waists and the little girl's dresses. The trying task of sewing on hooks and eyes is not now necessary, when they can be bought by the yard ready to be stitched into place. In making a fitted lining it is well to sew on these fastenings before it is fitted in order to secure a good fit. If the spacings between the hooks is too wide in some places where there is a strain it does not take long to sew a few on at these points. If, however, you do sew on hooks and eyes you will find it much less difficult to keep the thread from showing through on the right side if you will slip a piece of whalebone into the hem. If the hem is too wide for a whalebone cut a heavy piece of cardboard the proper width and slip that in.

Odds and Ends of Silk.

Look through your bag or box containing odds and ends of embroidery silks and let them prove useful in ornamenting guest towels and other things. It is well to have a few little towels on hand, not only for home use, but to be showered on girls whose engagements have been announced. The most attractive towels can be made by embroidering across their ends little flowers. These can be filled in with French knots made from the various corded silks. The result is really very satisfactory.

Maitre d'Hotel Sauce.

One-third cupful butter, ten drops onion juice, one tablespoonful lemon juice, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, salt and pepper. Beat the butter to a cream as for a cake, add the lemon juice a little at a time and, when blended, stir in the parsley, onion juice and seasoning. Form into a ball or flat cake and set aside to chill before serving.

THE FIVE O'CLOCK.

Goodies For the Tea Table at the Height of Its Season.

There are many tempting ways of serving dates besides plain and as a sweet. Use them as a filling for sandwiches. Take two cups of dates, put them through a meat chopper, then add a cup of peanut butter and blend them together. Then spread the paste between slices of white bread.

Another woman also uses dates in baked custard, in tapioca and as filling for cookies, pies and cakes. Mixed with apples, celery and nuts they make a delicious salad. To use dates as a pudding cooked with rice, add to a quart of milk a cup of stoned dates and a quarter of a cup of rice. Sweeten and bake in a slow oven.

Cook keeps in her cold closet an assortment of pastes and butters that are used so much in preparing relishes for the tea, after dinner suppers and bridge parties. She has them ready in small, labeled glass jars and tidbits and sauces can be made at a moment's notice. Here are a few of her best recipes:

Sardine Butter.—Rub skinned and boned sardines to a paste and then gradually blend. A little lemon juice may be added to butter to give it very desirable sandwich flavors. Orange butter for afternoon tea sandwiches can be mixed with chopped nuts and figs or any other sweet filling. Grated orange rind may flavor the butter.

Olives may be ground in a vegetable chopper, mashed to a paste and creamed into butter. Capers are chopped and creamed with butter, and either of these can be used on broiled chops or beefsteaks, as sandwich butters or on green peas or string beans to improve the flavor.

Make Your Own Fernery.

You can have success with grapefruit seeds by taking a few precautions. When planting these seeds do not keep any that have been cut. Then, before planting, the seeds should be soaked for one day or at least half a day. Fill the receptacle up to within three-quarters of an inch of the top with dirt mixed with a little sand, on which place the seeds so thickly that no soil can be seen. Then cover with dirt and keep in a warm, sunny place, wetting with warm water, but not too wet. The seeds sprout in about five weeks. They are both beautiful and hardy and need practically no attention.

Prune Gelatin.

One heaping tablespoonful of powdered gelatin, two cupfuls of water, half a pound of good prunes, three tablespoonfuls of sugar and the strained juice of one orange are required for this dish. Take the stones out of the prunes after soaking them. Cut the prunes in halves, put them into a saucepan with the water and sugar and cook very slowly until soft; then add the gelatin, first dissolving it in hot water, and the orange juice. Pour into a wet ring mold. When set serve with whipped and sweetened cream in the center. Decorate with lady fingers.

FIFTY-ONE SENATORS

CHAIRMAN WICKS OF SENATE REAPPORTIONMENT COMMITTEE SAYS INCREASE PERMITTED BY CONSTITUTION WAS NOT AN "INDIAN GIFT."

BUT A PERMANENT INCREASE

Absolutely Necessary, He Says, to Secure to the Country Districts an Equitable Plan of Representation—The Committee's Report — Westchester and Queens Get New Senators.

Albany, April 17.—The provision for fifty-one senators in the state constitution is not an "Indian gift,"—made one year to be withdrawn another.

The framers of the present constitution did not have in mind, when they provided for fifty-one senators, a subsequent reduction of the number to fifty as some have contended.

The provision for increased membership in the upper house of the Legislature was made to permit an equitable apportionment of members to both the city and the country districts increasing as the increase in the population of the state demanded.

Not a Temporary Expedient.

Senator Charles W. Wicks, chairman of the Senate committee on apportionment, in presenting his report, took the ground that when the constitutional convention of 1894 prepared the present constitution with its provision for increasing the number of senators above fifty, it was not the intention to allow this increase for only a single apportionment and permit it to be reduced twenty years later when increased population in the city districts demanded an increase in the number of senators rather than a reduction.

For the past fifty years the city population of the state has increased far more rapidly than the country population. In 1865, the counties comprised within the limits of what is now the City of New York, contained 33 per cent. of the total population of the state. In 1875, this territory contained 39 per cent. of the total population of the state; in 1892, 51 per cent.; in 1905, 56 per cent., and in 1915, 60 per cent.

Some Provision Must Be Made.

With the city population increasing at such a rate it is apparent that some provision must be made for securing to the country districts some equitable plan of representation, argued Senator Wicks in his statement.

If the apportionment of 1925 increases the number of senators by seven and maintains the rural districts intact by increasing the total number to fifty seven, the reduction of the total number of senators to fifty in 1935 would reduce the number of senators representing the forty-eight rural counties to nine. Chairman Wicks maintains that the constitutional convention of 1894 had no such intent and declares that the safeguard provided against such a contingency was permanent and not for a ten-year period.

Equality of Representation.

A construction which permanently increases the number of senators with the increase of the urban population makes for equality of representation and serves to protect the City of New York as well as the country.

Even with fifty-one senate districts, the forty-eight rural counties containing over four-fifths of the total area of the state will have only one-third of the fifty-one members,—seventeen, instead of nineteen, as at present.

Westchester And Queens Get New Senators.

By reason of increased population, Westchester and Queens counties will each receive an additional senator and these two senators will have to be taken from the up-state districts. To further reduce the rural representation Senator Wicks holds, would be unfair and would be contrary to the expressed purpose of the framers of the present constitution as set forth in the debates of the constitutional convention of 1894.

Why Number of Senators Was Increased.

In that convention, Dr. Robert P. Bush, a Democratic delegate from Chemung county, when the question of increasing the number of senators was decided, gave a very clear explanation of the reasons therefor. He said: "We will assume that ten years from now, the state of New York has six millions of people. That, divided by fifty, the manner in which the ratio is to be determined, will give 120,000 for each senator. If the City of New York shall at that time have 1,800,000 inhabitants, it will be entitled to fifteen senators. That is three more than it has under this apportionment. Therefore all that can be done is to give New York three additional senators and add three to the total number of senators in the state, and it will not in any way change the country districts. In other words, this scheme contemplates simply that the present apportionment may always remain, but you may add to a district when it has sufficient to give it another member."

Great care has been taken by Senator Wicks and his colleagues on the committee to adhere strictly to the intent of the constitution and prepare just as fair an apportionment as it is possible to make.

The Assembly Apportionment.

In apportioning the Assembly districts, the committee has proceeded on the following basis:

To counties having less than a ratio and a half, [illegible].

To each of the other twenty-two counties, two members, 44. Total [illegible].

Remaining to be apportioned, 67.

Excess population over two ratios of counties entitled to distribution, 4,260,976.

This divided by 67 gives a new ratio of 63,596.

The result is as follows:

Albany, none, remainder, 61,330; Kings, 20, remainder, 61,841; Bronx, six, remainder, 3,598; Erie, six, remainder, 17,447; Monroe, two, remainder, 46,323; New York, 21, remainder, 19,306; Oneida, none, remainder, 37,316; Onondaga, one, remainder, 22,414; Queens, three, remainder, [illegible]; Westchester, two, remainder, 32,417.

Six Assemblymen are apportioned on remainders to Albany, Kings, Queens, Monroe, Westchester and Oneida.

SUMMER STORAGE

How to Care For Your Pet Furs and Woolens.

MOTH BALLS TO THE FORE.

Although We Can't See Our White Winged Enemies Flying About, Their Larvae May Even Now Be Boring Into Our Ermine Stoles and Sables.

Now is the time to lay away all woolens, furs and similar articles which must be stored during the summer.

The time when the moth does most damage is not when we see him flying around. The mischief has been done by the biting of the little larva or worm from which he came.

The first thing to do in laying clothes away is to see that they are perfectly clean. Everything woolen, like bath robes, blankets and underwear, should be brushed with a whisk broom, if it cannot be washed first, and exposed to the sun and air.

If the garment cannot be washed in water and we do not care to send it to the cleaner it should never be laid away dirty with spots of grease and food, because these are just the things that will attract the moth worm first.

The little spot on the lapel of the overcoat, the slight dirt on the shield of a child's flannel suit, these are the places that Mr. Moth Worm goes for first. Materials which are not thoroughly washable in water should be given a bath in gasoline and thoroughly aired.

Dresses trimmed with fur should never be laid away with the fur on them, but have the fur ripped off, cleaned in gasoline, brushed and placed in separate packages. In fact, all fur must be thoroughly cleaned, brushed and aired before being laid away.

Moth balls and camphor paper have been used for a long time and are still used, but we have modifications of these now in the tar paper bag and camphor bag, which are more efficient in many ways.

These bags come in various sizes some very small for children's coats and sweaters, others half length and others even full length for evening dresses or for overcoats.

Another cheap way of putting clothes away is to put them into the paper boxes, such as come with underwear and other articles and seal the covers firmly with strips of gum paper.

There are many other articles which we perhaps cannot lay away, such as tufted furniture, cushions, etc. The best plan is to spray them with gasoline or benzine, using a small atomizer or hand spray, or they can be very carefully sponged with a diluted solution of corrosive sublimate in alcohol made just strong enough to leave white stain.

Light, air, low temperature and frequent inspection are the things necessary for perfect storage.

Fish Bisque.

A fish bisque is made from one cupful of cold fish minced very fine, one cupful of hot milk and a cupful of any white stock. The carcass of a chicken cooked slowly will yield an excellent stock for this purpose. The seasoning consists of a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce, salt, a dash of cayenne and a teaspoonful of chopped parsley.

Put fish, seasoning and stock together in a pan. Mix one tablespoonful of flour and the same quantity of butter together and stir into the fish mixture. Cook and then stir in the boiling milk, adding a tablespoonful of cracker crumbs.

For Easter Week.

In the Easter parade this year silk waists will be prominent. Taffeta will probably predominate, but there will be suits of faille, silk poplin and gros de Londres. The checked and striped silks are popular. The silk suit is freely trimmed and is usually in demi tailored or dressy effects. The skirt may be in tiers or have cascade draperies. Bandings of velvet give a rich finish, and the ruchings are especially adaptable to silks.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

The linen frock in plain color must have about its trimming a contrasting touch of color. For instance this frock for the young lady of the house developed in old rose linen, is trimmed with white buttonholed scallops and a white organdy collar embroidered in rose. What there is of a belt is fashioned from white linen. Four yards 40-inch linen and 1-2 yard of organdy are needed.

COCOANUT PUDDING.—Mix a cupful and a half of stale cake with a cupful each of grated cocoanut and sugar, the yolks of three eggs, beaten, and two cupfuls of hot milk. Stand for half an hour, then add a teaspoonful of vanilla and a little grated nutmeg and the stiff whites of three eggs. Bake in a buttered pudding dish for forty minutes and serve with a liquid sauce.

Butterscotch Pie.—One cupful of butter, two cupfuls of brown sugar, four eggs, four tablespoonfuls of flour, seven-eighths cupful of granulated sugar, one cupful of milk, few grains of salt, one-half teaspoonful of lemon extract, flaky pastry. Melt sugar, add butter and flour blended together, then the milk. Cook three minutes, remove from heat, add egg yolks slightly beaten and the salt, strain if necessary and cool.

Lemon Snaps.—A cupful of butter and two of sugar beaten to a foamy cream. Add to this two eggs and the grated rind of one large lemon with its juice and a scant teaspoonful of soda dissolved in two tablespoonfuls of sweet milk. Knead very stiff with flour, roll out very thin, cut out in shapes with tin cutter and bake in quick oven.

Baked Apple Glace.—Wash and core red apples. Fill centers with sugar, cinnamon and cloves. One-half teaspoonful cinnamon, one-eighth teaspoonful cloves to one-half cupful of sugar is a good proportion. A few nut meats can also be added. Then place in a baking dish, barely cover the bottom with boiling water, put on the lid and bake slowly until of a dark, rich red color. Remove from the oven, chill and pour over them a glace sirup made of equal parts of sugar and water boiled together for five minutes.

Mother's Gingersnaps.—A cupful of shortening, a cupful sugar, a cupful molasses, a heaping tablespoonful ginger and a heaping teaspoonful of soda dissolved in very little warm water; flour to roll out, the less the better.

A PRINCESS' LOT

The Grand Duchess of Luxemburg Is Closely Guarded.

REPORTED TO BE ENGAGED.

Barely Twenty-one Years Old, the Youngest Ruler In Europe, Marie Adelaide Is Practically a Prisoner In Her Own Palace.

It is reported that the young Grand Duchess of Luxemburg will marry soon, but the name of the fortunate bridegroom to be is withheld.

Marie Adelaide is one of the most pathetic as well as one of the most romantic figures in the world today. This pretty young girl, barely twenty-one years old, was adored by her prosperous little country before the war broke out. Today she is practically a prisoner in her own palace. Unable to get out without a military escort and forced to look from her prison windows upon a people starving, terrified and forced to live upon charity, she has striven bravely to assert her rights and those of her people in the face of the overwhelming power of the German empire, but the struggle is naturally a hopeless one.

To complete her misery great pressure has been brought to bear upon her to marry a German prince, but this she has refused to do, as she bitterly resents the German invasion of her country. For more than a year the kaiser's agents have worked hard to persuade the youngest ruler in Europe to become the bride of a German prince, the object being to insure the future control of Luxemburg. So strong did this pressure become that the spirited young duchess revolted against it and, stamping her foot on the floor of her palace, exclaimed:

"I really must be left alone. If I cannot find peace in my own palace I shall soon be forced to seek it in a convent."

The grand duchess is the oldest of six sisters. Her family is a branch of the house of Orange, which rules in Holland. When Wilhelmina became queen of Holland she could not succeed to Luxemburg because of the Salic law. A cousin of Wilhelmina's became Grand Duke of Luxemburg. When he died in 1912, leaving only girl children, the Luxemburg parliament passed a new law making his daughters eligible to the throne.

Colors For Middle Age.

It is safe to say that few women of middle age can wear brown successfully. When the hair is turning white or gray it is particularly unbecoming, as the gray and brown do not harmonize in the least. Brown seems to bring out all the unbecoming yellow qualities in gray hair. Dark blue, on the other hand, lends it a bluish white tinge that is soft and particularly lovely. If your face is sallow never wear green. If, however, your hair is turning gray, but your skin is white and clear, with a soft pink flush in the cheeks, take to green kindly, as it will be most becoming. Lavender and purple are really beautiful on most middle aged women, while black and gray are equally successful. White, however, seldom looks well unless the skin is almost flawless.

Cream of Beet Soup.

Materials: One cupful of beets well cooked, one pint of mutton stock, two teaspoonfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of butter, one pint of milk, salt and pepper.

Utensils: Two saucepans, fine sieve, spoon and cup.

Directions: Cut the beets fine and simmer in the mutton stock fifteen minutes. Rub through sieve. Mix the butter and flour and add to the mutton stock and beet puree. Heat thoroughly, stirring constantly, and add to a pint of hot milk; season with salt and pepper.

Cinnamon Apples.

Core and wash six good sized tart apples. Mix together three rounding tablespoonfuls of sugar with one teaspoonful of cinnamon. Place the apples in a baking pan with three tablespoonfuls of water. Sprinkle over the prepared sugar and bake in a hot oven until tender. Serve hot or cold with thick, sweet cream.

A NEAT ENSEMBLE.

The Small Things That Score For the Well Dressed Woman.

There was a time when it was far more difficult to look smartly dressed than it is today. That was the time when we wore separate belts, when there was dress braid on our skirts, when we wore separate neckwear. We had to be careful that the braid on our skirts didn't become ripped, to hang in loops of untidiness. We had to see to it that the belt of our skirt didn't sag. We had to see to it that the leather belt we wore exactly coincided with the skirt belt. We had to see to it that the ribbon or muslin collar we wore exactly made connections with the blouse beneath it. Yes, those were indeed difficult days.

Today neatness counts as much as ever, but there are not so many pitfalls for the woman who would be neat.

Neatness of footgear counts more than ever before. The shoes must be spotless, well polished and in good repair. Heels that slant are an outrage on good dressing; moreover, they are decidedly unhealthful.

It goes without saying that the hair must be neat. A hair net sometimes produces a stiff effect, but that is better than a sloppy one. So choose the hair net in windy weather, and learn to adjust it becomingly. This year, when our milliners tell us to wear our hats straight on the head, neither tipped to left or right, neat hair is more than ever essential.

Immaculate gloves count for much in producing a smart appearance. Soiled gloves, ripped gloves or worn gloves are a disgrace. Nowadays, when washable gloves can be bought at almost any price, it is possible for everybody to have clean gloves. The cotton ones, if clean, always look well—infinitely better than soiled kid ones. And a stitch now and then will keep gloves always well mended.

Then there is the handbag. In this case the more you pay the better, for an expensive handbag outwears two cheaper ones and looks better the last day it is carried than the cheap one does after the first few weeks.

There are little details, like the handkerchief, which should always be sheer and snow white, that count quite as much as some of the bigger things in giving the impression of smartness which the modern woman aims to attain.

HALF WORN COSTUMES.

How to Freshen Up Your Old Gown So It Looks Actually Frenchy.

Fashions change so rapidly that women of limited means are often sorely tried in their attempts to keep up with these periodic and quick movements. A Frenchwoman, whose husband was among the first to respond to his country's call, saw her opportunity and seized it. She made the fact known that she was clever at adapting clothing and that she was ready to exercise her skill on reasonable terms. Plain materials are easily added to, the introduction of contrast is often permissible, and the present vogue for trimming has greatly facilitated her enterprise. The tunic was one of her best resources when she first started her business. Now she finds that the contrast hip yoke and the panel serve her very well.

Frequently sale bargains come in admirably for her purpose, and she is always ready not only to assist in adapting, but to give her aid in choosing from the big stocks of rich and beautiful material which are shown. A serge gown done up recently had the last season's bodice remodeled into a bolero arranged over an underyest made of a piece of rich silk picked up at a sale and sold off because this winter's patterns will not be brought out again for another season.

Mint Sauce.

The best way to make mint sauce is with a boiled sugar sirup. Add the chopped mint to this when it is hot and let stand until cold. Serve cold. Make the sirup of sugar with enough white vinegar added to make a sirup of the right consistency when boiled for about four minutes.

GARDEN CUES.

Plant Seed on Cloudy Day and Water Ground With a Spray.

Always select a rather still, cloudy day to plant the seed. If the day is windy some of it (which is very fine) will be blown about, and this must be avoided. After sowing, water the ground with the fine spray in the nozzle of the hand watering can. Never use a garden hose for this purpose or you will injure much of the seed.

A garden that is composed entirely of blooming plants must be planted in a sunny situation. Not even a branch of some tall tree must cast a single shadow across it. Where the shadow falls there will be few flowers.

In the beginning it will require a certain care. The plants will spring up in close masses, which must be thinned out. Each plant, if it is to develop to its full quota of beauty, must have room for individual development. When thinning out your garden give the plants you do not need to your neighbor or to some friend. This may encourage her to make a garden.

For the first few weeks it may be rather hard to distinguish weeds from flowers, but in a short time the former can be detected and uprooted easily.

Keep down all weeds and bear in mind that they are usually more vigorous growers and have stronger constitutions than other flowers, and unless they are destroyed you will have a garden of weeds, with only here and there a few very indifferent plants bearing even more indifferent blooms.

Before sowing the seed make a rough sketch of the plot. This will prevent a clash of colors when the blooming season comes. Unless you take this precaution you are apt to have brilliant yellow poppies growing next to red verbenas and other garish combinations.

As a second equally important reason, every plant has its own height, and if you would see all your posies you must have the low growing varieties along the borders and the tall ones in the background. So plant the hollyhocks in the back beyond the phlox, which are not so tall, and the sweet alyssum in front of the garden pinks for the same reason. Your plan may be ever so crude, but it takes only a few minutes and will eliminate future confusion and disappointments.

Baked Crabs.

Mix with the contents of a can of deviled crab meat, breadcrumbs or pounded crackers, pepper and salt to taste. Mince some cold ham. Have the baking pan well buttered, place therein first a layer of crab meat prepared as above, then a layer of minced ham, and so on, alternating until the pan is filled. Cover the top with crumbs and bits of butter and bake.

A CASE OF NERVES?

Is Crossness a Mood or Inherent In Just Things?

Every woman, young and old, knows what it is to have cross days—days when, from the rising up of the sun to the going down of the same, every mortal thing seems to go wrong, no matter how hard one tries to have them go right. For that matter, one always does try harder on such days than on the happy go lucky ones when life flows on smoothly and harmoniously, like "a grand, sweet song." Goodness knows, there is enough conscientious effort wasted on a single cross day to balance half a year of ordinary days.

Why is this? Is crossness a disordered state of the mind or an overwrought condition of the nerves or simply the reflection of an inexplicable but unanimous "crossedness" on the part of things in general? And if it be any or all of these is there any way of preventing or overcoming it?

Crossness, like most other conditions of life, is the inevitable effect of a perfectly natural cause. Good humor, like fine weather, cannot possibly last forever. If it could it would inevitably become an intolerable bore. Being eternally pleasant and agreeable is all right theoretically, but it is a terrible strain on the nerves.

It is dreadfully wearing, too, on other people. Did you ever have to live in the same house with somebody who was always placid, always even tempered, no matter who else was worried and distraught? And were you not sometimes seized with an unholy yearning to do something perfectly awful and fiendish, that you might for once startle that placid being out of his or her maddening imperturbility?

Dates With Lemon Jelly.

Soak one-half a box of gelatin in one-half cupful of cold water for about twenty minutes. Dissolve in two and one-half cupfuls of boiling water and add one cupful of sugar and the juice of two lemons. Strain and half fill a mold and set on ice. When almost firm, drop on the dates, which have been stoned and stuffed with blanched almonds. Add the rest of the jelly to fill the mold and chill. Serve with whipped cream.

Waffles With Maple Sirup.

Two cupfuls of flour sifted twice with one teaspoonful of baking powder and the same of salt, three eggs, one tablespoonful of butter and two cupfuls of milk. Beat the yolks smooth, add the milk and turn this upon the prepared flour. Whip lightly and quickly for one minute, add the stiffened whites and drop by the spoonful into heated and greased waffle irons.

A Jabot From a Collar.

Another use for the flat Dutch collar of value is to make it into a jabot. This will require no cutting at all. The collar should be gathered or plaited at the center of the back and the two pointed ends turned directly underneath. It is then hung from the front of a stock collar. Of course a soft collar of lace or lace trimmed batiste will fill in this purpose best.

Judge Ray against the Arms company and in favor of the bindholders of the defunct and never really existent paped company.

The case arose out of the fact that the arms company was claimed to have obtained $75,000 from the paper company, which in turn, had obtained the money through the sale of bonds. The paper company never got into actual operation although some $82,000 was raised through the sale of the bonds. The Hunter Arms company had claimed that it never got the actual use of the money but had turned it over to the Battle Island Paper company.

Judge Ray decided in favor of the papere company and his decision was at once appealed to the Circuit court. It was argued before Justices Ward and Rogers, circuit judges, and Justice Mayer, district judge. The opinion was given by Justice Mayer. The opinion states that the six Hunter brothers were stockholders, officers and directors in all three of the companies involved and that i might be expected, treated the corporations as if they were their personal property and often acted informally, leaving in doubt the effect of their conduct. It rehearses the sale of $82,000 of the paper company bonds and stated that $50,000 of these bonds were still outstanding and called attention to the fact that the paper company neither kept books nor a bank account. Thomas Hunter paid the receipts from these bonds into the bank account and to the credit of the Hunter Arms company as fast as the money came in. This money was mixed in with that of the arms company and was used by it so there could be no doubt of the arms compony being responsible.

After considering all of the evidence and the arguments, Justice Mayer assets that the arms company has failed to prove conclusively that the money was used by the Battle Island company and that the obligation therefore remains as Thomas Hunter orginally placed it and as the Hunter Arms company originally accepted it and it becomes unnecessary to consider questions of law which might have arisen had the proof justified the conclusion that an agreement to loan the money to the Battle Island company had been made.

The links of cooperation's chain stretched in a most attractive manner this morning from the business section on the East side to that on the West. Old time Fultonians declare that never in the history of our little city has its business homes blossomed forth as attractively as this week. Flowers were used with fine effect in many of the decorative plans. Everywhere was expressed careful, painstaking arrangement.

Among thed ry goods stores especially fine effects were secured. The windows of M. Katz and Co., pictured in one window a setting of bedroom furnishings, and in the other an arrangement of ladies' costumes. The windows of the J. C. O'Brien store were attractive in drapes of chiffon of harmonious colorings, and the East First street windows displayed ladies street costumes. MacNamara's shop windows were artistically done in a combination of brown lattice work and daffodils, and displaying the Printzess beauties. Burrit's was handsomely done in pastelle draped chiffons. The Fulton Salvage windows held a pleasing display of white-goods. McDonold's was effectively done with Easter lilies. J. R. Sullivan's store presented a happy combination. The corner window was attractive in willow furnishings and was done in blues and browns. Another window displayed a dainty arrangement of Miss Kennedy's fancy department and the storehouse window represented in complete furnishings a kitchen, bedroom and diningroom.

The Electric Company's window was well planned and portrayed the advantages of the new way over the old way of sweeping. The Gas Co., displayed handsomely its newest gas range and gas heaters.

Among the shoe shops Endicott and Johnson's window was pleasingly done in yellow with azeleas. Butts window was attractive with painted screen blackground and pine. Stranahan's displayed a profusion of flowers with huge bows of drapped chiffon, and Beckwith's presented a lattice background arrangement of purple and yellow.

The jewelry shops were prettily arranged. Morgan's was done in cut glass and the First street window displayed jewelry in cases on a setting of brown velvet. Farley's window was prettily done on a setting or brown velvet also, and J. F. Brown's was a novel combination in black and white stripes and daffodils.

Among the clothiers, Lipsky's window was attractive with tulip decorations; McKinstry's was handsome in yellows; Amdursky's with roses; Rosenbloom's in toggery arrangement and Bennett's also

GERMAN SITUATION IN JOINT SESSION; WILSON PRESENT

Washington—President Wilson appeared before Congress at a joint session at 1 o'clock today. The President presented to Congress the details of the case against Germany for her illegal submarine warfare and her breach of faith with the United States.

This means either that there will be an announcement of a breach of diplomatic relations with Germany or that, accompanying the "bill of particulars" making the case which has been prepared under the direction of the President, there will be what is tantamount to an ultimatum.

In administration circles the interpretation most widely placed upon President Wilson's sudden determination to lay the whole submarine controversy before Congress is that he has made up his mind a diplomatic break is necessary to uphold the honor of the United States.

In any event the long expected and always inevitable crisis is at hand. It is a crisis which the government of the United States bravely has striven to avoid, a crisis made unavoidable by Germany's palpable and continuing bad faith.

The understanding in official circles is that Mr. Wilson did not ask Congress for any sort of action in the German situation at this time, but that his message will be an announcement either that he already has acted or that he will immediately do so.

The first information Congress had of the President's intention to appear before that body came late yesterday when Representative Kitchin, democratic floor leader, presented the usual joint resolution providing for the meeting together of the House and the Senate at the hour indicated. Mr. Kitchin did not explain the purpose of the joint session further than to say the President had something to present to Congress. The resolution was adopted unanimously and without discussion and later received treatment at the hands of the Senate.

D. A. R. STANDS FOR DEFENCE

Washington—If any doubt exists in the minds of them en of this country about where the women stand on the question of upholding the national honor and preparing for national defence the Daughters of the American Revolution, in annual session here, hope to dispel it before their sessions are over.

When Mr. Wilson said that if the United States went to war it must not be for a selfish purpose but for the rights of humanity thew orld over he struck a chord that apealed to his thousands of women hearers. It is the belief of those who heard him that Mr. Wilson did not have in mind the Mexican situation, as many persons thought, but that he was really speaking of the momentous decision he had made with regard to Germany.

The D. A. R. committees are drafting resolotions on the subject of national defence that will leave no doubt in the minds of the men of the country about where they stand.

Friction developed over the office of editor of the organization's magazine. There was revealed sharp feeling between this officer and the committee on the publication of the magazine.

ALLEGED VIOLATOR OF LAWS UNDER BAIL

Vincenzo Alphonzo, arrested in a police raid last Saturday was arraigned in Police Court this morning before Judge Wilson, Attorney James R. Somers appearing for him. Vincenzo is charged with unlawfully selling liquor. He waived examination and was held for the Grand jury under $1000 bail. Joseph Cincotta is his bondsman.

BRITAIN FACES CRISIS; NEW CABINET COMING

London—That a grave Cabinet crisis exists is undeniable, but, according to an authoritative statement made last night, no resignations, either Ministerial or military, have yet been tendered, and it probably will be several days before the crisis is ended.

Political gossip centres mainly around the Minister of Munitions, Mr. Lloyd George, and Colonel Winston Spencer Churchill and the possibility of Mr. Lloyd George succeeding Mr. Asquith as head of theg overnment.

While the conscriptionist attack on the Ministry is undoubtedly powerful and threatening, there are also strong forces making for the retention of the present coalition Ministry first. Mr. Asquith's known skill in surmounting political difficulties and holding his team together, and, second, thep roblem of finding an alternative government to the present coalition and the repugnance felt in large sections of the country to a change in government at ac ritical stage of the nation's fate.

In the event of the disappearance of Mr. Asquith as a result of his refusal to remain a member of a government resorting to universal service, Mr. Lloyd George is regarded in many quarters as his natural successor. But against this solution is the fact that a very strong section of the unionist party is entirely opposed to Mr. Lloyd George as it is to Mr. Asquith. Moreover, it is known that Mr. Andrew Bonar Law, who is a conscriptionist in principle and was leader of the unionist party prior to entering the coalition government, and whose reputation as a parliamentarian has grown enormously since the war, making him a possible successor to Mr. Asquith, attachss the utmost importance in the national interest to the maintenance of the present coalition Ministry in power.

Christians Should Be Diligent to the Lord's Business—Peacock

Although the afternoon meeting at the Tabernacle yesterday drew a light attendance—about 200 people, the evening meeting was a more successful one from the standpoint of worshipers and cooperative enthusiasm. The 800 people present last night were kept amused at the antics of Mr. Warth, whose efforts to have the men sing No. 2, "He included me," resulted in the leader declaring, "This is the first time I have struck a voiceless choir."

After getting the men to whistle the chorus, the women to sing and whistle it, and the children to sing it also, each group in turn and collectively, Mr. Warth's first efforts were crowned with success, as nearly everybody present finally sang.

Mr. Peacock's evening sermon was in part as follows:

Proverbs 22:29. Seest thou a man diligent in his business. He shall stand before Kings; he shall not stand before mean men.

No one would dare contradict this statement and the reason no one would dare contradict it, is because it is true. It would be true of it were found some other place than the word of God. The diligent people are the people who get along well in this world. This is true in every business, calling or profession. The men making a success out of life are the diligent men. The same thing is true in the spiritual life. People must be diligent if they have a desire to succeed in spiritual things. According to this way of thinking, no matter what our calling or our profession or business may be, very much depends upon the effort put forth. Many people fail in this world. Many have failed and no doubt many will fail in the future. And naturally we enquire, why is one man a success and another a failure? There must be a reason. There is a reason. There is a reason for every success and a reason for every failure. The cause is set forth in this text: "Seest thou a man diligent in his business? He shall stand before kings, he shall not stand before mean men." Diligence is the secret of success in nine cases out of ten. Many people make the mistake when they start on an important undertaking, of leaving open a way of retreat if things go too hard. No one will ever make life a great success, or accomplish anything worth while, if a way of retreat is left open. I read the other day when Julius Caesar landed his army in England, he was determined to take no chances of possible retreat. He wanted to show his men that their invasion meant victory or death, and he burned all his ships before their eyes. The men under the command of Julius Caesar knew that they must do or die. As a result they were faithful, honest, diligent. Humanity is a peculiar thing, a very peculiar thing So many people are ready to quit I do not mean by this that we are a crwod of quitters, but I mean that as long as there is a way of escape we are tempted to turn back under trying circumstances. We are ready to run away This will never bring successe no matter what our profession or calling may be Men are compelled to do their very best and then leave the results with God, and if men do their very best God will not permit failure to come. Sometimes we reach the place where we feel we have done our utmost, and we are ready to give up and say, I cannot possibly do any more, when we have only started the work in which we are engaged. I was told the other day of a physician who dropped his instruments and said, I have done all I can, the case is hopeless, the man cannot possibly live. The wife was in the operating room and she begged the physician not to give up. She said, if you can possibly do anything do it, for while there is life there is hope. Her words encouraged the surgeon and he made another attempt to save the man from death and relieve his sufferings. His efforts were successful and today the man is enjoying life and strength and is still preaching the Gospel of Jesus Christ. If no one had encouraged that surgeon to try again in all probability the man would have died.

Power of "I Will"

"Will you hold this fort?" asked Gen. Rosecrans of Gen. Pierce at Stone river. "I will try?" "I will die in the attempt." "That won't do. Look me in the eye air, and tell me you will hold this position." "I will," said Gen. Pierce and he did. My friends, if we are going to succeed in our business in this world, and do the work of God, we must commit ourselves so thoroughly to the work that no discouragement or obstacles can turn us away. There is every thing in setting our eyes upon the goal and pressing forward toward the mark for thep rize of the high calling. The reason so many people fail in life is that they do not go in to win. They are unwilling to pay thep rice This is true in the business and professional world, and it is true in the spiritual world. Many people are not willing to buckle down to hard work for Jesus Christ. They refuse to fight sin and tempation. They are not willing to give up many little things which keeps them from reaping the harvest. Anything furnishes an excuse for not doing the Lord's work. Jesus said on one occasion, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow Me." We want the blessings Jesus gives, but we don't want to take the cross. We want to enjoy heaven but we are not very anxious to follow Jesus every day in this world' It is marvelous how easily people turn back in the service of God. Anything forms the basis of an excuse. This way of doing God's work will never bring success, and according to this passage of scripture such persons will never stand before King Jesus.

Diligence is Rewarded

A worthless person, a man of inquity is he that walketh with a perverse mouth, that winketh with his eye, that speaketh with his feet, that maketh signs with his fingers; in whose heart is perverseness, who deviseth evil continually who doeth discord. There fore shall his calamity come suddenly. On a sudden shall he be broken and that without remedy." These several verses reveal to us the end of the man who is not diligent in his business. Sloth ends in ruin. Bankruptcy waits on negligence. Temporal ruin comes. Men must be diligent in order to succeed.

When Horace Maynard first went to college, he put a red letter over the door of his room. His classmates not knowing what this meant, used to point him out as the man with the "V" over his door. At the end of his college course he was elected valedictorian. Now, boys, you know what

THE SPIRIT OF UNITY

The spirit of cooperation shown this week among the business people of our little city is indeed a wholesome, gladsome sight. Everywhere, in the shops and on the streets, is an unmistable air of playmaking. The windows of the various business homes have been transformed into pictures distinctly artistic; but better yet, on Fulton's horizon one may trace in outline—even tho faintly, a United Fulton. Out of the ashes of indifference, selfishness, and pride shall indeed rise a new civic ideal if the fires on our city's hearthstones be kept burning with the fuel of honest effort.

Fulton's problem is not a new problem. It is a problem as old as the hills and as far reaching as humanity. Throughout the length and breadth of our land, 'round the whole world, the Spectre of Separation stalks. No task is too small nor too large for the mischief of its works. It lays hold of friends, enters families, and even sets nations at war with one another. Wherever there is lack of unity, the spirit of separation is abroad, and to destroy its works the civilized world knows of no more effective weapon than that of Cooperation.

Sometimes we hear so much of the bad things about people and communities that there doesn't seem to be anything good, or fine, or lovely around us. Gloom is contagious, so also is good. Talking happy things, doing happy works; in fact, playing our game together in Fulton like happy children can surely solve our problem. In the creation of a true civic spirit the noblest and best in the manhood and womanhood of Fulton may find its highest expression. It is an opportunity worth meeting.

The merchants of Fulton are to be commended for "taking their place in the sun," and the Chamber of Commerce thru its Secretary is to be congratulated upon the productiveness of the movement.

"The Fulton Symphony Orchestra members should be, and no doubt are, very proud of the success they have obtained in three short months of rehearsals. Those who heard the first rehearsals and had not heard the orchestra since, and should listen to the work now, would not believe it to be the same organization. The musicians respond to every move of the conductor's baton, almost as a unit."—Contributed.

DIGGING THE GRAVE OF A DEAD PARTY

The Sun says "Rupture with Berlin in two weeks is feared."

It would be more accurate to say that rupture with Berlin in two weeks is greatly desired by the Administration.

Mr. Wilson seems to be conducting this government in the interest of the English and not in the interest of Americans.

As the English have no special concern in Mexico, and as only American citizens are being slaughtered there, Mr. Wilson proposes ignominiously to retreat from Mexico by land as he formerly ignominiously retreated by sea.

But as England might possibly be benefited by our participation in the foreign war, it is proposed to embroil this country in the European conflict, in which Americans have very much less concern than they have in the Mexican situation.

Let us assume the worst possible of Germany. Let us assume that the Lusitania was wholly a passenger boat and not an auxiliary naval vessel, carrying arms and ammunition to the enemy. Let us assume that armed merchantmen carrying guns capable of sinking a submarine at about four miles are not armed, but are wholly peaceful and proper merchant vessels.

Let us assume that Germany has wilfully and intentionally, and with hostility toward this country, killed Americans on these wholly unarmed and innocent vessels.

Still, even if all this were true, Germany has not killed one-tenth the number of Americans that Mexico has killed. Germany does not kill Americans every day for the mere sport and profit of the slaying. Germany has not defied our Government and defied our flag. Germany has not invaded our country and slaughtered our soldiers in an unprovoked attack.

If there are reasons for going to war with Germany, are there not ten times better reasons for going to war with Mexico?

If American citizens are to be protected as they should be, why are they not to be protected near at home as well as far away?

Why, at least, can they not be PROTECTED UPON THEIR OWN TERRITORY?

The withdrawal of American troops from Mexico at the dictation of a bandit government is the uttermost humiliation to which a great nation can be subjected.

It is the crowning act of cowardice on the part of an Administration which has neither courage, competence nor conviction.

It is the final act of feebleness and folly, of vacillation and vacuity, of a party which is dead and decaying, and which in the interest of public health and public decency should be finally and forever buried in November.—N. Y. American.

Opinion

A LOOK BACKWARD

Of course nothing is ever done right under a democratic President, and yet the country gets along extraordinarily well.—The World.

Which rather naturally recalls frequent democratic criticism of the tendency of republicans, when in power, to take to the credit of the administration such unimportant factors in the production of prosperity as bouneiful crops and a world war that furnishes American industry with a higher measure of "protection" than a McKinley or a Dingley ever dreamed of obtaining by legislation.—N. Y. Herald.

CAPPER'S PESSIMISM

Governor Capper complains that Kansas buys too much outside. He says the average Kansan lives in a house made in Michigan, is awakened by an alarm clock made in Illinois, puts on his Missouri ovesalls, washes his hands with Cincinnati soap in a Pennsylvania basin, and sits down to a Grand Rapids table. He eats Battle Creek breakfast food and Chicago bacon cooked on a Michigan range, puts a New York harness on a span of Missouri mules and hitches them to a South Bend wagon, or starts up his Illinois tractor. After the day's work he rides to town in a Detroit automobile, buys a box of St. Louis candy for his wife, and spins back home, where he listens to music "canned" in Camden, N. J. But what of it? The average Kansan seems to live pretty well and even if his state does not manufacture much it raises the wheat and the corn which sets all creation working to supply him with luxuries and he may be happy yet. There is always somebody to take the joy out of life, and in this instance Governor Capper seems determined to make his people unhappy.—Watertown Times.

FINANCIAL REFORM

The administration of Governor Whitman will go down in history for achieving the most important reform in the direction of placing the financial affairs of the state on ab usiness basis that has been carried into effect in modern times. There is nothing essentially dramatir about bookkeeping, and the subject of budget reform probably seems dry and tasteless to many persons. The fact of the matter is, however, that the adoption of an intelligent budget would go further toward eliminating waste and extravagance in this state than all the spectacular pledges of reform ever uttered from the political platform.

In past years the bulk of the appropriations have been grouped in four general bills, as follows The appropriation bill, which made provision for the state departments and institutions, the supply bill, providing for deficiencies in the departments and institutions, and miscellaneous items not a departmental charge; the construction bill, to provide for new construction and repairs to state institutions, and the reappropriation bill, which reappropriated unexpected balances of former appropriations, where the work contemplated had not been completed within thel ife of the appropriation.

This year the state appropriations appear in one bill, with the exception of highway maintenance and repair. The appropriation bill carries a total of $52,781,131,13, and is a document of 649 pages, containing about 7,500 items. The appropriations for highway maintenance and repair total $5,871,347.18, making the aggregate appropriation of the budget $58,652,478.31. Attached to the appropriation bill is an analysis of its contents, and a comparison with the executive budget and the 1915 appropriations, showing at a glance just where increases or decreases have been made. The object of every item of the bill is set down in plain terms. A person desiring to learn how the state's money is expended may ascertain down to the last cent by examining this bill.

No business man needs to be told the importance of a clear, explicit, straightforward system of bookkeeping. The old manner of making appropriations was complicated, obscure and confusing. Genuine economy under such a system was almost impossible. By clearing up this situation, Governor Whitman has earned the thanks of the taxpayers of the state.—Rochester Chronicle and Democrat.

TO OUR [illegible] EMPLOYEES AND NEIGHBORS:

This [illegible] been authorized by the Public Service Commission of the State of New York, Second District, to issue $[illegible] value of new six-seven per cent preferred stock which amount it is estimated will take care of all of the [illegible]nts of the Company for extensions, betterments and additions for the next two years in the territory in whi[illegible] now operating—as more fully appears from the papers on file with the Public Service Commission at Albany.

Under the law, this new stock must first be offered for subscription to the present shareholders of the Fulton Light, Heat & Power Company. We have asked some of these present shareholders to waive their rights to subscribe to new stock in order that we may have some stock to offer to the Patrons of this Company, to its employees and to other residents of the territory it serves. On April 1st, 1916, the Company paid the regular quarterly dividend on this stock, being the thirty-sixth consecutive quarterly dividend all paid within the last nine years. This stock is tax-exempt in the State of New York, the Company paying the taxes.

This Company uses more working capital than most Lighting and Power Companies because its settled business policy is to supply motors and any other electric equipment for responsible patrons, which investment is carried by the Company and gradually paid off by the customers in small installments added to their monthly bills for current.

Subject to the above, this entire $49,000 of new preferred stock has been sold to bankers who have contracted to buy all or any part of the new stock that is not otherwise promptly sold.

The Company, rather than to sell this stock to the bankers, prefers to build up and increase the home proprietorship of the Company for the following, among other reasons:

(1) To make the Public and the Electric Company actual and financial Partners as well as Partners in community advancement.

(2) To provide investment for surplus capital and savings as well as Partners in a stable enterprise which Fulton people have under their personal observation.

(3) As a step towards the popularization of the Company.

(4) As a step looking towards distribution of profits among customers.

Your attention is called to a letter dated April 15th, 1916, addressed by this Company to its present shareholders which will give you further details. Copies of this letter may be had upon application at the office of the Electric Company or at the Citizens' National Bank.

Payments for the stock subscribed for must be made to the Citizens' National Bank of Fulton for account of the Fulton Light, Heat and Power Company in five installments of two dollars each or all the payments may be made at one time; all as specified in said letter to the shareholders. Prompt action is necessary if you wish any of this stock.

Yours, very truly,
FULTON LIGHT, HEAT & POWER CO.

FINNEGAN AND CARSON COMING

At the second concert of the Fulton Symphony Orchestra, John Finnegan, the celebrated Irish tenor, soloist at St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York city, and Mary Carson, soprano of the Century and Boston Grand Opera Companies, will sing. Both artists are well known to the musical public as they have appeared with all the leading orchestras and oratorio societies throughout the United States. Following his appearance in Fulton, Mr. Finnegan leaves for a tour with Victor Herbert's orchestra. The following are a few of the press opinions of recent appearances of Mr. Finnegan and Miss Carson:

Evening Wisconsin, Milwaukee—

"The exquisite singing of John Finnegan will not be forgotten by those who heard him last evening, and he will be most welcome when he returns to us next season. Very rarely does opportunity offer for lovers of Irish melodies to hear them interpreted with such perfection of technic que and feeling. Truly, Finnegan's is a voice of purest gold."

N. Y. Herald, N. Y. City—

"Mary Carson is petite and pretty, and her voice is of a sweet and fresh quality. She was equally at home in the Florid Operatic Arias and her various songs."

N. Y. Press—

"Mary Carson's voice is of splendid quality and she was enthusiastically received after each group of songs."

These two noted artists will appear with the Fulton Symphony Orchestra at the Quirk theatre, Tuesday, May 2nd.

How One Woman Was Cured of Stomach Trouble

Mrs. Laura Morris, Utica, N. Y., writes: "Before I began taking Chamberlain's Tablets I suffered a great deal from indigestion, biliousness, headache and dizzy spells, and felt tired and languid most of the time. These tablets relieved me of these attacks soon after I began using them, and two bottles of them positively cured me." For sale by all dealers.

A STORY NEVER TOO OLD AT THE QUIRK TODAY

Hearts and minds of children and grown-ups throughout the ages have thrilled in the retelling of that wonderful story of Joseph of the coat of many colors, and of his rise to power in ancient Egypt.

Every ingredient that combines to form this ancient narrative is richly contained. There is the conspiracy of the brothers, jealous of Joseph; how they sold him into slavery is a theme treasured in the memories of the millions.

Of pathos and heart interest there is the deeply poignant grief of the old father when told the false story of Joseph's death under the lion's paw.

And of the lure of woman, wily, seductive, aflame with the illicit fires of passion, there is the unholy love of Zelikah, the wife of Potipherah, the mighty Egyptian captain. The scenes wherein this vampire, using all of her meretricious arts, vainly seeks to swerve Joseph from the nobler, lofty way, is a cyclone of tempetuous feelings.

The treatment of the story for motion picture purposes has been poetical and highly theatrical. Beauty and strength run as a team of spirited steeds, the film flashing on with cumulative power.

At great expense the atmosphere of Egypt and Palestine of the time when the world was young, has been admirably preserved. The characters look and act like human beings of the Old Testament, when their God was a Diety of vengeance, of fire and of sword, 'ere out of Nazareth came one who was to tell of the God of Love.

FULTON ASTONISHED BY SIMPLE MIXTURE

Fulton people are astonished at the INSTANT action of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-i-ka. ONE SPOONFUL removes such surprising foul matter it relieves almost ANY CASE of constipation, sour stomach or gas. Because Adler-i-ka acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel, a few doses often relieve or prevent appendicitis. A short treatment helps chronic stomach trouble. W. H. Gayer & Son, druggists. adv.

PAPER CO. LOST MONEY, SAYS ACCOUNTANT

Syracuse—The state yesterday closed its defense in the case of the Battle sland Paper Company before Judges Ackerson and Fennell in the Court of Claims.

Attorneys representing the company will be given an opportunity to present evidence in rebuttal in Rochester, May 8. This is expected to take about two days. Minutes in the case have not been fully transcribed, and briefs probably will not be submitted to the court until late in the summer.

Fred M. Farwell, an expert accountant of Batavia, who spent many weeks examining the company's books, was on the stand for the state yesterday. Mr. Farwell's testimony was to the effect that in the ten years the Battle Island Paper company was in operation it lost about $476,000 in the manufacture and sale of sulphite fibre.

Mr. Farwell's statistics showed that the company lost $4.25 a ton on the sulphite fiber it manufactured. In ten years the concern manufactured 112,000 tons, according to the expert. He also attempted to show that the company expended its money unwisely for improvements.

Deputy Attorney-Generals Edward J. Mone and Sanford W. Smith questioned Mr. Farwell at length. He was cross-examined by George W. Driscoll, William Nottingham and C. E. Spencer for the company.

Counsel for the company contended the expert made a great many unnecessary charges against the cost of production.

Thomas L. Tomlines of Watertown, a sulphite expert, was again on the stand. He testified as to the cost of installing a steam power plant in the mill and the cost of replacing the building appropriated by the state.

MAN OF ALIASES IS CAPTURED

Escaped Convict Found by Binghampton Police in a Drinking Place---Admitted Identity.

Amos Parker, alias Patrick Joyce, who has been arrested in this city on several occasions in the past, was captured yesterday in Binghamton following his escape from Auburn prison on Friday with another convict. The Binghamton police had been on the lookout for Parker since learning of his successful escape. Having captured him six months ago by watching the home of his 18-year-old sweetheart in Binghamton for four days, the same plan was followed out on this occasion.

Last night Parker, clad in clothes he had taken from the box car houses of section gangs returned back to Binghamton to see the girl. The fact that she had married while he was in prison didn't deter him. Fifteen minutes after he had entered the city, and while he sat drinking in an East Side hotel, the police had him under arrest. They started to search him.

"Don't bother, I'm clean," was all that he would say then. A few seconds later he attempted to draw a knife which was the only weapon he carried. He at first denied his identity, butl ater admitted he had escaped from Auburn in company with Frederick Bailey Friday night. The two men worked their way at night to Syracuse, spent one night there and then went to Binghamton. He said:

"It wasn't hard. We wrenched a lock off an extension ladder and put it up against the wall along the bank of the river. Bailey started up and I followed him. Just as I got one foot on the top of the wall a guard jerked the ladder out from under me and I almost fell. We ran alongside the wall, the guard firing and almost hitting us. Once I could hear the bullet whistle by my head. A little way on we came to a place above some grass. We jumped and landed hard. I pretty nearly broke my leg (Parker limps badly now). Days we kept under cover but at night we would work our way along, keeping to the back of towns. It was an easy way to get new clothes." Parker refused to give any information about his pal.

Every member of the Fulton police had kept an eye open for Parker since learning of his getaway. Parker has divided his time between Binghamton and this section. He was born in Oswego and spent his younger years there. Chief Dyer expressed the belief this morning that Parker is one of the most desparate criminals known.

Historic Knowledge.

Imagine the civilized world waking up tomorrow morning with every trace of historic knowledge and all memory of what has occurred in the past wiped completely out of mind and placed beyond recovery. The world would fall into confusion. There would be no guidance for statesmen or for scientists.

Every new problem would have to be solved by the long and painful method of trial and error. There would be no stimulus of pride, emulation and confidence springing from the recollection of man's past achievements. A nation without history would be like a man without memory.—New York Journal.

Nearer to Port.

Are you richer today than you were yesterday? No? Then you are a little poorer. Are you better today than you were yesterday? No? Then you are a little worse. Are you nearer to your port today than you were yesterday? Yes; you must be a little nearer to some port or other, for since your ship was first launched upon the sea of life you have never been still for a single moment. The sea is too deep; you could not find anchorage if you would. There can be no pause until you come into port.—Henry van Dyke.

Miss Orra M. Speer, extension worker among women for the Tabernacle campaign, met with the recently appointed women's auxiliary committee at the conclusion of the afternoon Tabernacle meeting yesterday. Shed iscussed with them the matter of reaching the girls and women of the community for spiritual uplift.

No definite arrangements were reached and is improbable that further steps will be taken in this direction until a business women's rally is held in the State Street church on Thursday or Friday. The term "business woman" is applied by Miss Speer to every woman and girl working for wage or salary, whether employed in store, factory or as a domestic.

The Women's Auxiliary Committee, as made up from the city's churches as follows:

Congregational, Mrs. F. E. Chubb, Mrs. W. F. Woodward; State St., Mrs. Chauncey Wilson, Mrs. Egbert Carver; First M. E., Mrs. H. J. Wilson, Mrs. E. J. Robinson; Free Methodist, Mrs. Hiram Young; Presbyterian, Mrs. G. L. Pratt, Mrs. T. H. Marvin.

BE DILIGENT, SAYS PEACOCK

the "V" stands for, I resolved when I entered college to be valedictorian. Suppose Mr. Maynard has said when he entered college. It will be impossible for me to be valedictorian. What should have been the result? He should have mailed. He made up his mind that he would be valedictorian and he was. Many young men have failed because they have failed to be diligent. People in the great majority of cases fail not because they do not have the ability, but because they are slothful. They refuse to set their minds to the task betore them. They fail because they are too lazy to work. Annd men and women fail in the work of Jesus Christ for just the same reason. When you go to a man and ask him to do something to advance the work of Jesus Christ in the world, and he tells you that he does not have the ability he means in nine cases out of ten he is too lazy.

D. L. Moody once said: "It is not because people do not have ability they refuse to work in the church of Jesus butb ecause they are too lazy." Now, it is just as essential be diligent in business, or in a profession in order to be successful as it is to be dilligent in business, or in profession in order to be successful Things do not come by chance in the world and they do not come by chance in the Kingdom of God. And God Almighty never intended men and women to be loafers. Since the fall of our first parents, God has so ordered it that man shall earn his bread by the sweat of his brow. Joseph was diligent in his business, and he stood before the king. Daniel was diligent in business, the business of the Heavenly King. He lived to stand before kings. Benjamin Franklin was a poor boy in one sense of the word. At the age of seventeen, on a Sabbath morning, we find him trudging through the street of Philadelphia with all his earthly possessions on his back and in his pockets. The total of his assets consisted of some old clothes, one silver dollar, a shilling in copper coin and himself. As he passed along the street, a girl, who afterwards became his wife, looked out of the window and laughed, and made sport of the grotesque figure of young Franklin. But the surgoundings and the sneers of the people had no effect upon the young man. He had already learned the lesson that all must learn, that success comes only to those who are diligent in business. And with this thought in mind he applied himself diligently to his work. He was ab rilliant young man and it was only a short time until his abilities were recognized. He kept going up the ladder, step by step until he reached the place spoken of in this text. He stood before kings. My friends, God has not sent us into the world simply to have a good time. We are here for a purpose. There is a work to be done. A work for humanity and a work for God. Christ was diligent in business and made a grand success in life. He embraced every opportunity, and improved every moment and this is the way God wants us to do at the present time. No person wants a loafer. The loafer never amounts to anything and he never amounts to anything in the spiritual world. You have no light of God using a loafer. He wanted the diligent people. To which class do you belong? You know the consequences. Make your choice.

James Miller of Pottstown, Pa., cured a horse of pollevil with three bottles of Hanford's Balsam. He says: "The veterinariaus had been trying to cure the horse for seven years." adv

Easily First.

Teacher was impressing upon the class the importance of accurate observation. To illustrate she said, "Now each of you look around this room and tell me what is the most interesting object to you and why."

Tommy Jones was the first to raise his hand.

"Yes. Thomas, what is the most interesting object you have observed?"

"Your desk, please, miss."

"Why?"

"Billy Baker put a snake in it."—New York Times.

Wisdom of Willie.

Mother (angrily)—Why didn't you come when I called you the first time? Willie—'Cause I didn't hear you till you called the third time. Mother—Now, how could you know it was the third call unless you heard the other two? Willie—Easy enough, ma. I knew it was the third time 'cause you sounded so mad.—Boston Transcript.

ACT FOR CHARITY.

London Society Women Find Patriotic Outlet on Stage.

MANY TAKING ACTIVE PART.

As Method of Expressing Devotion to Welfare of Soldiers They Are Sure It Beats Red-Cross Nursing and Working In Munitions Factories.

London.—The women of London society who rushed into the hospitals as soon as war was declared and into the munition factories later on are discovering a much more pleasant method by which they can devote themselves to the welfare of the soldiers. Instead of learning to scrub floors and wash dishes in the military hospitals and submit to the rigid discipline of the regular nurses, or taking their places in the munition factories in overalls and caps, side by side with the workmen's daughters, the women who formerly were the life and soul of gayety and brilliant hospitality are finding a more congenial outlet for their patriotic endeavors on the stage—not private theatricals, where only a carefully selected crowd of their own friends would be allowed to see them, but in charity matinees and evening performances to which anybody can go who wants to pay the price of the tickets. And, having studied with application and indefatigable energy, they seem not to be afraid to appear with well known professionals, challenging comparison and at the same time mingling with the regular footlight favorites, as if such a thing as a social ladder did not exist.

Miss Muriel Wilson is the leader of society's public theatricals. She has been so long distinguished in amateur performances for the entertainment of King George's special circle that she has had an experience in interpreting dramatic roles which might be envied by any gifted professional. Miss Maxine Elliott has long been one of her most intimate friends. Miss Elizabeth Asquith, young in years but accustomed to taking part in private theatricals since she was a child, now frequently appears in public with professionals. Mrs. George Keppel does not appear herself, but she is allowing her two daughters to enter the ranks of the society belles whose acting all the world is privileged to see.

Lady Ashburton, the former Miss Frances Belmont of New York and an original Florodora girl at the Gaiety, is not only returning to the stage to take part in charity theatricals, but she is teaching her stepdaughter, Miss Aurea Baring, how to act. The young lady finds this more to her liking than her sister's position as maid of honor to Queen Mary. Both Lady Ashburton and Miss Baring will be members of the company which has been organized by Lord Rosslyn to appear at the Theater Royal, Winchester.

The Countess of Essex (nee Miss Adele Grant of New York) recently had an extremely successful charity matinee at the Gaiety theater, professionals and society amateurs being indiscriminately mixed up. Lady Diana Manners, the Duchess of Rutland's lovely daughter, took part, and Countess Pauline Pappenheim (Miss Wheeler of Philadelphia) looked radiant and youthful in one of the roles, in spite of the fact that her Bavarian husband is a prisoner of war in England, happening to be in the country when King George and his cousin, the German emperor, exchanged declarations of hostilities in August, 1914.

Your Handwriting Shows What You Are

By WILLIAM LESLIE FRENCH

I.—Strong Will, Weak Will, Etc.

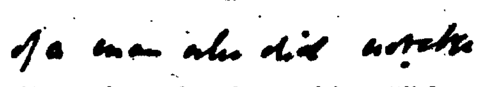
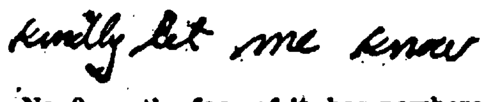
THE science of interpreting character and tendencies from handwriting, six hundred odd years old, has during the present century been shown to be of practical value to human beings in all walks of life. The reason is simple. When you write, apart from your thoughts, education or training, you unconsciously reveal to those who understand this science your entire character, talents and possibilities in one direction or another. You show whether you are strong or weak, honest, fickle and numerous other traits. Because your mind and brain work through the nervous system to the hand the various strokes become a sort of register of your personality. And it is found by an examination of writing of people who write alike that in common they possess similar characteristics.

NO. 1.



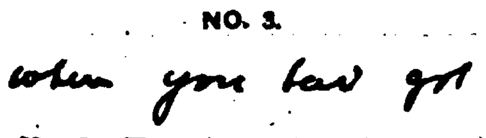
No. 1 shows by the positive "t" bars and steady pressure throughout a strong will. The upward swing of the script to the right, combined with sharpened form, indicates that will power forces the writer to his ambition without weakening. Well made connecting strokes and small low letters give good reasoning ability and an intellect capable of intense application. All handwritings revealing these signs show like traits.

NO. 2.



No. 2, on the face of it, has nowhere near the same degree of strength. The wabbly, uncertain shaded strokes, weak formations and changeable "t" crossings are the signs of a will which works unsteadily, while the mental vigor is lower. As the strokes of one line interfere with the others, it indicates a person who does not think clearly and hence cannot use his will to sure results. People exhibiting such signs are not well balanced.

NO. 3.

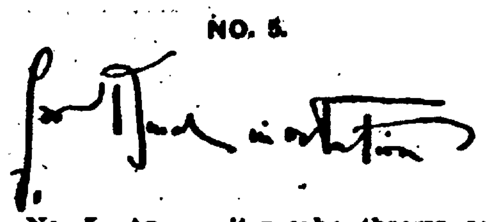


No. 3.—Here the writer brings his down strokes with a sort of bang as to say, "There, move me if you can!" Stubbornness! Further, he joins his word and letters firmly, has even pressure and thus uses his brains with force to make his ideas work.

NO. 4.

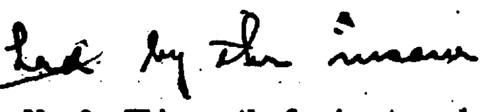
No. 4.—Swift, alert handwriting, flowing right ahead, without breaks and decisive "t" crossings, betrays rapid mental and physical action. The well connected letters say that such writers mean business. Energy!

NO. 5.



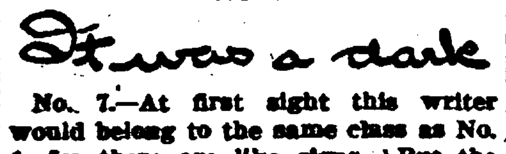
No. 5.—Any writer who throws so many unexpected curves into his script as this one, who extends his long letters so far above the lines, shows so much originality, is erratic, not well poised and irresponsible. Imagination and emotion are overdeveloped.

NO. 6.



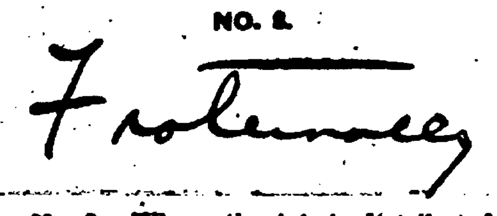
No. 6.—This gentle flowing type denotes little power of resolution and not much fighting capacity. Note the delicate form and easy way of barring the "t."

NO. 7.



No. 7.—At first sight this writer would belong to the same class as No. 4, for there are like signs. But the round formation and the easy way of ambling across the page show laziness and a disposition to take things as they come. The upright script betokens truly mental poise, for vertical writing generally has this significance, but when the writing is also inclining to left—then extreme laziness.

NO. 8.



No. 8.—Where the ink is distributed so positively and evenly, the long "t" crossing being pointed, while the letters run together easily, there are great determination and persistence. Energy appears all the way through. You would never accuse a writer of laziness who showed such signs. You would never say that vacillation and fickleness were traits.

These few suggestions will give the reader an idea of how to judge of strength or weakness.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

Coat suits for Misses feature the short jacket, and it is almost as full as the skirt with which it is worn. Rather audacious checks are used for the spring tailleurs of youthful design. Green and white check, with a hairline of black to emphasize the unusual blocking, is an effective combination. The material is serge, 4 yards 54-inch wide, being required for the suit.

Pictorial Review Jacket No. 6597. Sizes, 16 to 20 years. Price 15 cents. Skirt No. 6614. Sizes, 16 to 20 years. Price 15 cents.

Pictorial Review Patterns may be procured at the M. Katz & Co. Department store, Fulton.

A POPULAR DESIGN.

Jersey Cloth Is in the Lead Both For Street Wear and Sports.

SMART AS THEY COME.

This silk jersey suit is in deep tan color, with brown glaced leather for cuffs, collar and pocket lids. The stringy belt and novelty buttons give a natty finish. A simple tan straw sailor goes with the suit, which is one of the spring's successes.

A Torpid Liver

When the liver becomes torpid the digestion is impaired and the bowels become constipated. This can be corrected by taking a few doses of Chamberlain's Tablets. Miss E. C. French, of Mohawk, N. Y., writes: "Chamberlain's Tablets are a splendid medicine for torpid liver. When I have that tired feeling and my appetite is poor and my head begins aching, I take a dose of Chamberlain's Tablets and they soon tone up my system and I feel like a new woman."

A Nest Of Spies

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Captain Robert Edgerton of the staff of a general commanding the right wing of the British troops in France was directed to take an important communication to the general commanding the left wing of the same army. It was contained in a fat envelope and must be carried in the captain's side coat pocket.

Edgerton took with him an orderly, an Irishman named Michael Farriday, recommended by his company commander for possessing a cool head. Mike, like a good soldier who knew his place, rode forty paces to the rear, whenever there was no especial danger.

The two zigzagged along, sometimes in advance of the British line, sometimes in the rear. At one moment they would be riding through shot and shell, at another would be where there was all the quiet of a rural cemetery. The captain had been told that there was no need for hurry; all that was expected of him was to get the message through during the day. At noon he stopped at a house and asked for some dinner. The occupant claimed to be a Frenchman, but Edgerton could not make out exactly what was his native nationality. At any rate, he spoke a kind of French to which the captain was not used. The day was warm, the roads dusty, and the officer, who was an English gentleman and could not brook dirt, asked to be shown a place where he could wash his face and hands.

His host showed him to a room on the second floor, where the captain took off his uniform coat and plunged his face into a basin of water. When he had finished his host stood with his coat in his hands ready to help him put it on. The man had already brushed off the dust, doing the work while the captain's face and eyes were covered either with water or a towel. And this was no brief time, for if there is one thing about which an Englishman is particular it is his ablutions.

As soon as Edgerton had buttoned his coat he put his hand to his breast to feel if the message was still there and, feeling its bulk, complacently descended to the dinner table. A woman had cooked the meal, but she said nothing to the captain, who ate while the others served him. The man talked a good deal about the war, was very bitter against the Germans and hoped they would soon be driven from French territory. He was continually going out to the kitchen for dishes, and on one of these exits Edgerton heard him speak a few words to the woman.

Now, Edgerton was a Cambridge professor of languages. The words spoken were Persian. They were said in a tone so low that he could hear only a few of them. These were "Be ready to"— A vague feeling that something was wrong about the couple seized upon Edgerton, and he involuntarily put his hand to his breast to see that his dispatch was there. Feeling its bulk he was again satisfied. Before leaving he offered to pay for his dinner, but the man was too good a patriot to take anything.

Meanwhile, the orderly remained without, munching a piece of bread and meat the woman had given him. As soon as the captain appeared Mike led his horse to him. Edgerton mounted, and the two started on their journey. They had not gone far before Mike called from the rear:

"Captain!"

"Well?" turning in his saddle.

"Have ye the dispatch?"

"Certainly I have. Why do you ask?"

"Thim's not Frenchies: they're Turks or somethin' o' the like."

Edgerton unbuttoned his coat, took out what he had been supposing to be his dispatch to find that it was a newspaper folded to the shape of the package with which he had started on his mission. He was thunderstruck. Turning, without a word he rode back to the house he had just left. It was deserted.

Mike, who had meanwhile caught sight of something flitting through a wood, gave chase and returned with the woman. She had carried the dispatch, dropped it, and Mike had his grip on it.

"Ride for the nearest troops!" cried Edgerton, "and bring them. We've stepped into a nest of spies!"

The captain remained where he was, guarding the woman, and in a few minutes Mike returned with a small troop of cavalrymen. They beat the bushes and captured the man.

Edgerton narrated what had occurred to the officer in command, who told him that information had been going to the enemy from some source and they had been unable to locate it. The house was carefully examined, and under it was found a telephone machine, from which a wire ran underground to a hill occupied by the enemy.

Edgerton, having given his testimony, rode on, delivered his message, and when he returned on passing the house where he had dined he found it razed. The occupants had both been shot. As Edgerton rode on he mused aloud:

"I wonder how they got that dispatch without my knowing it?"

"What were ye doin' all the time, captain?"

Edgerton told him how he had washed and dried his face.

"Faith, captain," said Mike, "ye can't see with your eyes full of water or through a towel."

FASHION PARADES

New York—From a bewildering display of French models shown on pretty figures, with mincing step and set smiling faces, one can glean ideas that will be practical for the average woman who is now in the midst of Spring planning.

Panniers Bustles and Hoops

While panniers, bustles and hoops are seen everywhere they are by no means the only types modishly worn. Straight full skirts with tucks, pleated skirts for sport and tailor-mades, and latest of all barrel skirts that exactly reproduce the silhouette of the ordinary flour receptacle, are all in the running so one can take one's choice, without going to extremes.

Organdie and Silk

A dress of taffeta in stripes of blue chestnut and beige made with a straight full skirt showing pannier draperies at either side, had the lower edge finished with three narrow overlapping frills of white organdie edged with narrow blue ribbon velvet, the fichu bodice similarly trimmed with plastron and high, rolling collar of embroidered organdie. A frock of pink cross barred muslin has barrel hoops of white organdie edged with ruffles of Valenciennes, the wide fichu collar of organdie with six rows of lace frillings, and a long organdie gauntlet from wrist to elbow where it meets a sleeve of the cross-bar material finished with narrow lace frills.

Dress of Delft blue taffeta, the full straight skirt in wide tucks edged with frills of narrow embroidered muslin, belted blouse of embroidered muslin with full peplum frill. Belt and suspendeh straps of the silk and long tight silk cuffs with frills to match the tuck edgings meet top of embroidered muslin like the waist — Chin-chin organdie collar.

High Straight Decolletage

Great use is made of the high straight decolletage in New French models, and the effect is novel and smart where it is becoming, but it is so seldom becoming that the average woman of taste will be chary of adopting it.

McCall Designs

A dress of black gros de Londre silk, with a short blouse basque has the neck cut across just below the collar hone, and extending out to the shoulder. Embroidered organdie edges this, a band of two inch velvet forms the belt and the straight full skirt is guiltless of any trimming other than three rows of pointed scallops developed in heavy silk stitching. Long sleeves that follow the contour of the arm, end in the usual overhang at the wrist where often self-covered buttons are placed.

Silk Coats and Others

Long coats of taffeta silk or faille are modish for day or evening wear, black and the darker tones for street wear, and the lightest and most delicate tints for topping evening frocks. Sport coats are a necessity for any well-planned outfit and in soft wool velours in checked and striped patterns are smart enough for any but the more formal occasions.

Sport Suits

Striped skirts in most pronounced styles and colors with matching plain coats come in Jersey cloth and linen, and in the new mohair fabrics for sport wear of all sorts. Straight pleated skirts or those in simple folds are the preferred types with these while belted coats vie with boxed models.

KIDNEY STEW.—One beef kidney, about one pound, one small onion, one cupful of vinegar, one cupful of water, one small piece of suet, one bay leaf, one tablespoonful of flour, one tablespoonful of butter, one clove, pepper and salt to taste. Place the suet in a deep saucepan. Chop the onion fine and put it in the pan with the suet to brown. Cut the kidney into small pieces and add it to the browned onion. Allow to simmer for five minutes. Add clove, bay leaf, pepper and salt, vinegar and water. Simmer briskly for about twenty minutes. Then take a tablespoonful of flour and brown it in a tablespoonful of butter. Add this to the stew and allow it to come to a boil. Serve on toast.

Steak Birds.—A tasty way to cook round steak is by making small birds. Have the steak cut thin and then cut it into pieces about three inches square. Make dressing as you would for fowl, fill the pieces of steak with it, double them over and tie with a cord. Roll in flour, put into a baking pan with enough hot water to baste and bake until tender. Lay the birds on a platter and serve with a garnish of parsley.

Angelo on Horseback. — Use three large oysters to a person, wrap each oyster in a very thin slice of fat bacon, then arrange on steel skewers, three oysters on a skewer, with about one inch space between each oyster. Dip in batter and fry in deep fat from eight to ten inches. Serve hot (still impaled on skewers) on thin triangular slices of buttered toast from which the crusts were removed before toasting.

Batter for above: One cupful of sifted flour, one egg, well beaten; one-half cupful of milk, a pinch of salt, one saltspoonful of baking powder.

Scalloped Fish. — Three cupfuls of cooked fish, three cupfuls of milk, three tablespoonfuls of flour, three tablespoonfuls of butter, two eggs, one teaspoonful of salt, one-half teaspoonful of pepper, one tablespoonful of chopped onion, one teaspoonful of chopped parsley. Pick over and flake the fish into small pieces. Blend the flour, butter and milk together into a cream sauce. Boil this a few minutes and then add the eggs, well beaten. Add fish, salt, pepper and onion, also parsley. Sometimes we add thin slices of potatoes, but usually not. Put into a buttered baking dish and cover with fine breadcrumbs and dot with pieces of butter. Bake half an hour in a moderate oven.

A Long Sleep.

A Swedish girl holds the record for long sleeping. She came home from her work soon after her fourteenth birthday, complaining of toothache, and went to bed. Soon afterward she fell asleep and slept without waking from 1875 to 1907, a period of thirty-two years.

Her only nourishment during this period was two cupfuls of milk a day. She fully awoke at the age of forty-six and immediately asked for her mother, who was dead. She did not recognize her brothers, whom she had known as little boys. She remembered nothing during her trance. Yet her recovery was absolute. She became well and hearty in every way.

The Police System.

The police system, being almost entirely municipal in its character, has gradually developed with the growth of cities. In London a night watch was appointed in 1253 to proclaim the hour with a bell before the introduction of clocks. The old watch system was discontinued and a new police on duty day and night commenced Sept. 29, 1829.

GOLF TOGS.

Style Tips About Your Looks on the Links.

The girl who plays golf is in her element these days, for at the first touch of spring she gets out her golf bag—if she hasn't been using it all winter on the southern links—dons a pair of low heeled shoes, a close fitting hat, a short skirt and a comforable sweater and hies herself to the links for a glorious day of golf.

When we say that the girl who plays golf dons low heeled shoes, a short skirt and the rest of the sporting paraphernalia it must not be thought that her costume is in any way unattractive or that any sort of clothes will do for this game. The day has passed when this was the case. Time was when the golfing girl was not a thing of beauty nor yet a joy forever, but fortunately that time is of the past, not the present.

Today the girl who plays golf presents a trim, immaculate figure. She is clad in well cut clothes designed on comfortable but at the same time becoming lines. Her golf skirt is sometimes of linen, sometimes of tweed, but whatever the material used it fits her figure beautifully and swings gracefully at every stroke. Her blouse, though a plain one, is wonderfully made, often sewed by hand and ornamented with the finest of fine stitches. While it is usually mannish in cut, it loses nothing in beauty by this fact, for a bright tie at the throat or fancy buttons add a feminine note.

The hat of the golfing girl is a sensible but pretty affair. It is snug fitting, so that in the midst of the game the player need not be disturbed by breezes dislodging her headgear. Usually it is fairly large so that the eyes may be shaded from sunshine and the complexion guarded from tan. A panama with a single ribbon band is a popular golfing hat, though there are numerous other types of headgear which meet with the athletic girl's approval.

The most fascinating part of the whole costume worn by the girl who plays golf is the vivid covered silk sweater worn over her sport blouse.

on straps, held by white crochet buttons. From shoulder seams to skirt bottom extend two plain strips, in good contrast with the plaid kilt. This pretty outfit is worn over a white linen guimpe, edged with stout torchon.

PINK IS POPULAR.

A Run on Pinks Shows Many Different Shades For Spring Wear.

Pink is the color of the day in woman's dress.

Pink is not an especially aesthetic color, but it is a becoming color. It brings out the best in its wearer's looks. It has been said that a French woman always knows enough to run her lingerie with pink ribbons, for she wise woman, knows that there is charming softness about pink that is found in no other color.

Geranium, petunia, orchid red and other shades with much of the rosiness that makes pink becoming are among the newest colors. And then there are the rose shades we have worn all winter and much of the shade that generally goes by the name pink.

Pink in the form of flowers is much used on spring hats.

One thing that shows the popularity of pink is the rows and rows of bottles of liquid or powder to color water in which pink things are washed. Pink liquid or powder is it, and it is added to the rinsing water.

Dangers of Draft

Drafts feel best when we are hot and perspiring, just when they are most dangerous and the result is Neuralgia, Stiff Neck, Sore Muscles or sometimes an attack of Rheumatism. In such cases apply Sloan's Liniment. It stimulates circulation to the sore and painful part. The blood flows freely and in a short time the stiffness and pain leaves. Those suffering from Neuralgia or Neuralgic Headache will find one or two applications of Sloan's Liniment will give grateful relief. The agonizing pain gives way to a tingling sensation of comfort and warmth and quiet rest and sleep is possible. Good for Neuritis too. Price 25c. at your Druggist.

LABOR NOTES.

The proposal to establish a state constabulary in New York state has been denounced by labor.

Silk weavers of Paterson, N. J., have secured the nine hour day. About 25,000 operatives are affected.

The biscuit workers of New York city have formed a union. About 3,000 men and women became members.

Employees of the Western Steel Car and Foundry company of Hegewisch, Ill., have received an increase of 10 per cent.

The Wilkesbarre street car strike shows no signs of ending after several months of disagreement between workers and operators.

in toggery display. McCormack also attractively displayed Easter aparel.

The hardware dealers deserved special credit for their work. The Palmer-Hope windows showed "the green grass growing all around" plus flower beds, a brood of chicks, graveled paths and a hose playing upon the thirsty begonias. The L. P. Smith store featured locks and in the second window a mill, a wheel, a wier and fisherman seeking his supper. The People's Hardware displayed fishing tackle, and Druse's paints and brushes. Hulett-Taft's window portrayed a base ball diamond in one window and in the other a design of wall-paper, a pot of geraniums and a rug upon which happily snoozed the O'Grady's beautiful setter. The Lasher store displayed wall papers in one window and in the other a pretty combination of cut glass and pictures.

The millinery stores were prettily done. Miss Young's window was arranged in greens; Whitney's in pink; Dix in blue and white and Mrs. Jones' in varicolors.

Bogue's shop displayed bicycles and Waldhorn's Fair store, household supplies.

Putnam's Drug store window was attractive with toilet articles in one window and a unique combination of blue and yellow formed by sulphur bars and blue vitrol.

The highest praise was heard upon the streets this morning for the efforts put forth by our merchants. The interest aroused will undoubtedly serve as a stepping stone to even bigger works in the future.

2300 TROOPS SENT TO FRONT

Funston Orders Force to Columbus for Relief of Gen. Pershing.

San Antonio, Tex.rGeneral Funston ordered to Columbus approximately 2,300 men now stationed on the border.

There they will be under command of General Pershing and probably will be hurried into Mexico to protect the line of communication while Pershing troops now protecting communications will be sent forward to support the advance columns.

General Funston has asked for more troops for borrder patrol. He admitted this afternoon that he ordered the additional troops to Columbus first and informed Washington later what he had done. The move was in repsonse to urgent requests of General Pershing that his line of communication be protected better against any contingency.

At 4:30 General Funston said he he had already ordered to Columbus the Sixth Cavalry, scattered along the line in the Brownsville region, and the Seventeenth Infantry, doing border duty at Eagle Pass and that vicinity. He said he would at once order to Columbus also the first battalion of the Twenty-fourth Infantry and Troop L of the Tenth Cavalry, from Fort Alpache, Ariz.

Troop L is the only unit of the Tenth not now in Mexico. Of the first battalion of the Twenty-fourth Infantry, two companies are now at Fort Bliss, El Paso, one company at Fabens and one at Marfa.

This is the most extensive troop movement since the command of Pershing entered Mexico, and indicates an intention to be prepared for whatever may happen. It will give Pershing one of thel argest forces ever commander by an American brigadier-general.

BOY, 13, IS YOUNGEST ORGANIST IN KANSAS

Keep Close Watch on Him Because of His Liking For All Outdoor Sports.

Centralia, Kan.—Centralia people declare the town has the youngest church organist in the state and probably the only boy organist. Edward Everett is only thirteen years old, and when in his knee pants suit he walks up into the choir gallery on Sunday mornings strangers might think he was going to pump the church organ or maybe sing in a children's chorus, but would never suspect he was the church organist for a real grownup choir, including music supervisors and teachers.

And when he gets on the bench at the organ you cannot see even the top of his head, so the music gives one the impression of coming from the organ without any assistance. When the services are over and Edward walks out strangers are astonished. He shirks none of the regular program of the services, but plays voluntaries and anthems as well as the hymns, and chooses difficult, high class music.

Edward is by no means a sissy, and for that reason every precaution is being taken to make sure of his appearance at the service. He is very fond of baseball and all other sports. This town has had considerable difficulty in keeping its women organists.

PARROT ANNOUNCES VISITORS.

Unusual Intelligence of Bird Has Aroused Neighbors' Interest.

Pulaski, N. Y.—Mrs. M. L. Halladay of Mexico has a parrot thirty years old. The bird is unusually intelligent and has aroused much interest in this section of the state. The bird was brought out of Mexico when only four months old and shipped to Syracuse. The change of climate affected the bird, but it recovered. It was later taken to the village of Mexico, where much care and attention were given it.

If a person comes and knocks at the door of the Halladay home the parrot will announce the visitor, often calling the person at the door by name. When the bird is hungry it does not hesitate to announce the fact, and when there is any other discomfort the bird's wailings attract attention.

"My stomach, sire. Though I have satisfied its wants time without number, it never ceases to torment, and I am utterly incapable of meeting its demands."

The king was pleased with the joke and allowed the poet a pension on the spot.

DOES PRESIDENT'S NOTE MEAN WAR, IS TODAY'S QUESTION IN CONGRESS

Washington—"I have deemed it my duty to say to the Imperial German government that unless it should now immediately declare and effect an abandonment of its present methods of warfare against passenger and frieght carrying vessels this government can have no choice but to sever diplomatic relations with the government of the German Emperor altogether."

This is President Wilson's announcement to the American Congress and the American people of the ultimatum contained in the note of the government of the United States to the Imperial German government, which has been delivered to Ambassador Gerard at Berlin for prompt transmission to the German Foreign Office. It is an ultimatum in the sense that it presents to Germany its choice of just two things—abandonment of its illegal methods of warfare against merchant shipping or severaance of diplomatic relations with the United States— and calls for one of these two things "immediately." It is for Germany to decide.

As a preface to his announcement of the taking of this epoch marking step in the relations between the United States and Germany, President Wilson, when he addressed the Congress today, recited in detail the events that have made it necessary. He did not openly charge the German government with bad faith. He did assert that the facts in the case "are susceptible of but one interpretation," and this is that the German government " has been unable to put any limits or restraints upon its warfare against either freight or passenger ships."

Because the events of the more than eleven months which have followed that Lusitania note have proven the soundness of its contention that submarines cannot properly be used in warfare against commerce, the United States now demands immediate cessation of Germany's submarine warfare against commerce.

It demands an immediate declaration of German pupose to abandon this warfare. It places no specific time limit within which this declaration must be made, but this, in the opinion of the responsible officials of the American government, must be a matter of days only. It recognizes that "effecting" an abandonment of present methods may involve the delay incident to getting instructions to submarine commanders, but no such element of delay enters into the matter of "declaring" an abandonment.

FULTON PEOPLE ARE BEAUTIFYING FULTON

Evidently the thoughtof a beautiful Fulton has taken root. Last week Shipman's store disposed of six hundred rose bushes, one hundred clematis and several hundred bulbs.

Mr. Shipman announced that the demand for more rose bushes had been so strong that he was compelled to send for the seconnd lot. They arrived today and he states they will be placed on sale at once. This is surely an indication that our little city may truly bloom as a rose Those hundreds of rose bushes already transplanted to local soil will undoubtedly do their part when they begin to ramble and bloom.

Not more than 150 persons attended the afternoon tabernacle service yesterday and the collection was proportionately small, only $5.12. An increase of both items is noted for the evening, as the attendance reached 1400 and the offering $35.39. The evangelist demurred at the smallness of the offerings, telling his audience that an increase must be secured. A lot of improvement is noted in the chorus work since the campaign began. "Throw Out the Life Line," "Lead Me Gently Home," and "The Touch of His Hand on Mine," were numbers which aroused the singing ability of the evening audience whose singing and whistling prevented a "tired feeling." Responsive reading was given the 23rd Psalm, and the Rev. T. J. Williams of Mt. Pleasant offered prayer.

In view of the continued light attendance it has been decided to forego a meeting on Saturday afternoon, but not, however, the Friday afternoon preaching service.

The members of at least three of the evangelical churches purpose to meet at their respective churches and march in a body to the tabernacle next week, in the following order: First M. E. on Tuesday; Baptist on Wednesday; StateStreet on Thursday: Presbyterian on Friday.

During the week following the Congregational, Free Methodist and Salvation Army membership will meet at their respective houses of worship at 7:20 o'clock, to proceed to the tabernacle.

Evangelistic Peacock's evening sermon was as follows:

2nd Timothy, 1:6. Stir up the gift of God which is in thee God has given to every man what might be called a divine equipment for service. Some men make good use of this divine equipment, others let it dwindle and die. I think this is the thought in the mind of Paul when he penned these lines to Timothy. He says, "Stir up the gift of God which is within thee." In other words, Make good use of the equipment which God has given to you. God gives to every man some gift, be it great or small, and if this gift is used in the right way it will be a blessing, and if it is misused or not used at all it will be a curse. God has bestowed upon us gifts and it is our business to stir up the gift of God. Our intellects, our immaginations, our affections, our reason, our will's, all of these things are the gift of God. They are God bestowed. And the reason some people are stronger along these lines than others, is because they keep stirring up the gift of God. God has never left any one without some gift. The trouble with a great many people is just to find out what the gift is. We might be very weak along many lines and yet be very strong along one certain line. Now it is not the amount of gifts we possess, but the use we make of these gifts which counts. Dr. Halloway says, "No matter what our resources may be, unless we can commend them they are vain. What is good is not as good as it may be until it has become good for all time." No man gets very rich by hoarding gold, but by investing it. The mechanic becomes skilled, not simply because he has that power from the beginning, but because he applies his genius to his work. Men become wise not simply by reading books, but by storing up in memory the things they read. A certain man made the remark when talking with a friend that he had read the Bible through several times. The friend replied: "It is not the mumber of times you read the Bible through, it is what you get out of it when you read it that counts." I might read all the books in the world, but if I cannot retain what I read, my reading will not amount to very much. It is the power to lay hold of a thing when you read it which counts. Many people with one talent have made a greater success out of life than others with five and ten talents. I do not mean to speak disparagingly of the person with many talents. But often times, people with very strong intellects make failures while people who are not nearly so brilliant make life a grand success. The trouble with many people is they misuse or neglect to use the gift of God which is in them. The man who knows how to make use of what he has is the man who is going to make a success. And the man who knows how to do one thing, and do it well, is a better man in every sense of the word than the man who can do twenty different things at once and not half do any of them. We all have talents. Probably some of us just have one talent, but if we make the right kind of use of this talent we will be superior to the people who have many, and misuse or misdirect them. None of us have completely discovered ourselves. Probably this is a good thing in many respects. If we really knew all our power we might think failure an impossibilitq, and misuse our gift of not use it at all. There are possibilities undeveloped in every individual in the world, and some people haven't any conception of the power latent in them. The Apostle Paul had no knowledge of the power he would exert in the world for good, when God struck him down on the way to Damascus. He never dreamed for a moment that he would be the greatest of all the apostles in the service of Jesus Christ. When Abraham Lincoln was splitting rails, and driving oxen, and working on boats, had he any knowledge of the wonderful influence he would exert in the world? Did he know that God Almighty would use him to free the slaves? Probably he had a vision from God, I do not know. But I do know that when he went into the slave market in the south and saw human being sold like horses and mules, husbands and wives forever separated, children never again to look into the face of father and mother, he went out of that auction room with his blood on fire and said to his fellow boatmen, "if I ever get a chance to hit that thing, I'll hit it hard, by the eternal God." At the time those words were spoken Abraham Lincoln was the most unlikely peoson in the world to hit the slave traffic. He was poor. He had no influence. The slave business had a terrific hold in the country, but he kept stirring up the gift of God which was in him, and lived to see the day when he mad good his statement. George Smith, Jr., says: Abraham Lincoln, like David of old, was divinely led from obscurity to the very highest place in the land. Away back there in that little log cabin God and His angels watched over that humble birth and guided that precious life

PUT ON THE WHOLE ARMOR OF GOD; STAND AGAINST THE WILES OF THE DEVIL

Evangelist Peacock's sermon yesterday afternoon was in part as follows:

Not so long since in talking with a man who has no connection with any church, he raised an objection to the martial view of the Christian life. He said the ministers upheld the spirit of war when they should preach the gospel of peace. All of these objectors point you to Jesus Christ as the Prince of Peace, and claim that His disciples should be wholly peaceable. They should be as wise as serpents and as harmless as doves and just let the evil and wickedness of this world go on without saying anything about it. But such individuals forget the words of Jesus when He said: "I am come to bring not Peace but a sword." He came to comfore the sorrowful and the dying. But He does not mean for men and women to stand aside and look upon the wickedness of the world without opposing it. He has commanded His followers to put on the armor of God that they may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil.

Oppose All Ungodliness

Jesus Christ was a fearless opponent of iniquity in high places and in low places, and He has commanded His disciples to fight the good fight of faith. We have no record in the Word of God or in any other book of Jesus Christ making any compromise with sin. Jesus was opposed to every form of sin and condemned every form of sin and was not slow to pronounce the frath of God upon It. Now every true followeer of Jesus Christ is the enemy of all wickedness and no man can be a follower of Jesus Christ unless he is opposed to all forms of ungodliness. He may be a follower of the meek and lowly Jesus and give his consent to certain forms of sin but he is only a professed follower and he is not sincere in the step he has taken The individual putting on thew hole armor of God hates every form of sin and will constantly make war against it.

For we wrestle not only against flesh and blood but against principalities and powers, against rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places and he knows that it is necessary for him to put on the whole armor of God in order to be successful. And he must stand by the cross of Jesus Christ under all circumstances in this life. This is the first lesson the Christian soldier must learn, to stand and hold his ground.

In the first charge upon the enemy there is an excitement which nerves men upto such a tension that they forget their danger. They have no time to thing. But it is a very difficult thing to stand in the ranks and see the line of the foe sweeping against you, watching them come nearer and nearer, estimating the very moment the shock must come and yet stand fast and in the face of fixed bayonets and flashing sabers, hold your ground.

There is no provision made for the Christian's retreat. It is to be all standing or charging. Paul tells the Christian to take thew hole armor of God, but there is one particular thing about that armor. There is the breast plate and the shield and the helmet. The head and the front of the body well protected but nothing is mentioned for a protection for the back that was never to be turned toward the enemy. It was never to be exposed. There is no such thing as retreat for the true child of God. The armor of God consists of six things, the girdle of truth, the breast-plate of righteousness, the sandals of the gospel of peace, the shielc of faith, the helmet of salvation and the sword of the spirit. This is the equipment God has provided for those who put on His armor. And unless we have all these things we have not on the armor of God, and we are not equiped to stand against the wiles of thed evil.

The girdle of truth is very essential. Men and women must be truthful in order to fight for God. We cannot take one step in Christian progress without it. It is essential to salvation and the captain of our salvation demands it. The lack of this girdle is a sign something is not right.

See to Your Armor

The breast-plate of righteousness is essential also. Not self-righteousness but righteousness as it is in God. A breast-plate of self-righteousness would certainly be a very poor thing. And many persons in this world have had their hearts pierced through by the fiery darts of the evil one, because they had on the armor of self-righteousness of God, as it is in Christ Jesus. The self-righteous person needs to be converted and completely turned around and brought back to God. And when he sees himself as God sees him he will realize that his armor is defective annd that he has not on the whole armor of God.

Now another thing that is essential to have our feet shod with the gospel of peace. There are many people in this world who have religion in their heads and they have it in their coats, but when it comes to the feet they are Christless. They have not on the sandals of Christ's gospel and are unable to tramp sin down. They walk right into sin and are unable to resist the wiles of the devil, because they have no Christ in their feet. They may have part of the armor of God but they are in danger. We hear a great deal in this day and generation about religions of the heart and religion of the head, and men will argue it is not a thing of the heart, but it is a thing of the head. But my friends the head and the heart are not the only places we should have religion, we should have in our entire being, from the soles of our feet to the crown of our heads and unless we have Christ in our soul and body, we are not good soldiers of the cross Christ takes the whole man and woman, soul and body and unless we give ourselves to Him wholly and entirely and measure up to the standard which God has set, we have not on the armor of God.

Mr. Thompson tells us, at the close of the war in 1866, the triumphant army of Prussia came to Berlin, where it was accorded a welcome. As each regiment approached the city gates it was halted by a choir demanding by what right it should enter. The regiment replied in song reciting the battle it had fought and the victories it had won. Then came a voice from the choir, saying: "Enter into the city." And so the next came up reciting its deeds and another, each challenged and welcomed. They marched up, lined between the rows of captured cannon, with the banners they had taken and they saluted the statute of grand old Frederick the creator of Prussia. So it will be with us, my friends, when we come to the gates of the city of God, when all the fierce warfare of earth shall have been accomplished, and the Kingdom of Christ assured the Phalanxes of His church shall go to the city with songs and tokens of victory. They shall march in together singing Halleujah and shall lay their trophies at the feet of Him upon whose head are many crowns. The King of Kings and Lords of Lords.

LABOR UNIONS ARE PROGRESSIVE

The uneasy conditions affecting the labor world right now, particularly in the neighboring city of Syracuse, do not quite bear out the truth of the caption to this article—but nevertheless, there are progressive unions of workingmen whose desire it is to bring their membership up to a high state of citizenship, which of course benefits everybody concerned.

One of the leading unions of the country, the International Printing Pressmen, is right now attracting considerable attention as a body of men with faces set in the direction of progression. Recently the union has added to its equipment at Rogersville, Tenn., a sanitarium. This building is erected on a 1000-acre tract on which are other buildings for the betterment of conditions of the infirm and for the increased efficiency among its active members.

The Printing Pressmen's Union has gone further than this, however, as it has in full working order a trade school at the same place which is among the most notable trade schools of the country. More than $200,000 has been expended in perfecting the school and installing machinery necessary to its equipment. The valuable part of the scheme is that at the Rogersville institution apprentices, and journeymen as well, are given an opportunity at the school to increase their efficiency as mechanics.

The plant is contradictory of opinions held by many persons that labor unions are the result of dreams of avarice; that the men comprising the organizations are shiftless and thoughtless, for at Rogersville the school is complete in every detail and is practically independent and self-sustaining. It forms an interesting evidence of broad vision, showing to the world that the pressmen of America are going the limit in their educational program to increase the value of the services of their active members.

The incentive to establish the school in Tennessee was given by a Philadelphia publisher, a philanthropist in his day. That man, George W. Childs, choose to become a benefactor of the American workingman by making gifts of practical value rather than by clawing the air in vain endeavor to swell the ranks of the Big Brotherhood.

BEATING THE GAME

BY HERBERT KAUFMAN
(In N. Y. American)

She didn't stand a show—the cards were stacked against her at birth. She entered life by a crooked path. Her mother was a receiver of stolen goods. Their home was a thieves' meeting place. She played on the sidewalks of an unspeakable street. When she was old enough they sent her out as a shoplifter, and in time she married a cracksman.

Nobody ever more strongly vindicated the theory that criminals are born, not made.

But you folks who are cocksure that it's so may prepare for a jolt on the solar-plexus of that particular conviction.

Sophie Lyons beat the game. She bucked the odds and won—triumphed over environment, ancestry and rearing—turned the past into a door mat, wiped the mud off her feet and took the clean, straight road. Her talents, legitimately directed, made her a rich woman. Remarried, she established herself in business and accumulated a fortune. Now she is building a wonderful home for wayward girls.

What's that—unfair to dig into her record at this late day? Why, bless you, she's been telling all about it herself. Sophie Lyons isn't ashamed to acknowledge what she was—she's far too proud of what she is. A wrong start doesn't count when you finish right.

THE INFLUENCE OF ONE MAN UPON OTHERS

"As iron sharpeneth iron, so one man sharpeneth another."—Proverbs, xxvii., 17.

A principle of stupendous, practical value is embodied in these Biblical words. Tersely stated, it is this:—Each man exerts an influence, for good or ill, upon the life, the character, the ideals of his fellowman. That we are dependent one upon the other in a material sense is a truism that our day is beginning to realize. The man who in overweening pride exclaims, "I am thoroughly independent," is the most deluded of mortals. Every implement we use, every variety of food we eat, every book we read, every comfort we enjoy at once links us to all the ages past and to all the millions of toilers whom often we would forget and ignore. But not only materially and intellectually, but morally and spiritually as well, are linked one to the other, and our very happiness or misery is conditioned and influenced by those about us. Each of us is not only one of the heirs of all the past, but also one of the shapers of all the future, and life may be defined as a continuous stream of influence that flows, either clear or turbid, into other lives.

What an atmosphere of moral purity a good man casts about him His very presence is a most forceful argument in favor of righteousness. He moves among men, winning them for God and goodness, without uttering a word, Washington won his greatest victories not by the power of his words, but by the silent yet irresistible influence of his personality. Abraham Lincoln has mounted to the very throne of immortality not because he was a master stylist, but because he was a master character whose influence will forever inspire truth and trust.

Alas, that the opposite is equally true; wickedness enkindleth wickedness. You may not think yourself capable of meanness, but just move among mean men who turn a coin a dozen times before they give it, who lift themselves by slandering others, who fawn and flatter and pretend, and though at first you turn away in disgust from them you will gradually find yourself, almost unconsciously, imitating their trickeries and deceptions.

Now, the influence that each man exerts upon his fellow is of a twofold character. It is primarily a direct and voluntary one. But often more efficient, because more subtle and insinuating, is man's unpurposed, unconscious influence. It is the influence of personality rather than of plan, of being father than of doing. A cheerful, hopeful person is a happiness producer. He is to other hearts and homes what the honeysuckle is to the door over which it twines. He furnishes smiles and sweetness, courage and patience without being aware of it himself. Conversely, a moody, ill tempered, suspicious, selfish person fills the whole house and office with gloom, suspicion and ill will. He unconsciously affects all who come into contact with him, like a chilly or humid day. Thus life influences life and each human being is like a wireless mechanism transmitting currents of energy for good or ill in all directions.

What a tremendous responsibility rests upon you and me in consequence of this great principle of life's influence! Let us face the fact—what we are others will be! Our characters are but the quarries out of which others will hew the stones for the structure of their own lives. On bended knee let us pray, "O God, keep me from sin, not for my sake alone, butf or the sake of others."

WORKING OVERTIME—FOR BILLY

"Every devil that hell can spare is in Baltimore!" shouts the Rev. "Billy" Sunday by way of driving benighted residents of that city to "the trail" and to the contribution box.

Baltimoreans have no need of becominng excited over the menace. "Billy's" devils will in due time move on with him to the next stand.—N. Y. Herald.

"WAR IS HELL!"

Don't blame your wife if your buttons drop off. Good linen thread comes only from Belgium; and the war has cut off the supply.

Don't be surprised if your evening paper, once white, has a pale, straw-colored complexion. The blue dye used to tint yellow paper fibre is unobtainable—on account of the war.

Those matches you used to buy a dozen boxes for a nickel, have gone to 7 cents. A war shortage of chemicals is to blame.—Herkimer Telegram.

WOMEN VOTE FOR ROOSEVELT

That women are naturally pacific is a fact upon which optimists base their belief that the spread of woman suffrage in the world tends toward the eventual establishment of universal peace. But those who deduce from this generalization the belief that the women of the United States are for the most part antagonistic to national preparedness jump to a conclusion that is not tenable. The recent presidential primaries in Illinois bore testimony to the fact that the women of that state, far from being "mollycoddles," are more devoted to the cause of preparedness than the men. In Cook County, for example, a larger percentage of the ballots cast by women was for Roosevelt than of those cast by men. The 1.831 Cook County women who expressed their preference for Roosevelt for president did so avowedly upon the preparedness issue.—N. Y. Sun.

THAT METRIC SYSTEM AGAIN

The National Bureau of Standards of Weights and Measures will hold its eleventh annual convention in Washington from May 23d to 26th. It is expected that delegates from nearly every state in the Union will be present. Dr. S. W. Stratton, head of the berueau, will preside. Among the subjects to be discussed will be the possible adoption of the metric system by the United States.

This is a subject which has already caused a great deal of controversy. Many persons think that any change from our present system of measurements would be impractical and unnecessary. Unexpected objections are brought up. For instance, one S. S. Dale asks: "Let those who advocate the change explain how they would alter the screw-threads of the country. How would they change the screw-threads on hydrants and hose couplings to a metric basis, keeping in mind the metric threads will not fit the English?"

Advocates of the metric system are by no means lacking. As a rule they do not recommend a sudden change, but think that steps should immediately be taken for its gradual adoption. One of the friends of the metric system makes the following analogical argument in its favor: "The correct idea of efficiency as I see it, is that shown by the Pennsylvania railroad when it discarded six enormous engines newly purchased because of a much improved engine which was put on the market immediately after these were bought. It figured that its temporary loss, enormous though it was, would not be as great as that caused by using an inferior engine when it could get a better."

Apparently the question is still far from a satisfying solution. The government will certainly consider a long time before adopting and enforcing a change which would cause such monumental inconvenience to the country. Would the results justify the pains? Probably not, at present. But the metric system has made great headway in Europe, and modern methods of ocean transports and communication are bringing about closer relations between Europe and the United States. The time may come when there will be a real need for a system of measurements common to all civilized nations. The question seems to belong rather to the future than to the present.—Rochester Chronicle and Democrat.

Duration of a Wink.

The time occupied by the several phases of the movement has been measured, and it is found that the mean duration of the descent of the lid is from seventy-five to ninety one-thousandths of a second.

The interval while the eye is shut was in one case only fifteen-hundredths of a second. The rising of the lid occupies seventeen-hundredths of a second. A specially arranged photographic apparatus was used. The popular phrase that something is done "quicker than a wink" is therefore expressive to a degree that may be stated in fractions of a second.—Washington Star.

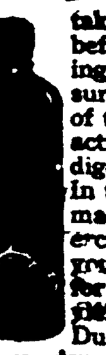
Do You Know the Benefits of a Medicinal Whiskey?

Not a beverage, mind you, but an absolutely pure distillation of thoroughly malted select grain. In fact, a predigested food in liquid form—for such is Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. During 56 years, it has been a recognized standard tonic and stimulant for the sick and ailing, the weak and run down; recommended by both physicians and the laity as a wonderful promoter of health.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey



taken in tablespoonful doses before meals and on retiring, stimulates the mucous surfaces and little glands of the stomach to healthy action, thereby assisting digestion and assimilation. In this manner the body is made strong and fit for exercise and work. Don't say you're "Not feeling well," for many human ailments yield to the judicious use of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey where drugs and other medicines fail. Just as thousands of others do, you'll feel fit and fine if you,

HELD UP WEDDING

Couple Ate Ham and Eggs Waiting For Marrying Justice.

LOST A NIGHT AUTO RACE.

Greenwich (Conn.) Justice Refused Pleas For Him to Get Up, and So Couple Got Something to Eat and Waited In City Hall Till Morning.

New York.—Traveling a good part of the night by automobile only to arrive too late to be married and breaking the monotopy of the long wait till morning by eating ham and eggs ordered from a lunch wagon, Mr. and Mrs. Earl R. Fisher arrived in this city, having been joined in matrimony early in the morning by Justice of the Peace Albert F. Mead at Greenwich, Conn.

Mr. Fisher is from Providence, R. I., and Mrs. Fisher is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Livernois of Worcester, Mass. She was educated in a convent school at Nicolet, Canada. They met in Providence recently at a dance. Mr. Fisher is connected with a fireproofing company.

When seen at their hotel the young people said the courtship in its serious phase had started only two months before their marriage.

"Three days after deciding to enter the matrimonial sea we came to New York," Mrs. Fisher said, "and our original plan was to be married in Jersey City. But we were told that a twenty-four hour interval between the license and the marriage was required in Jersey, so we telephoned Captain Talbert, the chief of police at Greenwich, and he said to come right ahead.

"We set out shortly after dinner and after driving through the rain arrived in Greenwich about 2 o'clock. Captain Talbert received us at the town hall, but at that late hour the justice of the peace, who was necessary to the ceremony, refused to be wakened. So we waited in the town hall."

"About 4 o'clock," said Mr. Fisher, "we all decided we were quite hungry and went out and had 'ham and' at a lunch wagon, this being the only thing in sight resembling a restaurant.

"When the day got under way the justice of the peace appeared and we were married. We started back to New York and had a real breakfast."

Miss Crystal Sheperd, a moving picture actress, and Ray Howard of New York were the witnesses. The eloping was done in Mr. Howard's limousine.

"There was no particular objection to our getting married," said the bride, "but we feared Earl might soon have to go to China in connection with his work, and we weren't taking any chances."

ROMANCE OF A BUTTON.

Left With a Note Where It Was Found It Brings a Wedding.

Gardner, Kan. — When James H. Newston, a banker of Williamstown, Utah, punctured a tire on his motorcar he was forced to remain two days in Edgerton, near here. While walking along the road Newston found a button of a woman's coat. He wrote this note and hung it and the button on a fencepost:

The owner of this button has found a place in my heart.

Laura Ellsworth, a schoolteacher, the owner of the button, found it and the note. She took the button and left this message:

Tomorrow this button will be worn over my heart.

Newston found the second note. He was introduced to Miss Ellsworth. He proposed, was accepted and married. He is now on his way to San Francisco on his honeymoon, driving overland in his car.

OLD MAN CAVE DWELLER.

Sleeps on Bed Made of Leaves and Some Dry Vegetation.

Fulton, Mo.—H. B. Bode, deputy state highway commissioner, has discovered that Callaway county has a cave dweller in one of the bluffs in the hills northwest of Cedar city.

Curious children first discovered the man when they cautiously crept up to the mouth of the cave and found him sleeping on leaves and dried vegetation. His fire smoldered near the entrance to the cave, and near at hand were some primitive cooking utensils fashioned out of stone.

During the day he carries load after load of fagots and logs to keep his fire going, and apparently he lives in comfort. Children reported him to be a kind looking man, with a long beard.

PROOF OF DOG'S DEATH ASKED

Human Heirs Will Be Given Estate If They Produce It.

Lacrosse, Wis.—The absence of a corpus delicti has once again tangled up the proceedings in Wisconsin's oddest will case, the bequest of the estate of Mrs. Mary Johnson to her pet dog Willie. She cut off two brothers, a sister and a niece to give the property to the dog, but the dog died before the will was probated.

Relatives claimed the estate, but there was no record of the dog's death filed in the health department. The court has ruled that when the contestants can produce the man who buried Willie they will be given the estate.

Greets Twenty-fourth Child.

Woodland, Cal.—Lucio Sernia, a Spanish resident, has become the father of his twenty-fourth child. The latest arrival is a boy, making twenty-one girls and three boys in the family. Sernia is sixty-two.

KINDNESS.

Life is short, and we have never too much time for gladdening the hearts of those who are traveling the same dark journey with us. Oh, be swift to love! Make haste to be kind!
—Amiel.

Scene from "LOVE'S CROSS ROA DS" at the Quirk Today.

"Love's Cross Roads," which is at the Quirk Theatre today, as the next Equitable release, is a remarkable production in several ways. Miss Marie Empress, the star of the piece, is a remarkably effective actress, especially along lines similar to those called for in this picture. The story itself is a remarkable illustration of certain phases of the underside of a great city, the climaxes are remarkable in their effectiveness, and the last scene of the play is a remarkable way of solving a difficulty which all through the story holds one in suspense. The great photo drama is full of thrilling situations and tense, gripping moments, and the career of a woman who in the midst of gorgeous, glittering, although criminal surroundings, comes to love a man who is upright and honest, and is in love with a girl of his own class in life, and how the futility of that love finally leads the siren to death as the crowning sacrifice, give a wide scope to the abilities of the actress, the director, the photographer, and the author of the book, all of which have been taken full advantage of. The story is convincingly told and beautifully illustrated.

"THE GARDEN OF ALLAH" IN OSWEGO IN MAY

"The Garden of Allah" will be at the Richardson, Tuesday and Wednesday nights and Wednesday matinee, May 2d and 3d. This takes high rank as a scenic production forming the background for the large company of players, camels, horses, donkeys, pigeons, etc., all of which it will require five large baggage cars to transport from city to city.

The first curtain will go up on a scene entitled, "The Spirit of the Desert," an early dawn scene on the desert. The caravan of a Sheik of the desert moving slowly across the stage, includes Arabians imported especially for this play, five camels, together with many horses, shaggy donkeys and goats. As the sun rises, the Sheik descends from his camel and prays to Allah.

The second scene is of a hotel veranda on the edge of the desert, with large, real palm trees in the foreground. The third scene is of a street in Ouled Nailes. The fourth scene is of the interior of an Arabian shop, with its gathering of Arabians and dancers, incense, flute and drum music, producing a rarely realistic atmosphere.

The garden of Count Anteoni, in the second act, is the true Garden of Allah, and one of the most beautiful scenes in the play. In the third act occurs the famous sandstorm on the desert, and although being a bleak, bare desert scene, it is surpassing in its beauty and magic scenic effects. The outside of a Trappist monastery, near Tunis, furnishes the scene for the last act. Attention to details throughout the performance has done much to make this the most wonderful scenic spectacle of the modern stage, as has been proclaimed by critics everywhere. The entire production and cast is exactly, in every detail, as presented at the Century Theatre, New York City, for a run of one year. Regular sale Saturday, April 29th.

Special excursion arrangements will be in effect during the above engagement. Mail orders filled now if accompanied by remittances and self addressed envelope.

GARNO-BURGARD CASE UP FOR SECOND TRIAL

LOW POSTAL CHARGES TO CHINA'S PORTS

It probably is not known to some persons that a letter may be sent to Shanghai, China, if it does not pass through Siberia, for 2 cents an ounce. There are few places in the world outside the United States and its possessions, where mail may be sent so cheaply as to this Chinese port.

Postoffice officials say they do not know precisely why this is. There is an American postoffice in Shanghai, but this fact does not fully explain the low postage. Assistant-Postmaster Fleckenstein said yesterday that it was probable that at the time of the Boxer trouble that the transfer of American troops to Shanghai and the possibility of encouraging American commerce in China might have been causes for this reduced rate.

While the postage on packages sent by parcel post is greater than to any point in this vicinity, it is no higher than that on packages sent to California, or anywhere else in the eighth zone. This is regulated at the rate of 12 cents a pound. To many foreign countries the low parcel post rates prevail up to eleven pounds, only, but to Shanghai, mail that weighs twenty pounds may be sent at this rate.

If, however, a letter bound for Shanghai is addressed "via Siberia," or "via Europe and Siberia," or otherwise indicates a trans-Siberian route, the rate is 5 cents for the first ounce and 3 cents for each additional ounce. Shanghai is 9,920 miles from New York.

The Phillippine Islands are on the opposite side of the earth, but postage to points there is at the same rates as to places in the United States because the islands are American territory. The same rul efor postage obtains in sending mail to Alaska and the Hawaiian Islands.

NEWTONS SPEAK WORDS OF PRAISE FOR CARSON

"We are in position to say that the Second Concert of Fulton Symphony Orchestra will be a big success, musically.

"The orchestra has improved greatly in many respects since our first concert and we have reliable information that the New York soloists, John Finnegan and Mary Carson, are worth going far to hear. We have never heard Miss Carson or Mr. Finnegan but in talking to reliable judges of music who have, we learn Mr. Finnegan possesses a voice of rare quality and is considered superior to John McCormack, with one exception—reputation.

WARE BROTHERS ESCAPED INJURY

William Osborne the Hero of a Tussel With a Colt as His Opponent.

The experience gained in the past by William Osborne, ex-police and fire commissioner in raising horses, proved to be of valuable assistance yesterday when an unruly colt belonging to the Ware Brothers was subdued by Mr. Osborne. The colt had partially demolished the rig to which it was attached, placing the Wares in danger of being injured.

The colt was being "broken in" by the brothers and no difficulty was experienced with the animal until the corner of W. 1st st. and Broadway was reached. There the young horse reared high in the air and losing its equilibrium fell heavily to the ground, in the fall smashing the thills, harness and the front of the rig. The horse's struggles about the pavement prevented the two men from alighting from the rig. Mr. Osborne was the only person to see the incident and he went to the assistance of the Wares. For several minutes a lively struggle enisted between the colt and Mr. Osborne whose efforts to hold the horse's head to the pavement until them en in the rig could assist him proved unavailing. Finally he conquered and the three men were able to control the horse.

Mr. Osborne accepted the thanks of the brothers but appeared unconcerned regarding his risky performance.

HOWARD CLAIR ABOARD THE U. S. S. NEVADA

Ploughing the seven seas on board the superdreadnaught Nevada, one of our newest, most powerful and formidable fighting ships, is Howard Claire, of this place.

Howard, who is a son of George Claire, R. D. No. 2, Fulton, enlisted in the United States Marine Corps at its Syracuse recruiting station on July 12, 1915. Marines wear a distinctively military uniform, and they perform a soldier's duties while roving the seas aboard ship. They are always first landed when trouble threatens, and they bear the brunt of the initial fighting. Usually these "soldiers of the sea" are able to cope with any situation that may arise aboard without having to call in the army to assist.

Young Claire has had many interesting experiences and adventures as a member of that gallant organization "the oldest branch of the service."

JAIL HAS NO TERROR FOR OSWEGO MAN

Syracuse—George A. Guile, a prominent Oswego man, pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Judge Ray yesterday morning charged with shipping diseased meat out of the State. He was ordered held in $500 bail for trial.

Mr. Guile claims that the meat was in good condition when he shipped it.

There were half a dozen others arraigned on similar charges and all paid fines. In most cases the Court found that the meat shipped was thought to be in good condition, but on its arrival in New York city was found by inspectors to be tubercular.

MAKE GOOD USE OF EQUIPMENT

until the hour came and the great Emancipator was called to set at liberty them that were bound. No institution of learning had the honor of enrolling then ame of Absaham Lincoln. In God's great school his mind was developed and trained for the mighty work he was to do, and earnestly did he apply himself to those lessons, and courageously did he overcome those obstacles and meet those trials that came to him day by day, till atl ast he who had been faithful unto death received his Master's crown of Life.

Becomea Leader

This can be true of others besides Abraham Lincoln. You make good use of your God given opportunities, stir up the gift of God which is within you, and God will permit success to come to you. Mirabeau was forty years old before he discovered himself, then he became the greatest orator of his day. King Edward was supposed to be a spoiled boy, with no ambition only to set the fashion, and have a good time, until he came to the throne, then he developed into a master of diplomacy and leader of men. These men whom I have mentioned did not come to themselves simply by chance. The powers were there. All that was necessary was something to stir them up. These men possessed the power, and when the opportunity came they used this power. Many people have never developed their powers, and the world does not know they have such power. Men quite frequently surprise themselves. They surprise other people. All they need is some crisis to stir them up. Theg ift is there, waiting to be employed. This is true of many people in the world. The world is poor because we have so many unused talents. Young men and women and old men and women have opportunities, but they just let them slip away. Our unused talents are just the same as unpossessed. Some one has said "Very many of us have large tracts of unoccupied territory, unrealized possibilities, blessings that are ours and yet not ours. One large part of the discipline of life is to teach men how to master and use their own possessions. Dr. Watson was once asked to give a list of the six greatest men of hitory. This is what he said. "One opened the kingdom of letters with his poems; another asked of us the deepest questions of the soul in his dialogues; a third opened for us a new world and doubled our dwelling place; a fourth expounded the secrets of the physical universe and arrainged the stars on a map; a fifth cleansed away the corruption of the church and restored her strength; and a sixth, greatest of all, showed unto the world righteousness, and wrote the ten words of our conscience. The names of Homer, Socrates, Columbus and Copernicus, of Luther and Moses, can never be blotted from the pages of history. They belong to no country. They belong to the world and their fame is ageless. These men had an aim in life. They were willing to make good use of the talents God has given them, and God gave them the victory. God had a purpose in creating every one of us, and it has been the business of man to discover why God put him here. If you have made this discovery you are very fortunate. Very few people discover why they have been placed in this world until it is time for them to leave it. And I am sorry to say that some of them never seem to know why they are here.

Solomon once said: "There is nothing new under the sun." I think he was about right. Everything is old. Our newest discoveries are old. God has created these things long ago. We are just discovering them. God placed all these things in the world for man to use, but man has been a long time in finding out about them. Think how long it took man to discover electricity. Electricity had been in the world since the beginning. And when men did discover electricity he did not know how to use it or what to do with it. The same is true with air. The only thing people used to think air was for was to breath. Now it is used in many different ways. It took the people of this world a long time to discover steam and it's uses. The steam has been here ready for use, but no person knew how to use it. And so we might go on mentioning the different discoveries men have made in the centuries gone by, and the discoveries they will make in the future, but let us remember that God is the creator of all these things and not man. Man is simply finding out the things God has placed here for his use. The only difference between the people of today and the people in the beginning is this: The people of today have learned how to command theirr esources. This is a great lesson. And when every man and woman in the world masters this lesson. this world will be a different place. Have you learned this lesson? Do you know how to command your resources? Can you make good use of the God has given to you? Are you stirring up that gift? Will your life be a benediction to the world? Have you an aim in life? What are you here for? Have you discovered that God has a purpose in every life? Are you willing to let God use you? Are you saying to the master of your soul: "Here am I, send me. Use my gift in any way you desire. Use me in such a way that my life will be a benediction to humanity." My friends, the spiritual application of this text to my mind and is very important. Paul said to Timothy: "Stir up the gift of God which is in you." In other words, "Make good use of your God given talent."

Some people have no command of their resources in a spiritual way. They act as though they had no spiritual resources. They excuse themselves by refering to their inability. If one should refer to their inability along other lines, thye would be very much insulted. Moody once said: "Many people try to excuse themselves by saying they do not have much ability when they should say, they are lazy." Many young men and women do not try to make themselves useful. They are very enthusiastic along other lines. but when it comes to doing things for God they are of no value. Let me remind you that you will never amount to much unless you are willing to live according to the teachings of Jesus Christ. You many know all about science, art, literature, languages and whatnot, but if you fail to live according to the teachings of Jesus Christ, and shut Him out of your life, you will be a failure. Get rid of the idea here and now that all you learn and all you get is for yourself. Get the noble thought which must give you the highest impulses of which your being is capable, that all you learn and all you get is for your fellow man. When once that thought [illegible] on you, and begins to work out it's high results in your life, you will be useful and happy, and you may be also famous, imortal you certainly will be ,because you will always live in the lives of those whom you have helped. If on the other hand you allow Satan to bind you in the shackles of selfishness, your life may surround itself with great heaps of material wealth; but you will starve your soul and you will be poor in all that makes life rich for God and eternity. To serve God best and help man most, and obtain the highest results of which your being is capable, you must always recognize your personal responsibility to God. One evening at a banquet table a great statesman and orator was asked what he considered the greatest thought that ever entered his mind. An expression of unusual thoughtfulness came into that remarkable face as he slowly and solemnly said: "The thought of man's personal responsibility to a personal God." Unless you have this feeling, my friends, you will fail. This thought will be more to you than gold in making your life a factor in the world's good, fore than talen in bringing your greatest success; more than fame in bringing highest satisfaction. When you step off life's stage it will bring to your immortal hearing the applause of the angels, even though men should be silent, and the great Masters plaudits: Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord.

Sure of a Job.

It was a new kind of a recommendation for a servant, but very effective. The old employer said nothing about her accomplishments as cook, waitress, laundress or chambermaid. What she wrote was:

"She is as strong as a man and twice as brave. Three times while in our employ she captured burglars single handed and held them until the police arrived and saved hundreds of dollars' worth of silver and jewelry."

All the manager of the employment agency had to do when that girl needed a situation was to read that letter out loud, and there ensued a wild scramble among his customers for the strong fisted maid.—Pittsburgh Press.

"Did Kipling ever steal one of my corncob pipes?" said the late Mark Twain once.

"Never, and if he says so he's wrong. He tried to steal one and failed; then he tried to steal another, but I prevented the theft and gave it to him, probably the only pipe that Kipling ever got honestly."

Your Handwriting Shows What You Are

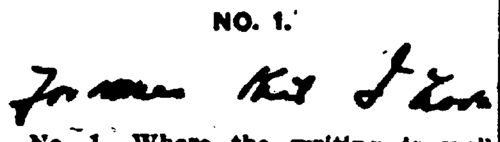
By WILLIAM LESLIE FRENCH

2.—Reason and Logic.

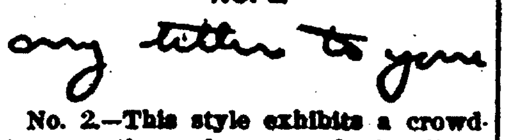
THE average person recognizes his friends and acquaintances by their gestures, gait, voices and other mannerisms, but a specimen of writing will reveal an individual's entire personality if it is carefully studied.

NO. 1.



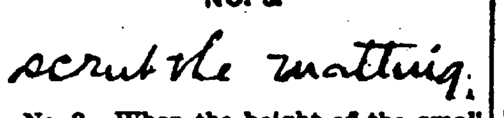
No. 1.—Where the writing is well balanced, letters of words perfectly connected—and sometimes the words also—and the low letters low, it indicates an excellent reasoning faculty, logic and strong power of concentration.

NO. 2.



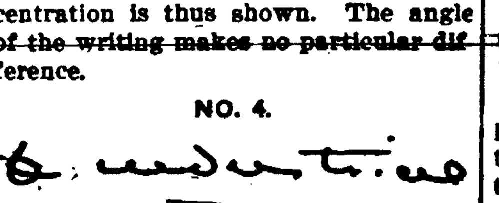
No. 2.—This style exhibits a crowding together of some of the lines, more or less confusion of thought, and the occasional breaks between the letters of words signify a break or tendency to break in carrying out an idea. True, the very small, low letters give considerable power of application, but they vary as the angle of slope varies—the sign of vacillation. Persons exhibiting such signs are not very sure of themselves. Young people showing the same should be taught to concentrate.

NO. 3.



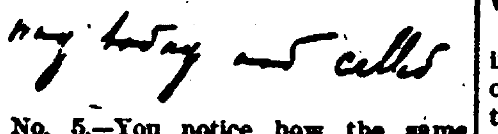
No. 3.—When the height of the small letters is large or even varies in size the tendency is to have a good grasp on generalities, but not much ability for analysis or details. Such get a fair idea of a subject, and sometimes very soon, as in this case, for the writing is fleet in form, but the power of application varies. Of course where even and strong pressure exists then the writer has the will to achieve also. And it helps when the laxity of concentration is thus shown. The angle of the writing makes no particular difference.

NO. 4.



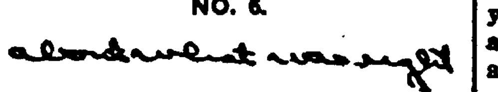
No. 4.—Even though this pressure is very heavy and pretty equally distributed—will power—the marked separation of many letters shows intuition and the tendency to act upon first impressions, to jump at conclusions, and this interferes with the self control mentally and weakens the ordinary balance, which would otherwise appear in the upright script.

NO. 5.



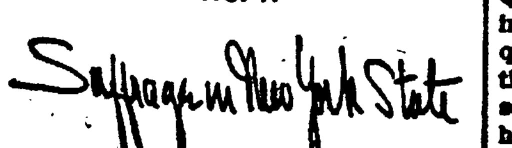
No. 5.—You notice how the same formation appears in this specimen, how the writer jerks his words apart. Well, even though intelligence and reasoning power are shown by the fine connections, this habit breaks in and destroys to a marked degree his thinking capacity. His mind would hesitate.

NO. 6.



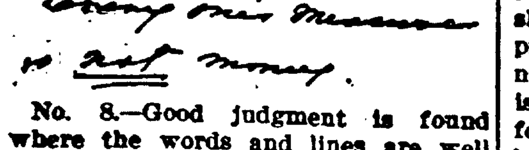
No. 6.—This vertical type always indicates that mind will govern in preference to emotions, provided that the writing is not loose, irregular or grossly muddy or splashy. Here you find a steady balance—intellect ruling—and the minute fashion of making all letters. Those who write like this have usually keen mental powers unless some very unusual sign appears, such as too much application of ink as a regular thing.

NO. 7.



No. 7.—You can see that in this the writer is upright from one angle, but the breaks between the letter connections, the wide-away sweep of the entire writing, show that intuition and explosion of attitude would modify the intellectual grasp. Also this wide extension betrays independence in action. The "t" bars show the stubbornness. Hence these contradictory signs interfere with such a writer's logic and reason.

NO. 8.



No. 8.—Good judgment is found where the words and lines are well spaced, the pressure uniform, capitals and small letters formed proportionately and the base lines straight. There are a calmness and poise in this type which wherever appearing betray a like ability to consider beforehand and not be hasty. Only when the writing tears along "any old way" is the judgment apt to be affected.

In the above types you may not find your exact reproduction; but, noting the signs, you will see that they will fit.

CAN OF CORN 27 YEARS OLD.

And It's Still Good, Says Food Commissioner.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Stories are published frequently regarding vegetables and fruits that have been canned many years. Some persons have an idea that fruit and vegetables lose in wholesomeness after being in cans for a long time. This idea, however, seems to be a fallacy, according to an analysis recently made by H. E. Barnard, state food and drug commissioner, who examined a twenty-seven-year-old can of corn.

The can of corn was submitted to Mr. Barnard by the Indiana Wholesale Grocers' association, and no doubt exists as to the age of the corn. Mr. Barnard reported to the association that the corn was found in good condition "in regard to color, consistency and flavor." The interior of the can was bright. "Our investigation of this can of corn," Mr. Barnard reports, "is additional evidence that properly canned goods will keep indefinitely with no deterioration so far as food value is concerned and with little or no change in palatability."

MOTHER IS 89, DAUGHTER 70.

Five Generations Honor Woman Who Crossed Land In Oxcart.

Ione, Colo. — Eighty-nine candles, which covered a delicious birthday cake and marked the age of the oldest pioneer resident in Ione, were blown out by Mrs. I. B. Gregory as she was surrounded by her family of some thirty-four members, five generations being represented.

Mrs. Gregory was born near Springfield, Ill., March 8, 1827. Together with her husband and one child she endured the hardships of crossing the plains in 1853 in a covered wagon drawn by an ox team. The young wife walked a great part of the distance carrying the child. The family came almost direct to Ione, and in 1854 erected a house, which has been their home since and in which the reunion was held.

Mr. Gregory died thirty-two years ago, leaving the widow and nine children, all of whom are still living, the oldest being a daughter, seventy years old, and the youngest forty-eight years of age.

MUSIC SOOTHES HORSES.

Undertaker Places a Piano in the Stable of His Establishment.

Milwaukee.—Ray Biggs has placed a piano in the stable back of his undertaking establishment at Waukesha for the sole accommodation of his horses.

Mr. Biggs said when he read a few months ago about a phonograph being used in a chicken coop to make chickens lay, he discredited the report, but now he has been convinced that music has a soothing effect on animals.

One of the men employed at the stables plays the piano proficiently, and he verified Mr. Briggs' statement that when the horses came in from a funeral procession, with their nerves at high tension, they immediately became calm and complacent when they hear the soothing strains of a popular waltz.

Mr. Biggs says he is thinking of placing a musical instrument in the stable on his farm northwest of the city, with the belief that it may have some effect on his cows when the milking hour approaches.

GIRL OF ELEVEN SHOOTS FOX.

Maine Maid Is Expert With a 22 Caliber Rifle.

Prentiss, Me.—Birdie Sibley, eleven years old, can do almost anything that any other little girl of that age can do and lots they can't or don't.

She is at the head of her classes in school, can cook a meal, sew and knit, make a garden, drive a horserake, ride horseback and if the family were short of fresh meat could go out and get material enough for a rabbit stew almost any time with her little 22 rifle.

Birdie was out with her rifle recently and saw a fox running along the edge of the woods some distance off. She took careful aim just ahead of him and fired the shot, striking the fox in his foreleg, and he rolled over and over. Quickly running toward him and packing in another cartridge, Birdie made a quick shot, hitting the fox square in the head just as he was gathering himself to make off on three legs. She hopes to get another for next year and have a fine set of furs made.

New Brunswick, N. J.—Although physicians assure him that unless he submits to a simple operation he will go insane or become an epileptic, Anton Michal of this city refuses to undergo surgical treatment.

While working for the Nixon Nitration works near here last September a fall of concrete fractured Michal's skull. Physicians say the fracture is pressing on his brain and that he cannot recover without an operation. He is suing the Nixon Nitration works for $3,600. The company cannot force him to undergo the operation, because there is a chance it might prove fatal.

Twice Married on Same Day.

Seymour, Ind.—Married twice in the same day was the experience of Miss Barbara Meyer of this city and Virgil E. Miller of Louisville. The bridegroom was so excited that he forgot the ring at the ceremony. After the services were over Miller remembered the ring in his pocket, and as the couple insisted on a ring ceremony the minister married them all over again.

Over the Desert

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

I found myself in Bombay in May of the year 1862, after a year and a half in other parts of India, and very soon thereafter it was announced in the local papers that "Professor Masam, the celebrated French aeronaut, would soon make an ascension from the public gardens." Three or four days later I ran across the professor and was surprised and gratified to find him to be none other than an old friend whom I had traveled with in China.

Masam was now going into ballooning just for the fun and adventure it might bring him, and when he invited me to accompany him on his first trip I was not five seconds in accepting the invitation. We packed the car with provisions enough to last a week, took rifles, revolvers and ammunition along and made all preparations for a long journey.

Without her burden of baggage the balloon could have carried five or six men. As it was, she shot up like a bird when all was ready to let go, and in a few seconds the city and its harbor were far below us. We at once started on our journey, making a pace of about fifteen miles an hour.

When night came we added 500 feet to our altitude as an offset to the dew, and as the weather was fine we both lay down to sleep. I awoke twice during the night, but to find all quiet, and when I turned out first at sunrise it was to find the Arabian coast almost under our feet, and soon we were sailing over land.

We had no sooner left the water than the breeze began to subside, and our pace was reduced to five or six miles per hour. We knew that a countercurrent would soon be met with, and both of us were looking over the edge of the basket at the morning panorama below when we suddenly espied a native village. It was, rather, the camp of some wandering tribe, all the shelters being of canvas or skin. We saw camels, asses, goats and horses, with many people moving about, and we had only got sight of them when they saw us. Some fell down and others ran away, and we were laughing at their fright when we heard the report of a gun and the sing of a bullet.

"Over with the ballast!" shouted Masam, and the next instant we were so far above them that their horses appeared to be mere specks.

Along in the afternoon, while sailing about a thousand feet above the earth at a slow rate, we came to an open country which seemed to be destitute of human life, and the professor announced that we would descend and replenish our stock of water and see what was to be seen. After the anchor had trailed along the ground for about a hundred yards it caught in the limbs of a fallen tree, and we soon hauled our craft down and secured her. We were within ten rods of a small watercourse, and while I was filling our water keg Masam shot a few birds, and we cooked and ate them on the spot and decided to make a night of it where we were. I judge it was about midnight when Masam shook me and whispered:

"Come; here is a sight worth seeing. Be careful not to make any unnecessary noise."

As I looked over the basket I saw two immense lions, standing about twenty feet apart and facing each other.

The animals approached each other slowly with growls of defiance, each carefully lifting his paws, but they did not diminish the distance over a rod before both stopped and stood as if cut from stone. Suddenly one of the beasts made a rush so swift that we could not follow him with our eyes, and they grappled and rolled over and over on the ground. Just as we thought that both would be killed in the fray one of them turned tail and ran, being hotly pursued by the victor.

The remainder of the night passed without incident, and as daylight came a breeze from the north came with it. After a cold bite we lifted our anchor and were off, but we had scarcely begun to move before we found ourselves above a long, drawn out caravan, which had just taken up its line of march. Perhaps all knew our craft to be a balloon; perhaps they believed it to be some great bird. At any rate they began firing at us, and the very first bullet struck the basket. It was an open country, and such men as were mounted on horses could keep up with us.

"Now, then," said Masam as the bullets continued to sing about us, "overboard with that keg of water, all extra clothing, everything to give us a lift out of range."

Inside of an hour the balloon began to approach the earth again, and as we were driving toward Murbat we threw over all the rest of the ballast, even including the spyglass and the box of bread. In a short time we began to descend again, however, finally landing in a field of maize just outside of Murbat.

It had been a most delightful and exciting balloon trip, and, although I was anxious to go again, it turned out that I was not to make another voyage among the clouds. Shortly after our ascension I married a Bombay girl who had a horror of balloons.

Poor Mazam! This intrepid adventurer had made six successful ascensions in India and was getting an international reputation as an aeronaut when he met his fate. On his seventh trip something went wrong with the balloon and he fell with it from a terrible height.

A NEW LUXURY.

Could You Really Rest All Dolled Up In This Negligee?

White taffeta, figured with roses and bunched at the hips in a pannier effect, corded at the knees and tucked up harem fashion at the ankles, almost makes this gorgeous negligee. The finish is achieved by squares of pale pink georgette crape for butterfly sleeves, dainty rosebuds for a hem and a crushed girdle of pink satin ribbon, to say nothing of the frill of metal lace around the neck.

FOR LOOKS, NOT WEAR.

NEW COLOR SCHEMES.

Clever Women Design Their Own Decorations These Days.

Magpie rooms have long been in favor and pronounced as a success because of the way in which this combination of black and white intensifies the color of its inhabitants' dresses. Now it is to be followed by other bird schemes. The woman who loves to work out color schemes for her house can find no more interesting study than the plumage of birds. It ranges from the most delicate pastel tints to deep metallic greens and blacks.

The idea of a peacock room has been immortalized by an artist, but it may be carried out in simpler terms by any woman with a good eye for color and texture. Another idea is to have a peacock suit of rooms. The bedrooms may be decorated in the softest of blues and greens, the living rooms in the gorgeous bronze and gold, the brilliant blue and luminous green. Even the domesticated birds of the farmyard may suggest good decorative schemes. There is a smoky gray sort of hen with a comb of soft geranium red which might inspire the prettiest of boudoir.

A bluebird room for children is rather obvious, but usually very satisfactory. A stork nursery just devised for a new baby has a faint gray paper, coral red cushions and curtains and white furniture. Round the white frieze of this room go flapping large storks with their delicate red beaks and legs and their gray tinted plumage. These appropriate birds were cut out, colored and pasted up by the young art student aunt who designed the whole room.

BROIL YOUR MEATS

The Fine Ancient Art of Cooking on a "Spit."

TRY THE BRAND NEW BROILER

Once Civilization Demanded a Skinned Dimetrodon Turned on a Stick, but Now We Must Depend Upon Gas Ranges and Smoky Drip Pans.

Was it in the stone age that the caveman discovered the fine art of broiling? Certain it is that the original rotisserie of Adam-Eve, Inc., was conducted without pan or fork and consisted of a skinned dimetrodon broiled over a stick. Even centuries later the "spit" was the chief form of cooking equipment, and obese barons lounged at the board while waiting for their serving of broiled ox.

But in modern times the broiling seems to have fallen into disrepute. The housewife of today hates to wash a broiler or her gas stove must be fitted with a special "broiler," and to cook by this method over either oil or open coal has disadvantages. And yet, perhaps no one method serves to cook good meat in such a perfect manner. The constant turning of the meat before the flame, so that each side is evenly browned and seared and the juice is retained, a crisp crust results—ah, what is to equal a piece of meat roti?

But when no special apparatus is at hand and broiling must be done in the double wire rack over a glowing flame, while the fat drops into the coal only to sputter up and crackle and fill the kitchen with smoke—then broiling does not seem to be worth the trouble. Yet it is too good a method of preparing meat to be abandoned because of its unpleasant features. The thing is to do away with the unpleasant features as much as possible.

This can be done if the gas stove is fitted with a regular small, convenient broiler with drip pan. But an even better plan for a gas stove, a coal range or even oil is to use one of the newest articles on the market—a broiler plate—a small device made of heavy iron, corrugated, with a small hole at one end for the escape of juice. It is fitted with a bale handle and is quite light to use. The plate can be heated over any flame and the meat laid on it. In other words, the broiling goes on over the flame instead of under it, as in the usual broilers, with the result that the food is less browned and better tasting, because it does not come in contact with the odor of the flame. No drip pan is needed under it, but a small tin cover can be put under the hole to collect the fat.

Since the meat juices are retained by the broiling method, meat so cooked is particularly excellent for children or invalids. There is less chance for the food elements to escape, less chance of richness, since so much of the fat is broiled away and only the best of the lean meat and its juices are retained. The secret of broiling is in the quickness with which it is done—just the delicious, rare quality which no other method produces. Avaunt with the frying pan! And in its place the broiler plate.

fluted and falls in a long loop down the side back, the brim being slightly bent in a graceful fold at this point. This is a delightful change from top hats.

Sweet Strawberry Shortcake.

Three eggs, one cupful of sugar, two of flour, one tablespoonful of butter, a teaspoonful (heaped) of baking powder. Beat butter and sugar together and add the well beaten eggs. Stir in flour and baking powder, well sifted together. Bake in deep tin plate. This quantity will fill four plates. With three pints of strawberries mix a cupful of sugar and mash them a little. Spread the fruit between the layers. The top layer of berries may be covered with a meringue made with the white of an egg and a tablespoonful of powdered sugar. The largest berries may be arranged on the top of the cake in a circle.

A Garden Tip.

Do not let iris beds become too crowded, as crowded plants do not flower well. As a general rule iris clumps should be dug up, divided and reset every three years. The best time to do this is just after the plants have flowered.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

The most Parisian frocks seem to be those featuring the simplest designs. This costume consists of a skirt of dark purple taffeta, worn with a blouse of lavender satin trimmed with embroidered braid in two or three shades of lavender. To the dropping shoulders are added bishop sleeves finished with deep cuffs. In medium size the dress requires 3 yards 40-inch taffeta and 3 yards 36-inch satin.

BALTIMORE PUDDING.—A cupful of suet (chopped), a cupful of molasses, a cupful of raisins, three cupfuls of flour, a teaspoonful of cloves, a teaspoonful of cinnamon, a teaspoonful of soda, two eggs. Put in pudding mold and steam for about four hours.

Almond Pudding.—Pound six ounces of almonds to a smooth paste, add six ounces of sugar, a teaspoonful of grated lemon peel and six eggs. Beat eggs well, add other ingredients. Beat for an hour and bake immediately.

Baltimore Rice Pudding.—A cupful of rice, two quarts of milk, a cupful of brown sugar, a stick of cinnamon. Wash rice and add one-half the milk, sugar and cinnamon. Put in oven and cook slowly for about four hours. As the milk cooks away add the remaining quart of milk, a little at a time. Do not stir while cooking.

Chestnut Puree.—Roast brown one-half cupful of chestnuts. Pound them with a tablespoonful of butter. Add a few mixed spices and a tablespoonful of vinegar. Cook slowly, pass through a sieve and serve hot.

Sauce a la Tartare.—The yolk of an egg beaten well, three teaspoonfuls of French mustard, one-half cupful of olive oil, a tablespoonful of capers and an onion chopped fine. Salt and pepper to taste. Blend well together and serve with cold meats or fish.

Bread Sauce For Chickens.—Put a cupful of breadcrumbs into a saucepan with a cupful of water. Add an onion chopped very fine and boil for five minutes. Add a tablespoonful of milk and cook until the required consistency.

Orange Pie.—Three eggs, three-fourths cupful sugar, juice of one orange and grated rind of half, juice and grated peel of half a lemon and a little nutmeg. Cream butter and sugar, beat in orange and lemon, add the beaten eggs, saving whites of two. Line a pie plate with rich crust, pour in mixture and bake. Beat the whites with two tablespoonfuls powdered sugar, spread over the pie when done and brown slightly.

A FOX AND A GOOSE.

One day a fine, large fat goose, with beautiful white and gray feathers, fell asleep by the side of a little lake.

By and by along comes a crafty and very hungry red fox.

The sleepy goose never heard him, he came so stealthily, and only awakened to her danger when he caught her suddenly by the wing.

What a cackling and hissing the goose made, and how amused was the fox to see her frantic efforts to free herself!

"No use, Mme. Goose," he mocked. "I have you fast."

"How can you be so cruel?" cried the goose. "Never have I wronged you. Please let me go!"

The fox laughed in great glee.

"Why should I let you go? Do I not need a dinner? And, pray, what would you do if you were hungry and had your dinner in your grasp, as I have mine?"

"That is easy to answer," replied the goose. "I must be truthful and say I would fold my hands, shut my eyes, say a grace and eat you."

"You are really rather sensible after all," said Master Fox. "That is exactly what I mean to do." And he folded his paws and closed his eyes.

Before, however, he could say a word away flew the goose.

"Never will I say grace again before my dinner." And he never did.

Game of Steps.

Any number of persons can play the game named steps. One player is selected who gives the number of steps to be taken. The remaining players are to walk and stop at the number of steps given by the leader. The leader turns his back and begins to count. When he has reached the selected number he turns suddenly around and faces the players. Meanwhile the players have run forward, but when the leader reaches the selected number they stop. If the leader catches any one moving that player becomes the leader, and the game proceeds.

Typifying the smartest of children's modes is this frock in Scotch gingham and French linen, with blouse waist and side plaited skirt.

The plaid gingham of this little frock is Scotch and the plain linen is French, a friendly combination. The blouse is most effective in white, and requires about 2 yards of material to make for a girl of average size. The skirt requires about the same amount of gingham. It is attached to sleeveless underbody which may have a round, pointed or square neck.

It is well to begin the construction of the dress with the underbody. First face the front from neck edge to $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches below the lower small "o" perforations, then face the back from neck to edge to about $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches below. Plait lower edge of front, placing "T" on small "o" perforation. Close under-arm and shoulder seams as notched.

Now, close back seam of skirt from large "O" perforation to lower edge; finish edges above for an opening. Turn a hem at lower edge on small "o" perforations. Form plaits, creasing on slot perforations bring folded edge near center-back to center and bring remaining folded edges to corresponding small "o" perforations; press plaits. Sew to lower edge of underbody, center-fronts and center-backs even.

Next, gather the shoulder edge of the blouse between double "TT" perforations, and make 3 rows of gathers below, ¼ inch apart. Close under-arm and shoulder seams as notched. Face large collar, sew to neck edge, notches and center-backs even. Stitch straight straps of material or ribbon (½ inch wide) to position at the small "o" perforations in front: leave the left ends of straps free and finish for a closing.

Adjust a straight belt of material ($3\frac{1}{2}$ inches wide when finished) in position as illustrated, upper edge of belt at large "O" perforation in back; finish the front edge of belt with straps of ribbon or material ½ inch wide.

Close sleeve seam as notched; gather lower edge between double "TT" perforations. Close cuff seam as notched to line of large "O" perforations and face. Sew to gathered edge of sleeve as notched, small "o" perforation in cuff at seam of sleeve, and bring the seam of cuff, to large "O" perforation in sleeve. Sew sleeve in armhole as notched, small "o" perforation at shoulder seam, easing in any fulness.

Either buttons or braid may be used to trim collar.

Deeply Appreciates Our War Relief Work, Says Bacon.

U. S. RENDERS GREATEST AID.

America's War Gifts Total $25,000,000 Cash and Millions More in Supplies. Allied Countries Get Bulk, but $5,000,000 Has Gone to Help Germans.

New York. At no time since the outbreak of the European war has there been a satisfactory compilation of the total relief extended by the people of the United States to the sufferers from that great conflict.

Herewith is a summary of these efforts, giving the results of an exhaustive inquiry, which reveals for the first time the extent and effectiveness of the work done by the Americans.

Twenty-five millions represents in cash what the people of the United States have contributed.

A quarter of a billion, it is estimated, is the grand total spent in relief work abroad since the war began, and the United States, through its cash contributions and the vast stores of food, clothing and supplies furnished, is regarded as having responded nobly to the calls made upon our people.

Here in New York city there are nearly seventy-five organizations engaged in war relief work. In Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and other large cities the work is receiving a great deal of attention, but the results are reflected to a large extent through the reports of the various organizations having headquarters in New York, which has been from the start of the war a sort of clearing house for American relief.

Because of her pathetic experience at the outbreak of the war, Belgium attracted the early efforts of American relief organizations. The need for help was so great, the invaded country was so completely overwhelmed, that the nations of Europe came to Belgium's rescue on a vast scale. The people of the United States, prompt to respond to this call, have contributed thus far nearly $[illegible] for the Belgians. The total contributions for Belgian relief are placed at $115,000,000.

While the bulk of the relief work done in this country goes to aid the allies, [illegible] deal is being done to help the [illegible] in the Germanic countries. Not so much is heard about this branch of American relief work, but it is nevertheless being prosecuted with vigor.

There is, in the case of the German-Austrian relief work, no central agency in this country through which the results are reported. For this reason it is not possible to give with exactness the amount of aid being finished by the American people to the Teutonic nations. Prominent Germans who are interesting themselves in the matter estimate that $5,000,000 will cover the aid thus far sent from this country to Teutonic sufferers.

Among the most active of the conspicuous Americans engaged in the war relief work is the Hon. Robert Bacon, former ambassador to France. While Mr. Bacon has given especial attention to the American Ambulance hospital in Paris, of which organization he is chairman of the board of governors, he also has followed with keen interest other phases of the relief work in which the people of the United States are interested.

"The deepest appreciation is felt by the people abroad," Mr. Bacon said, "for what the United States has done, both through individuals and organizations. This I know. Especially do they appreciate the way in which this work is being done. They feel that the people of the United States have been most generous. Not only do I know this from friends in France and England, but also I am assured that this same feeling prevails in the other countries in which our people have shown interest.

"What the men and women of this country have done cannot be measured in money. The sympathy they have shown, the friendly spirit, the desire to aid in every possible way, have elicited warmest praise from the people of those countries toward which American efforts have been directed."

DELICATE MONSTERS.

How Warships Are Lined to Protect Them From Fire and Water.

Although it may look very strong, a battleship is really a very delicate monster. Its vital parts have to be protected by several coverings of a material chiefly obtained from cocoanuts. This is to prevent certain portions becoming either too cold or too hot. For instance, it will be seen that the results would be exciting if the powder magazines became overheated.

A dreadnaught is entirely clothed in a suit of underwear to protect it from fire and water. The actual construction of the material is a secret, but it is known to be for the most part cellulose, which is obtained from the fibrous rind of the cocoanut.

Cellulose swells when it touches salt water. Therefore if a hole should be made in the ship's side, say, by a shot this cellulose expands and covers the opening, so preventing an inrush of water. The cellulose is also treated to make it fireproof.

Mineral wool is a material used upon the latest type of battleship. It looks like wool, but is really composed of snowy threads of a sort of glass. The men who pack mineral wool have to wear masks to prevent the needlelike particles from being inhaled. It is a remarkable nonconductor of heat and is used to cover the refrigerators and cold storage chambers and also the explosive stores.

The boilers and steam pipes of a dreadnaught have "jackets" in order to prevent waste of fuel. Sometimes these jackets are of mineral wool, sometimes wool and sometimes ordinary blanketing.—Pearson's.

One of England's Most Popular Hostesses Will Give a Series of Articles on the Charm and Dignity of Good Manners In Social Life.

It is announced that Frances Evelyn, countess of Warwick, will write a series of articles on etiquette for newspapers. In her introduction the countess states:

cordingly. I have made it a rule to have my children round me on every possible occasion.

"The tendency toward carelessness must be repressed by all of us, and etiquette has done much to add to the charm and dignity of life. We need more study of demeanor than do the French, Italians and Spaniards, for the Latin races have a natural grace that is only seldom found among us. The Italian peasant of the Maremma, the Spanish shepherd of the Asturias, will astonish you by his perfect courtesy, his instinctive knowledge of the right word, the appropriate action.

"We are rougher and more rude until we have been polished on the grindstone of polite custom or until we have traveled and lost our insularity.

"After all, our behavior is the reflection of our personality, and while, if that personality be gracious, knowledge of etiquette will set it off to complete advantage, an aggressive personality cannot be made tolerable by any amount of perfectly correct action.

"Yet knowledge is power. I think it was Francis Bacon who said that the man who goes to a foreign country without a knowledge of its language goes to school and not to travel, and in the same way the men or women who seek the pleasures of social life without knowing either how to entertain or to be entertained miss the fundamental pleas[illegible]."

CABINET FAILS OF AGREEMENT

London—Although the Cabinet was in session more than three hours yesterday it was unable to reach an agreement on the recruiting problem, and when the House of Commons met the Premier, Mr. Asquith, was compelled to postpone the statement until Tuesday next, saying that unless an agreement could be reached the result would be a break-up of the coalition government.

The Premier promised there would be no further delay beyond Tuesday. In view of this promise Sir Edward Carson consented that his motion demanding service for all men of military age should stand over until the Premier made his statement.

"The government," Mr. Asquith declared, "is united inb elieveing that its dissolution would be a national disaster of the most formidable kind."

This remark was loudly lheered, only a few unionists dissenting.

It was in the hope that a break up of the government might be averted by afew days more of deliberation that he proposed an adjournment of the House until next Tuesday.

David Lloyd George, Minister of Munitions, controls the situation, and, aldording to the best information, dellines to rehonsider his position unless it can be proved to him that the needful men for service under the colors can be obtained without compulsion. He submitted to the Cabinet a proposal for a universal compulsion bill to be put in operation only if 50,000 men a month are not forthcoming under the voluntary system of recruiting.

LEGISLATURE ENDS ITS 14 WEEKS' SESSION

Albany—With little constructive legislation attempted yet with mire bills introduced than in any previous year, the 139the session of the New York State Legislature ended today after a period of lawmaking covering fcurteen weeks. Few previous sessions have been so devoid of interest and few have been characterized with so little debate.

VALE OF KASHMIR.

A Beautiful Spot With a Record of Natural Calamities.

Beautiful and unfortunate is the wonderful vale of Kashmir, lying high among the Himalayas, ringed with gigantic peaks, "clothed in evergreen fir and deodar, the light green bed of Jehlam strung across its dun breast like a jade necklace, blushing with the ghostly pink of peach and plum blossoms."

Kashmir has a persistent record of natural calamity. Jehlam overflows its banks at intervals and sends destroying floods that wipe out whole districts. The giant peaks around the valley stir now and again in their sleep of ages and shake the flats with mighty earthquakes. Famine and cholera kill more than the river and the trembling mountains.

Fire frequently sweeps the fields and cities. As one looks up at the hills on either side from the bed of Jehlam it is seen that one slope is covered with cool, dark forest, while the other grows nothing but long grass. A spark in this grass starts the blaze. Among the Himalayas the air is biting cold and the Kashmiri carries a little charcoal brazier under his robe to warm his body. These peripatetic furnaces start many a flame.

With a history dotted with such calamitous landmarks the people of Kashmir have acquired a pessimistic expression and disposition. They are superstitious, too, ascribing all manner of miraculous attributes and fairy inhabitants to the mountain springs.—Argonaut.

Magic of a Century.

An examination of American cities a century ago presents many curiosities. In 1800 not New York, but Philadelphia, was our largest city—a pre-eminence it held until 1830. After Philadelphia, New York, Baltimore and Boston, Charleston, S. C., was the largest American city. But I defy any one to give the name of the sixth largest American town in 1800. It was Northern Liberties. How many Americans today ever heard of this metropolis? An antiquarian research discloses that it is now part of Philadelphia. After Northern Liberties, our biggest city was Southwark, Pa.; then came Salem, Mass. Such were the places a hundred years ago which entered in the competition for primacy.—World's Work.

First Test of the Air Pump.

The first public test of the air pump was in 1654, by its inventor, Otto von Guericke, in the presence of Emperor Ferdinand of Germany.

Guericke applied the carefully ground edges of metallic hemispheres, two feet in diameter, to each other. After exhausting the air by his apparatus he attached fifteen horses to each hemisphere. In vain did they attempt to separate them because of the enormous pressure of the atmosphere. The experiment was a great success.

HONEST GIRL RETURNS $200 AND GETS $75,000

Story of New Brunswick (N. J.) Teacher's Act Reaches Coast, Where Cousin Made Her Heir.

New Brunswick, N. J.—Once more pointed morals which adorn the tales on the shelves of Sabbath school libraries have been upheld. Honesty is at times the best policy, and Miss Ethel Adele Wood can prove it. People called her overscrupulous when she returned to the board of education $200 which she felt she didn't earn. Now they're calling her lucky since she realized $75,000 by her investment.

The board of education was paying Miss Wood's expenses in a training school for teachers of defective children. She left to take another position and returned to the board the price of her instruction. Such unusual honesty was featured in the New Brunswick papers. One of these, no one knows how, reached the Pacific coast. Recently a letter from Los Angeles informed the upright girl that she was heir to $75,000 through the death of her cousin, William B. French. Thus was virtue rewarded.

AGED RANCHER MAKES COSTLY TRIP TO ST. PAUL

Loses $700 In Quick Time—He Has, However, Two Mummies and a Freak Sheep to Show.

St. Paul.—An interest in two mummies, one six legged sheep and a broken down auto truck is all John McMahon, one time longshoreman and prizefighter and later North Dakota rancher, has to show for $700 from which he has been separated since coming to St. Paul last December.

McMahon is sixty-five years old and says he ought to have known better, "but folks talk so well that an old fellow like me believes them."

When McMahon reached St. Paul he met a man who took him to his home, and there, McMahon says, he was robbed of $150. The case was taken to court, but the defendant was dismissed.

"Well, that was the beginning of my troubles," McMahon said. "The police tried to look after me, but I wouldn't allow them, and now I have only $400 left out of the $1,100 which I got when I sold my ranch near Bowman, N. D., and came here."

Shortly after this experience McMahon met Mr. and Mrs. Joseph La Porte, who were living at the same hotel with him.

"They were mighty nice folks at first and took me out for a good time," McMahon explained. "We went to shows and had dinners and nice little parties."

After the first week's entertainment by the La Porte family, McMahon said, they started to talk to him about the show business. They told him of the money they made traveling with carnival companies using the six legged sheep and the mummies for attractions.

"It looked like a gold mine to me, and I asked them to let me in on it, and for awhile I was worried for fear they wouldn't do it," the old man said. "But later they let me in, and I have been spending money on that sheep and those two fake mummies ever since."

MANY JOBS FOR BIG BOY.

A 300 Pounder Is Athlete, Cashier and Factory Hand.

New Egypt, N. J.—Thomas Van Horn, sixteen years old, six feet three inches high and who weighs 300 pounds, is Ocean county's champion big boy. Young Van Horn, a son of Township Collector William C. Van Horn, is a high school junior and near the top of his class.

He is a sprinter and has hopes of establishing a new record as a hammer thrower.

Out of school he helps in the operation of a canning factory and at night is cashier at a moving picture theater. He has been elected official scorer for the New Egypt baseball team. Because he still has considerable time on his hands and is, above all, a real boy, He is a member of the boy scouts and aspires soon to wear several scout merit badges.

OFFICE BOYS MADE SKATERS.

Some Use Bicycles In Long Hauls of Bridgeport Plant.

Bridgeport, Conn.—Office boys at the Remington Arms and Ammunition company's plant must have athletic capabilities to meet the requirements of the job. The corridors in the plant are so long that it is a considerable journey between many of the offices.

The company has recently gone into the traffic problem, and the result is that twenty-five bicycles and eighty-five pairs of rubber roller skates are being used by the 110 office boys in this plant. The skates are noiseless, so that a youngster can whirl in and be gone before the recipient of the message picks it up.

Broken Jaw Causes Starvation.

Woodland, Cal., March 15.—A man died in a local hospital recently as a result of injuries sustained when he fell from the county bridge at Yancie. He suffered a compound fracture of the jaw, since when he had not been able to masticate food or to take nourishment properly. Gradually he wasted away, literally from slow starvation. The victim was an expert orchardist and had lived in Woodland for several years.

Promotion comes to him who sticks
Unto his work and never kicks;
Who watches neither clock nor sun
To tell him when his task is done;
Who toils not by a stated chart
Defining to a jot his part,
But gladly does a little more
Than he's remunerated for.
The man in factory or shop
Who rises quickly to the top
Is he who gives what can't be bought—
Intelligent and careful thought.

No one can say just when begins
The service that promotion wins;
Or when it ends; It's not defined
By certain hours of any kind
Of system that has been devised;
Merit cannot be systematized—
It is at work when it's at play;
It serves each minute of the day;
'Tis always at its post, to see
New ways of help and use to be.
Merit from duty never slinks
Its cardinal virtue is —it thinks!

Promotion comes to him who tries
Not, solely for a selfish prize,
But, day by day and year by year
Holds his employer's interest dear;
Who measures not by what he earns
The sum of labor he returns,
Nor counts his day of toiling through
Till he's done all that he can do.
His strength is not of muscle bred
But of the heart and of the head.
The man who would the top attain
Must demonstrate he has a brain.

Merchants Join In Celebrated City's First Display Week

By the remarks made by Secretary Hollenga, at the Citizens Club dinner of the retail merchants of the city, last night, he put squarely up to the men and women present the responsibility of regaining the prestige lost by them during the last few years which is necessary to win back the trade now going in different directions.

The evening marked an event of moment in the life of this community. It was the finale of one campaign to redeem the city from a lethargic state, and no man or woman can say today that the friendly contests in window decoration and advertising were not a move for more cooperation.

Mr. Hollenga's remarks were made following a review of the past year by Editor F. M. Cornell, of The Patriot, and when chairs had been turned so that occupants might face the speakers. He had been lauded by Mr. Cornell for his work in bringing to a successful conclusion the first display week in the history of the city; but the Secretary did not want the praise—preferring to have it rest upon the shoulders of the men and women merchants who had responded so nobly to the appeal made by the Chamber of Commerce in behalf of the big show. He declared that such cooperation would bring its just reward and that sooner or later this city will, if the spirit is fostered, throw off its reputation for indifference. It was pleasing to learn from the Secretary that the judges of the window displays placed Fulton merchants above their brethren in Utica and Syracuse where the same men had inspected similar events.

Not many of the city's merchants failed to respond to the call for the dinner. They were as follows:

Miss M. E. Young, V. C. Lewis, F. R. Eaton, D. L. Lipsky, Jas. Andrianos, Mr. Thompson, H. Andrews, F. Baker, J. Wing, William Ferguson, D. M. Sullivan, George Pomphret, Thomas Vandelinder, A. McDonald, Miss Van Buren, W. M. Burritt, J. J. Jordan, H. A. Zuck, E. Taft, W. C. Morgan, D. Katz, M. Katz, Harris Rosenbloom, Mr. Radder, M. A. Stranahan, C. K. Brown, R. Crockett, R. L. McCully, Fred Hillick, George Washburn, I. Galusha, W. P. Morin, J. R. Sullivan, J. C. O'Brien, I. Achilli, L. W. Emerick, B. K. Steele, F. M. Cornell, M. Conley, L. Pollock, Frank Hare, L. E. Hope, L. Palmer, Miss Dix, Miss Kennedy, George Fanklin, L. P. Smith, G. B. Farley, E. Grant Smith, G. W. Braun, P. T. Conley, W. L. Woodbury, Thomas Farrell, W. H. Patterson, E. P. Cole, D. S. Hollenga.

Editor Cornell spoke as follows:

Mr. president, ladies and gentlemen:

In view of the excellent menu, so admirably served, it is not my desire to do anything that will destroy the contentment and pleasure of this event, and, therefor, we now offer the opportunity for those who wish, to retire before "the infliction" starts. As none seem to wish to avail themselves of such a privilege, I wish to congratulate you, not only as "doers" but as "stayers."

We area ssembled tonight to celebrate the successful demonstration of the possibilities of genuine co-operation by the business houses of our city.

We have been often told by the learned men of this and other ages, that the day of miracles—the eras that mark wonderful and marvelous acts—have passed. Some people accept this statement as conclusive, but it is not true.

Has not the telephone distanced the fabled seven-league boots? Has not Moses' rod been outclassed by a stick of dynamite, judiciously placed?

Has not the modern pulmotor achieved remarkable success in the resurrection line?

And whot about the modern wizards of industry—in blue jeans—belonging to the Machinists' unions?

Have you forgotten the Fulton miracles of the past year?

The community Christmas Tree,

The recent chamber of commerce banquet.

Last, but not least, the enthusiastic participation of Fulton's business houses managed by ladies and gentlemen—in the Dress Up and Fashion Display competition?

Secretary Hallenga informs me that sixty-one houses entered into this friendly competition.

A few years ago these events— in this city—would have been considered impossible and any attempts along these lines would have met discouragement and failure in the preliminary steps.

Herbert Kaufman says "The rightest miracle is the human will. All projects are feasable if we dare and persist. Tomorrow offers more chances than yesterday. Progress never quits. Impossibilities are old-fashioned fairy tales." Is he right? Let us see.

Glance backwards for a year—and we can see the value of cooperation; also, the possibilities that await us in the future as business ladies and gentlemen.

For several years Fulton has been working (we use this word "working" in a charitable sense,) perhaps we had better say, attempting to work on a go-as-you-please, when-you-please and how-you-please system. As a city we have never started right for any particular project; we never pooled our efforts, and, consequently, we never "made good." And why? Because, as womankind says, we were trying to run our auto without a spark plug—made in Fulton.

A little over a year ago, a stranger from the get-there-Eli section of the wild-and-wooly west dropped into town, looked the city over diagnosed both patient and disease, pulled off his coat and went to work. He has been busy ever since. He soon gave evidence of being an expert. He was a graduate from the school of Thinker & Tinker, community builders and co-operation contractors. The business houses were visited, new and modern systems surplant indicerence and Rip Van Winkle conditions, with the result there was soon a marked change for the better in every line of business in Fulton. The contagion of sociability began to spread among the competitors in the several lines of trade and enmity gave way to friendlier relations.

Our business firms—ladies and gentlemen—began holding conferences and were benefitted. They for the first time in the history of Fulton realized that Fulton needed a leader

Abutting Owners Assessed $3086.16 for Good Street

Commissioner Allen introduced a resolution at last night's meeting of the Board of Works, which calls upon the Empire United Railways Company to make repairs and improvements to its tracks in this city preparatory to the work of improving East First, between Rochester st. and Broadway. The Board met in conjunction with the Paving Board composed of Messrs. F. A. Gage and George B. Mason. The work is now up to the Common Council for concurrence before returning the papers to Albany, and the Councilmen will meet tonight for that purpose.

The Board of Works made known the individual property owners who will be assessed to pay for the street improvement, the total cost of which to the city will reach $4,040:60. The State Highway Department's estimate of the total cost is $11,500; but in order to guard against contingencies, such as unforseen obstacles, the people of the city will be asked to provide $12,500.

The property owners abutting on the street to be improved have been assessed $3,086.16; the railroad company $5,300 for its track privilege. It will be noted that the State Department has added to its estibate about $1,000 to the sum called for in last year's budget for the same work, due, it is said, to the increased cost of labor and material entering into the contract.

The following apportionment shows the assessment against the property owners affected, the figures following the sum indicating the frontage of each one. The list follows:

Quirk-Pratt Realty Co., $88.37; 70; Empire United Rys., $73.24; 58; R. D. Parsons, $99.74; 79; Citizens' Club, $108.67; 86; James Bogue, $131.30; 104; D. E. Mason, Estate, $97.21; 77; Elks Home $193.16; 153; O. C. Breed, $83.32; 66; F. B. Dilts, $94.69; 75; B. W. Bennett, $83.32; 66; All Saints' Church, $83.32;66; W. Nelson estate, $320.67; 254; K. of C., $110.16; 88; George Pratt, $109.84; 87; Dr. C. R. Lee, $121.20; 96; Dr. L. F. Joy, $121.20; 96; F. A. Gage, $83.32;66; G. W. Brooker, $88.38; 70; E. Quirk, $75.75; 60; J. McDonough, $107.31; 85; F. C. Wolever, $113.63; 90; Post-office, $176.75; 140; Oswego Falls Pulp & Paper Company, $214.62; 170; S. B. Mead estate, $101; 80; A. Bristol, $189.38; 150; Dr. C. R. Lee $126.25; 100; Ed. French, $126.25; 100; Library $166.65; 132; State Land $1,297.21; 1027 5-10; E. J. Schem, $13.26; 10 1-2.

Opportunity Never Returns, According to Mr. Peacock

With 1400 people in attendance, last night's meeting at the Tabernacle was the most enthusiastic recorded since Evangelist Peacock and his party arrived in this city. "Crown Him King of Kings," "My Heart Keeps Right," "I Love Him," "I Love to Tell the Story," and other Hymns were sung with enthusiasm by the choir and congregation. The audience had its first opportunity, too, of hearing Miss Painter in solo work. She sang "Evening Prayer" and her pleasing voice and rendition won hearty applause. Following the reading of Isaiah 55 by the congregation, Ensign Fitzgerald offered prayer.

Evangelist Peacock called upon the church members to be loyal to their pastors and to their church vows and to show their standing when they are given an opportunity to attend the Tabernacle services in a body.

Tonight will be dollar night at the Tabernacle. Those who can afford to contribute this amount will be asked to do so. Everybody will be welcomed, however, regardless of the condition of the pocket-book.

The evangelist's afternoon sermon today was in part as follows:

1st Kings 20:20—And as thy servant was busy here and there, he was gone.

Ahab was returning home after a great victory over Ban-hadad, King of Syria, and as he was riding along he was halted by a man who was wounded and dirty and exceedingly downhearted and troubled. The man cried unto the King and said: "Thy servant went out into the midst of the battle; and behold a man turned aside and brought a man unto me saying: Keep this man: if by any means he be missing then shall thy life be for his life, or else thou shalt pay a talent of silver. And as thy servant was busy

SLIGHT FIRE IN OLD CIDER MILL TODAY

A spark from a machine in the old cider mill on the Whitaker Road, near Ontario street, caused a slight fire at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The building is used by a company of which A. M. Roy is a member, as a manufacturing plant.

When the fire department arrived, the workmen in thep lace had the flames under contr l, a hand extinguisher did the rest. The damage was small as the fire was confined to a quantity of waste product.

A LESSON TO MONOPOLISTS

If the government armor-plate plant is established, as it will be according to the present outlook, the private interests that are now complaining so loudly will have themselves to blame.

For nearly thirty years there has been a monopoly in this industry. Three companies have co-operated in working the government for all they could get. How much they have profited may be inferred by these statements made by the New York World:

In the year 1893 the Bethlehem Steel Company, now the chief opponent of the federal plant, charged the United States $616 a ton for armor plate and the following year sold the same sort of plate to Russia $249 a ton. In 1911 the price to our government had been reduced to $420, but the company sold the same product to Italy for $395. Later, it charged the United States $440 to $504 a ton for armor-plate, and sold it to Japan for $406.35.

Even if there were no prospect of saving money, such a record would obviously entitle existing armor-plate interests to no more consideration from the government or public than any hard-headed business man might be expected to give. But it is expected that a real saving can be effected.

The Bethlehem company has offered to reduce its price to $425 a ton to a rate ranging from $395 to $402.50, on condition that the government refrain from competition. It also offers, in case the government is still unconvinced of its good faith, to provide the armor needed for the new naval construction program at whatever price the Federal Trade Commission shall pronounce fair. A year or two ago such an offer would have been accepted. Now it seems to be too late.

Experts are said to have estimated that the government can reduce armor plate at a cost of as low as $230 a ton. If it can be produced for 50 per cent more than that, it will be quite worth while to go into the business. Government representatives point to the fact that a private company used to be paid 80 cents a lb. for smokeless powder, and when Uncle Sam went into the powder business himself nearly everybody prophesied failure. Yet the government plant today, with a capacity of 6,000 pounds a year, is making the powder at an actual cost of 24 cents, or, counting investment and overhead charges as a private company would do, at a price of 36 cents a pound.

It isn't likely, in any event, that the government will lose money in its armor-plate venture, if the right men are put in charge of the plant. And if it does nothing more than come off without loss, it will have taught a useful lesson to would-be monopolists in various branches of the war-supplies business.

Lohengrin was Wagner's last opera and proved to be the turning point of his fortune.

The romance of the subject, its dramatic treatment and undeniable beauty, gradually reconciled the public to the novelty of its style.

Lohengrin, heavily scored, with many beautiful strains and grand climaxes closes the first part of the program to be given by the Fulton Symphony Orchestra at the Quirk Theatre, May 2d, 1916. —Contributed.

THE REVIVAL

Perhaps there never was a time in the history of the country when the church revival spirit was so prevalent as now. Tabernacles and sawdust trails are found in almost every village and city. Revivalists of high and low degree are being called to the work as never before. It is being reduced to a systematic and business basis, and the results are showing the efficiency of the perfected system. Hundreds and thousands of people all over the land are resolving to make greater effort to lead the better life and to adjust themselves more properly to the divine plans that govern mankind and the whole universe. This wave of religious enthusiasm may be accounted for in some degree by the existence of war. It is the reaction of the moral depression and disappointment that followed the torch of war. That stunning calamity made people feel for a time all was lost. Their faith in God was momentarily shaken, for they had come to believe that we were progressing along the line of peace and good will among men, according to God-s evident purpose. It was difficult to reconcile this faith to the shock of a war of such vast extent and apparently so utterly uncalled for. Then came the soberer decision that, after all, there is no other source of hope or faith except in the Prince of Peace. Now the country is rallying anew to the standard of the Great Leader. The churches themselves seem to have lost their virility. The more emotional method of the evangelist appears to be required to produce the best results. Thus we see the plain and simple tabernacle erected everywhere.—Fremont (Neb.) Tribune.

NERVE-TRYING 'LOOKING FORWARD.'

The sporting goods store windows are full of bats and gloves and tennis rackets and running shoes and fishing rods. An outing magazine talks familiarly of "Outfitting for Bass" and "Golfing After Golden Trout". The robins are nesting again.

Each day it gets worse and worse. The call to the out-of-doors becomes more insistent every passing hour. We serve fair warning on the Weather Man: If he does not hurry up, get busy and pass out a little old-fashioned Spring weather he'll be a candidate for the embalmer's table and we members of the human race for the nerve specialists. This "looking forward" to Spring is getting on every body's nerves.—St. Paul Press.

SOCIAL CLUBS NOT CORPORATIONS

A bill that has passed the State Senate, and that provides that before a club can drop its members such members must be granted a hearing, will if it becomes a law tend to upset clubdom and lead to disagreeable incidents. The social club as maintained in this country is a unique institution and, in so far as it conforms to laws binding equally upon private householders, it is a law unto itself. A social club is frankly intended to be exclusive, and its right to be so cannot be controverted by any outsider. With what may be called the domestic affairs of a club non-members have absolutely nothing whatever to do. It is in this, and many other respects, on a par with a private family. A club is not a public corporation, and interference with its domestic management by a law like that now under consideration would not only be undesirable, but would undoubtless be declared unconstitutional.—Rochester Chronicle and Democrat.

BAD FAITH IN ENFORCEMENT OF ANTI-SPITTING LAW

The arrest yesterday of a stranger from the country on a charge of violating the local anti-spitting ordinance and the imposition of a fine of $2 against him would merit but little attention if his case was one of many which the police had made. The fact that the visitor was the sole offender arrested when any citizen abroad in the main streets might have seen violations by the score shows evidently that there was discrimination.

There has been much circumstantial evidence in the past that whenever it became necessary to enforce an obnoxious ordinance the first victims usually were strangers. This is a shortsighted and unsportsman like attitude for any community to assume, and if there really was deliberate purpose to make example of strangers in the present effort to enforce the anti-spitting ordinance, it merits utmost contempt. That not a single other individual was arrested yesterday lends color to the theory of discrimination.

The absurdity and injustice of discriminatory enforcement of the local ordinance is made especially notorious when it is stated by persons who were in the court room at the session during which the unfortunate offender paid his fine that a well known Auburn lawyer was guilty of violating the anti-spitting ordinance by spitting on the court room floor while the recorder was on the bench. Imagine the bitter feeling which a stranger will have for Auburn when he witnesses such rank injustice.

Let the ordinance be enforced fairly and in good faith.—Auburn Citizen.

RAILROAD TIES BY MAIL

A New Jersey man, finding in the U. S. Official Postal Guide, edition of last August, this paragraph concerning the spread of the gypsy moth:

The attention of the postmasters within the area quarantined for the gypsy moth is therefore invited to the provisions of paragraph 2, viz: Forest plant products, including logs, tanbark, posts, poles, railroad ties, cordwood and lumber, * * * may be accepted for mailing to any point outside of such quarantined area only when accompanied with a certificate of an inspector of the United States Department of Agriculture showing that they have been 'inspected and found free from the gypsy moth.'

He complains that postmasters are unable to interpret this, and he asks: "Does it really mean that logs, railroad ties, etc., can be mailed?

Why not? If the present Congress had not been influenced by the transportation and express company interests certain amendments to the postal laws would have been made by which the parcel post limit would have been 100 pounds, and such commodities as those mentioned by this bewildered inquirer would have been eligible for transportation should any one wish to send them through the mails at parcel-post rates.

In all probability the postal guide anticipated changes in the law, and therefore was thoroughly prepared to meet those changes.—Auburn Citizen.

How to Save Wear on Auto Brakes.

In the Woman's Home Companion an automobile expert says:

"Remember that gradual application of power, whether from engine or from brakes, saves wear. When you stop push out the clutch a hundred yards off, cut down the throttle and coast to your stopping place, with the brakes applied gently. Don't come down steep hills using brakes alone. Continued use heats and wears them. Slow up at the top, slip into second gear and cut off the ignition current. The engine acts as a brake or a drag. Gravity, pulling the car down, turns the engine rapidly, and it resists. On extremely steep, rough [illegible] use first gear."

The Money in Stock.

A Chicago packer said once that the public seemed to think the beef packers make money as easily as did the country boy who witnessed the killing of a calf by a motorcar.

"No use talking," he drawled to a passerby, "thar certainly is money in cattle."

"In the stock raising business, do you mean?" asked the stranger.

"No, not exactly. A motorcar ran over that calf a few minutes ago, and the driver got out and handed me $5."

"Five dollars? That's not much for a good sized calf."

"Yes, but, mister, the calf wasn't mine."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Misfits.

You can say "The tongue is an unruly member," but what the Apostle James (iii, 8) wrote is, "But the tongue can no man tame; it is an unruly evil."

Peter (first iv, 8) said, "Charity shall cover the multitude of sins," not "Charity covereth a multitude of sins."

Butler said in "Hudibras" (part 3), "He that complies against his will is of his own opinion still." As generally misquoted, "A man convinced against his will will hold the same opinion still."

Your Handwriting Shows What You Are

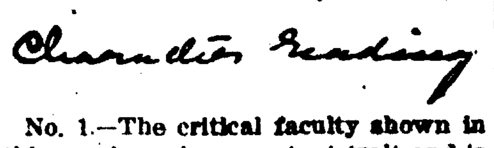
By WILLIAM LESLIE FRENCH

3.—The Critical Faculty.

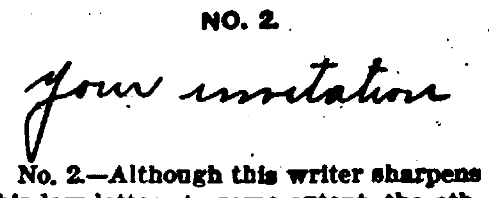
A CLEVER writer once observed that handwriting was the thermometer which registered the changes of mind action due to the expansion and contraction of temperament and disposition. And it is just such an instrument in action. But each person's trend is affected by fixed qualities which show little change.

NO. 1.



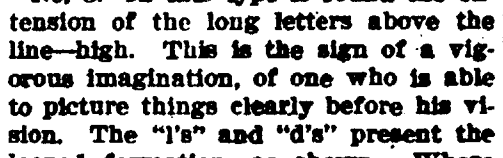
No. 1.—The critical faculty shown in this specimen is a constant trait and is revealed by a combination of strokes, not merely one sign. When you find that an individual has a distinct style with uniform pressure, good connections, the small letters being usually quite low and sharp at the top, he exhibits the ability to criticise. Frequently some of the long letters, such as "f," have pointed stems. The gift to criticism is due to keen perceptions and the power of observation.

NO. 2.



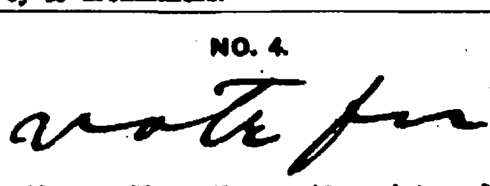
No. 2.—Although this writer sharpens his low letters to some extent, the other signs being absent is an indication of little or no critical talent.

NO. 3.



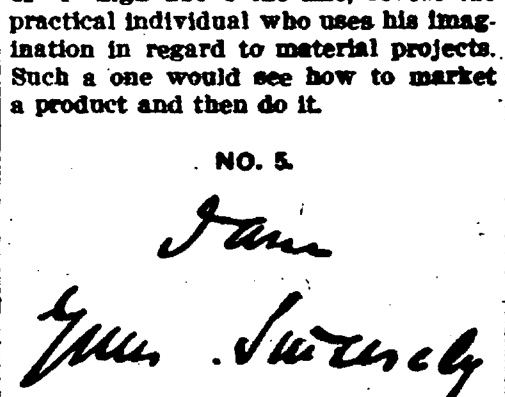
No. 3.—In this type is found the extension of the long letters above the line—high. This is the sign of a vigorous imagination, of one who is able to picture things clearly before his vision. The "l's" and "d's" present the looped formation, as shown. Where people write first in one direction and then in another this gives an unpractical nature, and delicate pressure with the slant marked to the right a tendency to dreaminess.

NO. 4.



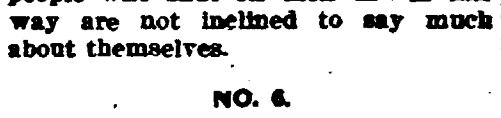
No. 4.—Here the rapid script and heavy pressure, showing mental activity and push, combined with small loop of "l" high above the line, reveal the practical individual who uses his imagination in regard to material projects. Such a one would see how to market a product and then do it.

NO. 5.



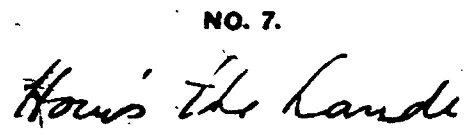
No. 5.—Note how this writing has only a moderate degree of slope to the right—control over the emotions—while the final letters of words are clipped off abruptly and rather close together, showing the tendency to keep affairs under cover. It is the form of the final stroke which gives the clew, for people who shut off their ink in this way are not inclined to say much about themselves.

NO. 6.



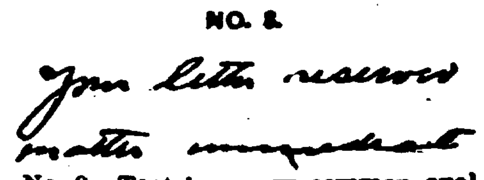
No. 6.—On the other hand, this person is a talkative, free-spoken individual, for the "a's" and "o's" are open at the top. This form merely shows the tendency, no matter what the style may be. Thus if the writing spreads widely, freely across the page—the sign of generosity—the trend is more toward volubility, while script which is cramped endows the writer with less openness of spirit and so less inclination to gossip. Shortened finals reduce the tendency even more so.

NO. 7.



No. 7.—The presence of conceit is found here because of the large and curved capitals, large in proportion to the small letters. In many instances the script is cramped also. Vanity and love of ostentation show flourished capital letters. And where the capitals are very bold (See No. 7 a) it is almost always accompanied by a similar kind of writing. Self importance and self confidence—a person opinionated.

NO. 8.



No. 8.—Tact is a very common quality and appears in this specimen, revealed by the first small letter of words being larger than those following. And diplomacy, which is minding your own business, telling what you wish to and not telling what you do not wish, is indicated by the last letters of words smaller than at the beginning.

The reader will doubtless find many instances of these traits among friends and acquaintances.

THE TOWN SLOUCH

It's Generally All Over Before Cy Cowkins Gets There.

Th' candidate gives you a warm handclasp
That tingles from wrist to shoulder,
But when he's elected this fact you'll grasp—
He'll give you a "shake" that's colder.

Sure of a Job.

It was a new kind of a recommendation for a servant, but very effective. The old employer said nothing about her accomplishments as cook, waitress, laundress or chambermaid. What she wrote was:

"She is as strong as a man and twice as brave. Three times while in our employ she captured burglars single handed and held them until the police arrived and saved hundreds of dollars' worth of silver and jewelry."

All the manager of the employment agency had to do when that girl needed a situation was to read that letter out loud, and there ensued a wild scramble among his customers for the strong fisted maid.—Pittsburgh Press.

Kipling's Corncob.

"Did Kipling ever steal one of my corncob pipes?" said the late Mark Twain once.

WHY NOT ELECT A BUSINESS MAN?

Candidate For President Should Have Commercial Training.

GOVERNMENT IS A BUSINESS

Set Back Professional Politicians, Horn Blowing Orators and Briefless Lawyers and Place at the Head of the Biggest Corporation in the World an Experienced Man.

WHY can't we have a business man in the Presidential chair next time, is the query of a prominent New York newspaper.

Government is a BUSINESS, and a BIG BUSINESS.

Seagoing and overland commerce, taxation, tariffs, rate regulation, monopoly regulation, the mails and parcels posts, conservation of resources, development and maintenance of waterways, the huge payrolls of Government employes, the courts of justice, the national revenue collectors and police, the army and navy—what are all these but pure business problems, demanding the same trained and capable business executive direction that any great business concern demands?

What board of directors would think of hiring a professor of Sanskrit to be president of a great railroad?

What huge shipbuilding or engineering concern would select a peripatetic stump orator or a lyceum lecturer to direct its activities?

Big Business Men Needed.

Big business concerns seek big business men with big business brains to be executive chiefs.

Now, here is this big business corporation in which every one of us, big and little, is a stockholder,—the United States of America.

It is the BIGGEST BUSINESS CONCERN the world ever saw.

And what do we do every four years by way of selecting a head for this wonderful, gigantic business concern?

Why, we always select a man who has never shown enough business ability to run a one-horse draying concern.

In the fifty years that have elapsed since Abraham Lincoln died not one of the eleven Chief Executives of this colossal business corporation called the United States has had the SLIGHTEST BUSINESS TRAINING or any acquaintance with the complex, varied, ramifying and interrelated problems of finance, production, transportation and world exchange upon which depend the welfare and prosperity of the whole people and of each individual citizen.

Hindrance of Prosperity.

Is it any wonder that our national business is one long serial story of stupid HINDRANCE OF PROSPERITY, stupid depression of commerce and trade, stupid opposition to the forward impulses of business co-operation and consolidation and of wasteful and criminally extravagant expenditure of the people's money to the tune of thousands of millions?

Is it any wonder that we WASTE each year an amount of money that would fortify our coasts, stock our magazines with ammunition, equip our navy properly and SECURE BEYOND ANY POSSIBLE DANGER the safety of our country?

Suppose that just once, by way of experiment, we gently, but firmly and positively, set the whole lot of professional politicians, horn-blowing orators, briefless lawyers, pretty phrasemakers, theoretical schoolmasters and all that sort on a shelf in the back woodshed and put a BIG, BRAINY, CAPABLE, EXPERIENCED BUSINESS MAN, who has done big things well all his life, in the chair of the President of the United States?

What do you think about this, citizens?

For an Idea, Not an Individual.

The views expressed in the above editorial are exactly the views held by THOUSANDS OF INFLUENTIAL BUSINESS MEN throughout the country. As an outgrowth of this sentiment there has been formed an organization called the Business Men's Presidential League, which has for its object the exploitation of an idea instead of an individual. What it seeks to bring about is the nomination of a candidate for president WHO CAN BE ELECTED, also to prevent action next June at Chicago that would be party suicide.

An All Round Business Man.

To win next November the Republican party must DESERVE TO WIN. That means we must have a candidate who first of all merits and commands the confidence of the business men of the nation. Among the prominent men mentioned as candidates who would meet this demand is General Coleman du Pont, of Delaware. Du Pont is distinctly a business man. He has been everything, from a miner, working with a pick and shovel, to the director of one of our greatest industrial corporations. He has built and managed railroads and is a banker and a farmer. In every line his activities have been SIGNALLY SUCCESSFUL, and no man has had a more varied experience to equip him for the Presidency. He is the kind of man who could save to the taxpayers of this country the three hundred million dollars that the late Senator Aldrich said were wasted annually in running the public business.

SNEEZING OMENS.

At One Time to Sneeze Was Regarded as a Death Warrant.

Sneezing from very remote times has been regarded with superstition.

Our forefathers went to bed again if they sneezed while putting on their shoes. A sneeze to the right was deemed lucky; to the left, of evil portent. To sneeze near a burial place was very unlucky.

Tradition has it that sneezing was at first a fatal sign—every human being sneezed but once and then died—but Jacob petitioned the Creator to remove the sneezing ban and succeeded. Thence arose the once universal custom of saluting a sneezer with "God bless you!" or "May you live long!" The custom still obtains in some parts of Europe.

In England not only was a sneezer blessed, but friends raised their hats to him as well. In an old book, "The Code of Conduct," it is directed that "if his lordship sneezes ye are not to bawl out, 'God bless you!' but bow to him handsomely." All over the world the sneeze was recognized. Whole nations were under orders to make exclamations when their king sneezed.

Sneezing was believed to be a sure cure for hiccough and was also looked upon as a sign of sanity. If ancient and universal belief goes for anything it is good to sneeze.—London Telegraph.

WHEN WORK BECOMES PLAY.

The Secret of Contentment Is Found In Proper Employment.

A philosopher once said that "no man properly employed was ever miserable." And a more truthful statement was never made.

To be properly employed one must be engaged in a business in which he has faith and confidence and for which he has respect. If he doubts the legitimacy of the business, if he must resort to practices which he feels are questionable, if he isn't proud of his occupation, he is not properly employed. If the work he is given to perform palls upon him, if he feels that he ought to be doing something else, if he envies the other employee his place in the shop or factory, then the work deadens and destroys, and misery follows.

The writers got things balled up when they talked about work and play. Too great a distinction was drawn. Play was pictured as something that gave happiness and work as something which one performed only because he was hungry.

The truth is, it is all play or ought to be, for the man who is properly employed is only engaged in playing. He gets as much delight from it as he formerly got from the childish games or should. Certainly there can be no misery where a man has found his work.—Dayton News.

Knew Just How.

Many years ago in Paris, at the first presentation of a tragedy that had for its closing scene the murder of a Swedish king which had taken place nearly half a century earlier, all went well till the murder scene came on, when a very dignified old gentleman in the stage box called out angrily:

"Absurd! They've got it all wrong!"

The manager himself heard this plain spoken comment, and, being naturally disturbed by so sweeping a condemnation, he sought out the critic and politely begged to know what fault he had to find with it.

"Why, my good sir," cried the old man, with an air of authority, "the whole grouping of the scene is incorrect! You have made them kill the king to the right of the door, whereas we murdered him on the left!"

Barbarous Tattooing.

Formerly the Marquesans had such a barbarous manner of doing their tattoo work that it often took nearly six months to heal that which had been done in a single day. They covered the whole body of the males with crudely imitated rough designs, circles, curves and many designs of small work, including round and angular spots, even to the finger nails and the top of the head. Thus, beginning at virility, some were upward of thirty years old before their tattooing was completed. Marquesan tattooing was perhaps more remarkable in appearance than that of any other primitive race.

Durable.

The admiration which Bob felt for his Aunt Margaret included all her attributes.

"I don't care much for plain teeth like mine, Aunt Margaret," said Bob one day after a long silence, during which he had watched her in laughing conversation with his mother. "I wish I had some copper toed ones like yours."—Youth's Companion.

Close.

"What sort of chap is this man Skinner?"

"He's the sort of chap who wouldn't think of offering you a match to light your cigar unless he were sure you had another cigar in your pocket."—Pittsburgh Press.

Mercenary.

I Am Made All Things to All Men; I Might By All Means Save Some

Evangelist Peacock preached last night on Corinthians 9:22. I am made all things to all men that I might by all means save some.

Mr. Peacock said in part as follows:

I am made all things to all men that I might by all means save some.

I desire to speak on the great mission of the church. Judging from the way some people talk and work, one would imagine the church had no mission. Some people have the idea that the church was established for the purpose of edifying the saints, and letting the sinners go to hell. I think this is a mistaken idea. Jesus commanded His disciples to go out into the world, and do everything in their power to lead the lost into the kingdom of God. Paul seemed to understand the great mission of the church was to seek to save the lost. I think in many places the church is not doing this work.

I am not a pessimist in the work of God. I think God always has, and He always will take care of his own work. If we fail to do our part, some will do the work and will reap the reward. The church of Jesus Christ is the greatest, the grandest, the blessing to the people of this world. The church has been a wonderful blessing to the people of his world. The lhurch has been a wonderful blessing to me, and any institution that has done so much, and is doing so much to uplift humanity is bound to succeed. The church will triumph in the end, but there are some things about the way the majority of churches are conducted that will never bring success.

Empty Pews

We have very poor judgment when it comes to looking after the work of the Lord. We might just as well face the facts one time as another. The church has not been fulfilling her mission. There is only one way to succeed in the Christian life and there is only one way to succeed in the church. The successful way is the one in which the spirt of God guides and directs. The church that wins battles for Jesus, is the church that stands for, and preaches the doctrines and grace of the Bible.

We hear the cry about the small number of people attending the different churches. Fine churches, eloquent preachers, cultured people, large membership, great wealth, great numbers not yet in the kingdom, but the pews are empty. Very few seem to have any interest in work of the Lord. This is a sad state of affairs. Such things ought not to be. Jesus says, in John 15:16, Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that you should go and bring forth fruit and that your fruit should remain. If you will look over the churches having such glorious opportunities, and are not embracing them, you will find the preachers are not preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ, and standing four square on the old doctrines of the Bible. They are getting their sermons from some other source than the word of God.

Why do we have so much crime and lawlessness in this country? A judge said to me, I think I can answer that question in one sentence, "Men have lost the consciousness of God. They have lost all sense of right and wrong." People feel no personal responsibility to any one. They shut religion out of their lives and live simply for themselves, selfish interest. If the majority of people were made to realize they were walking and talking and working in the very presence of God they would do differently.

Very few people think much about sin. Very few preachers preach much about sin. People want to do as they please, and the minister must keep his mouth closed. This is the reason it is so hard to get people saved because people have no conviction of sin. Some people want the love of God, they do not care to hear about sin. It is folly to attempt to preach the love of God until people have been been convicted of sin. Some people think they can do anything and still be in the kingdom of God. They can play cards and drink wine and use profanity and be impure, and dishonest and no one has any right to interfere with their liberty. The prize given at a card party is just as much gambling as the man who wins his money in the gambling joint. Is it any wonder some men go to hell? Their wives help them along.

Look to the Children

It isn't any wonder boys and girls grow careless in the service of God. The parents set such ungodly examples in the home. People need to hear more about God's attitude toward sin. Len Broughton says, $ can remember very well an old minister that once waked up my soul, one of those old time preachers who made his subject burn with passion for men that we rarely see today expressed. He preached one night on God's attitude to sin. When he finished I felt I was hanging over the very verge of a bottomless pit, and I was made to stay there all night. I was like a man locked up in a vault who knew nothing about the lock until someone from the outside came to work the combination. Every place I looked I saw sin, if I looked this way II saw, if I looked that way I saw sin, and all that night I rolled upon my pillow and looked at sin. I was not such a vile sinner as the world looks upon sin.-but I was the sinner in the sight of God, and the preacher made me realize I was a sinner. And when he held up Jesus Christ I found peace.

Before men must realize they are sinners and they never will realize they are sinners until men preach against sin. We can tell people of their sins and in a sense reprove them, but the spirit of God must convict. It is our business to preach against sin. It is the business of the Holy Spirit to convict men and women of sin. And when they have once been convicted they will line up for God. Some people are so thick skinned you cannot touch them. They say it all belongs to the other fellow. They think they are not doing a solitary thing.

The church that wins will be seeking the lost. This appiies to the members as well as the pastor. Some people would be very quick to find fault if the church was not growing, and yet those very people have never led a soul to Christ. True some pastors are not very active in trying to win the unsaved. I heard a minister who had preached for forty years or more say, I have never talked personally to any one. I preached the gospel, and if they do not accept the invitation of the sermon, I have no further responsibility. This is not in keeping with the teachings of Jesus.

The Church that Wins

The church that wins must keep up a perpetual warfare against sin. Some people seem to think we should fight the sinner. God does not hate the sinner, he hates the sin, I do not hate the sinner, I hate the sin and that is the reason I keep pounding away at your sins. God loves the sinner. Jesus died to save the sinner. The angels of God rejoice when a poor sinner rises up out of his sin and faces toward his father's house. That is the reason I denounce sin. If I had no interest in the spiritual welfare of men and women I would never mention sin. I would let them drift the people can say peace and be true concern. And when any man tells you, you can live in sin in this world and enjoy heaven hereafter he is a liar. He is your worst enemy. He is a dangerous man in the community.

The time will lome in this life when to Jesus. The war must go on until navy have outlives their usefulness. the devil is locked up in hell. Then we will have peace and not till then. The warfare against sin must be constant and consistent. The reason we have so much crime is because men have no sense of sin. And if men do not sin they are punished for it. The church that wins must have the spirit of humanity in it. A church with the spirit of Jesus. A church with the spirit of Paul. A church with the spirit of God. People are at the doors of our churches. They have been unfortunate and need asking not for money but for love. our help. What the we going to do? Turn then away? Too many have been turned away. Let us make the words of Jesus our own, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden." We should be willing to manifest the spirit manifested by Paul "I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some."

AMERICAN CAN CO. GOOD UP 10 PER CENT

New York—The American Can Co. yesterday announced an increase of 10 per cent in the price of its product, all sizes. This follows a similar advance announced on January 1 last.

Such action, it is stated, is necessitated by the high cost of tin plate, of which material the can company uses some 6,000,000 bores annually.

The following statement accompanied the newest increase: "American Can Co. withdraws all former prices and quotes the following prices for season delivery. Owing to the condition of the metal market these prices are made subject to change without notice."

MANY 12-INCH NAVAL GUNS FOUND USELESS

Washingon—The Navy Department has reached the conclusion, from experience with the guns on the Michigan at the recent battle target practice, that many 12-inch guns of the navy have outlived their usefulness.

It was announced today that nearly all the Michigan's guns will be replaced before the ship puts to sea again.

RAISE FOR 20,000 AT MANCHESTER

Manchester, N. H.—Notice of an advance in wages to the 20,000 operatives of the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company's cotton and woolen plants, and the Stark Mills, makers of sheetings, was posted today

The amount of the increase, effective April 24, was not stated.

BUCK SAVES FAWN FROM SWIFT RIVER

Latter Falls Behind In Swimming the Columbia to Escape From Some Dogs.

Kettle Falls, Wash.—Ed Roper, a farmer living on the Ferry county side of the Columbia river, saw three deer driven to the Columbia river by dogs and then forced to cross for safety the other day. Roper had crossed to this side of the river in a rowboat and heard the barking of the dogs near the bank of the river that he had left.

Three deer, a buck, a doe and a fawn, sought safety by swimming in the river and were swimming toward this side when Roper hid himself in order not to frighten the deer back again.

The fawn fell behind the others and appeared unequal to the battle with the swift cold water, and Roper thought it would surely drown, when the buck, which had been in the lead, turned back and assisted the fawn until the bank of the river was safely reached. The three deer then stood still and rested for some time.

The Sun's Flames.

The sun's flames spring at times to a distance of 350,000 miles from its surface.

Big Oak, 130 Years Old, Down.

Carlisle, Pa.—The first week in March saw the passing of one of the oldest landmarks of the country when a monster oak tree that marked the boundary of Silver Spring and Hampden townships was cut down. The tree was 130 years old and measured four feet through. Four cords of wood came from the trunk.

Rabbits Stall a Stage.

Austin, Nev.—George Crowell, stage driver on the route from Austin to Potts, is authority for the statement that his team was stalled on the home trip at Hot Springs, east of Spencer's, by an army of jack rabbits. He said they resembled a drove of sheep and leaped into the tall sage when finally scared away.

FOLK DANCING; FAIRY REVELS

Phillips and Erie St. Schools to Take Part in These Features at Public School Carnival.

The large corridors in the Phillips street school building make it an ideal place to train children in folk dancing. Principal Lanigan has not failed to take advantage of these facilities and at any time can demonstrate the educational advantages of folk dancing by actual illustration in his building.

Under the direction of Principle Lanigan, assisted at the piano by Mrs. Lanigan, pupils from Philips street school will give:

A

1. Danish Peasant Dance . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . "Lusteld-dans"
2. Swedish Dance . . . . . . "Oxdensen"

The "Oxdansen" is very popular among the Swedish children. It represents a quarrel, ending in a mock fight. The different parts of the dance represent the argument before the quarrel, the haughty attitude of the disputants, and finally the interchange of blows.

B

1. Norwegian Mountain March.

This dance represents a party of mountain climbers with their guides. The final steps represent the joyful frolic after the steep climb.

Dancers—Belle Baker, Mabel Sellman, Hyacinth Bradshaw, Helena Dolbear, Mildred Feliska, Berneice Palmer, Nina Horr, Lillian Wilson, Gladys DeCaire, Irma Rowley, Floris Austin, Mary Dey, Margaret Dey, Mary Borek, Gladys Bryant, Helen Sanford.

Fairy Revel

Gladys Haines is the Fairy Queen and the pupils from Erie street school will be the fairies at the Carnival. There are 44 of them under the direction and training of Principal Ruth Graveley. Miss Harriet Brumfield will be the pianist. The names of the fairies follow:

Fairies—Helen Abbey, Viola Alkenbrack, Cassie Andrews, Jennie Andrews, Nellie Barnard, LaWayna Barker, Nina Bateman, Hazel Boigeol, Thelma Chubb, Emma Clark, Mary Crahan, Doris Collins, May Drake, Anna Erhardt, Helen Ward, Harriet Waugh, Florence Falardeau, Beatrice Gardner, Gladys Gardner, Grace Cary, Helen Hare, Marion Hare, Georgiana Keyes, Dorothy Knowlton, Luella LaVeck, Lumilla La Veck, Margaret Lewis, Kathryn McKenna, Ida Mirsky, Sadie Waldhorn, Norma Nichols, Evelyn O'Brien Mary O'Brien, Clara Owens, Mary Quinn, Beatrice Richards, Jane Rogers, Marjorie Scudder, Bessie Shapiro, Minnie Shapiro, Catherine Tromblay, Doris Van Valkenburg, Hazel Wagner, Evelyn Waldhorn.

SCHOOL DIRECTORS WILL ELECT SUPERINTENDENTS

County Clerk Stanton will soon notify directors of the county's school districts of the necessity of holding elections for superintendents. The election will occur on uJne 20th. which will be five years since the last election took place. This is according to law. The position is sought after greatly, as it pays an annual salary of $15000.

Those now holding the positions are:

First district, Miss Mildred I. Pratt, Orwell; Second, Joseph M. Bonner, Richlond; Third, C. I. Kingsbury, Mexico; Fourth, Mrs. Queenia R. Frawley, Palmero; Fifth, Warren M. Gardner, Fulton.

FIREMAN DWYER GIVEN TERM OF SUSPENSION

Fireman John Dwyer, was suspended yesterday indefinitely by Chief Waugh because of his refusal to accept a special assignment at the Tabernacle. Each day since Sunday, a fireman has been stationed at the tabernacle, the men serving in relays.

Dwyer has been a member of the Department for six years and has a good record. It is not known whether the suspension will result in Dwyer's dismissal from the force but it is believed that an investigation will be held soon.

CITY MERCHANTS' CELEBRATION

with ideas and plans of tomorrow in place of yesterday. The law of demand and supply—that never changes—prevailed; the leader came; the live wires were enrolled as members of one company and the order was given, "Forward March, eyes front."And forward Fulton's battalion went, as a solid phalanx, keping step to stirring notes of the band, who played "Onward, Fulton Boosters." We are still going forward—and doing things—under the efficient leadership of D. S. Hollenga, secretary of the Fulton chamber of cosmerce.

Thep rincipal feoture of this evening, aside from the dissemination of sociability among the business units of Fulton—both ladies and gentlemen—is the formal announcement of the decisions of the gentlemen who have acted as judges in the Fashion and Display Contest.

These gentlemen were Mr. Murphy of the Chappel-Dyer company; Mr. Pfiel of Dey Brothers & Company; and Mr. Bogardus of L. A. Witherill's store, Syracuse. These gentlemen are head window decorators of their respective houses. The judge of the advertising contest is Mr. Brewster generol manager of the advertising department of the L. C. Smith Typewriter Works, also of Syracuse. Messrs. Murphy, Pfiel and Bogardus view the several display windows as to their merit as ilustrating the goods each business house exhibited and their attractiveness in a decorative sense, while Mr. Brewster judged the advertisements—in the home papers only—on what he is pleased to term, "the pulling power in making sales."

Before announcing their awards—and I can assure you their task was not an easy one—I trust I may be pardoned for repeating the handsome compliment—so well deserved—given by the gentlemen who acted as judges.

The compliment:—

"Fulton distanced the business men of Utica in the beauty and attractiveness of their displays.

"Fulton outnumbered the city of Syracuse in their recent display as compared with the last fashion disploy in the Central City of the Empire state.

"No city anywhere according to population— has approached in the 1916 Dress Up and Fashion Display in Fulton."

To sum up the results of this excellent demonstration of coöperation and business enthusiasm, we can truthfully say

Fulton has Made Good—
And then some.

And now it is both an honor and pleasure for me to announce the several awards made. They are:

It was Mr Cornell's intention to call upon Mayor Lewis for a speech, but his honor must have joined a punitive epedition headed for Cayuga street. At any rate the toastmaster's mouth which was set for saying Lewis, changed quickly and the veteran of all dining events, E. P. Cole, was called upon. He spoke in a way optimistic of Fulton, saying some nice things for the Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. Mr. L. E. Hope responded to a call by saying that when he arrived in this city he at once made up his mind that he would come back and cast his lot with the other business man, and he has no cause for regret.

A Miner Detail.

"Why didn't you publish the account of my daughter's wedding?" she asked the society editor.

"It wasn't complete," was the reply.

"Not complete? Didn't I send you the names of the out of town guests, a description of the decorations and the bride's dress?"

"Yes."

"And the name of the minister who performed the ceremony? I took great pains to get the bridesmaid's gowns."

"I know you did. All that was in the article, but you forgot one important thing."

"What did I forget, I'd like to know?"

"You forgot to tell the name of the bridegroom."—Detroit Free Press.

Competition.

"When I was first married my wife used to talk, talk, all the time."

"Has she given it up?"

"She had to. We've got two grown-up daughters now, you know."—New York World.

here and there, he was gone. And Ahab said unto him, "So shall thy judgment be. You have decided your own case. Fou have been careless in regard to your duty,and you must pay the penalty." Immediately the man hastened and took the band from his eyes, and in place of a wounded soldier pleading for his life, Ahab saw a fearless prophet of God pronouncing on him the sentence of doom for his neglect of the trust committed to him in sparing Ben-hadad, King of Syria, contrary to the commandment of God. God had given Ahab victory. But Ahab had been faithless to his trust. He had had the opportunity to vrush out the enemy of Israel but he permitted him to live for his own selfish purpose, and in sentencing the soldier he was really uttering sentence against himself. It was a sad mistake for Ahab to permit Ben-hadad to live. Ben-hadad was avowedly the enemy of God. His death would have been the salvation of Ahab missed the opportunity by permitting him to live. This reveals to us how careless men are about the opportunities given them by God. The opportunities given to us do not come by chance. They are God given opportunities. There is a time for every purpose under heaven. God gives to us opportunities. If we are faithful to our trust we shall secure eternal promotion and blessing. But if we are careless and indicerent and neglectful, our opportunities will all escape and leave us poverty-stricken.

The word opportunity is one that

HOW TO PREPARE FRENCH SOUPS THAT ARE WHOLESOME.—A bowl of good hot soup is very acceptable. But how often is it good?

Soup should never be used the same day, if possible. Allow it to stand one night and all the flavorings will blend together, which makes all the difference when reheated.

It is a great mistake to put odds and ends of vegetables into the stock pot. The pot should be kept for bones and trimmings of meat, your poultry giblets, bacon rind, etc. Vegetables cause fermentation.

The stock pot should be turned out into a clean enameled bowl every third day, thoroughly cleaned and some of the bones removed. Those that have been in longest will be easily recognized by the cook.

The idea of a stock pot is to have a good foundation for any soup you choose to make, tomato, lentil, celery and potato being four most popular and easily made.

If you have no stock the liquor in which fresh brussels sprouts, cauliflowers, celery, potatoes and onions are boiled all make an excellent start for a vegetable soup. In France they never throw away such liquors, having been taught that the salts and most of the goodness of the articles cooked is in the water.

Half a cupful of milk added to most soups just before serving gives them that soft, creamy taste that makes all the difference.

Stock made from mutton bones blends with turnips, onions, parsley, barley, rice, etc.

Beef stock blends with carrots, lentils, split peas, tomatoes, celery and green pea flour. Onions, unless disliked, go with everything.

A SPRING RENEWAL.

How to Utilize a Castoff Feather Bed by Making Pillows of It.

A few women are fortunate in having inherited a number of old bed pillows and bolsters, and there is nothing like old fashioned feathers for dividing up into filling for sofa pillows while they last. These feathers can always be put together again for bed use if needed, and meanwhile they might just as well be used for sofa pillows as to be laid away in the storeroom.

However, not every one is so fortunate as to have accumulated the feathered bed coverings of her ancestors, and then it is found that to buy new feathers is expensive. The cheaper pillows bought ready made are filled with cotton or with soft clippings from linen and cotton rags, and a good homemade filling for a pillow may be made by cutting a roll of cotton into small squares and heating them in a pan in the oven for half an hour, taking care not to let the cotton scorch. Every square will, according to best authority, swell to twice its original size and become as light and fluffy for filling as feathers.

SCRAP THE TABLECLOTH!

How to Make Attractive Luncheon Sets to Replace a Burden.

Many of the new luncheon sets are square instead of round. Whether it is merely a passing fad or a fashion here to stay remains to be seen. These square sets have a wide hem and a drawnwork border three-quarters of an inch wide, and a feature of this new drawnwork is the introduction of colored threads.

Swedish weaving is another form of needlework being revived and is applied to household linens. It is really based on drawnwork, but is slightly different, worked in color and quite simple. The delightful part is that after one has acquired a working knowledge of the few stitches used one can create one's own design.

How to Pack Books So the Covers Won't Rub.

To pack books in small packing cases stand the parcels on end with the edges next to the sides of the cases and the back of the bindings pointed toward the inward, and pack them with crumpled newspapers to ease the pressure on the round part of the books, which may otherwise be pressed flat. Line the case with wrapping paper. Lay a thickness of wrapping paper over the top and fasten on the cover with screws in preference to nails.

How to Treat a Bad Burn Before the Doctor Comes.

The best immediate application for a burn or scald is carron oil. This preparation of equal parts of linseed oil and lime water should be kept always at hand when there are young children about. When a child receives a burn or scald shake the bottle of carron oil thoroughly; then saturate some lint, gauze or muslin with it and put on the burned surface. Clean olive oil or vaseline are good substitutes for the carron oil.

How to Wash a White Corduroy Skirt at Home.

Wash in warm, soapy water until clean, using a good quality soap, then boil one-half hour in soapy water. Rinse in clean water, changing the water three times and rinsing again in cold bluing water. Don't wring or squeeze, but hang to drip dry (in open air if possible). Don't iron.

A SUFFRAGE TRIP

Two Ardent "Gists" Set Out Across the Continent.

WILL TOOL THEIR OWN CAR.

Armed Against Mosquitoes, Rattlesnakes, Mexicans and Hunger, Two Adventurous Women Start For California With a Small Auto.

No women have ever before made the trip just started by Mrs. Alice Snitjer Burke and Miss Nell Richardson of New York city. On April 6 they left Columbus Circle and were escorted to the Forty-second street ferry on their first lap to Trenton, N. J., by hosts of suffragists in automobiles. Before they see New York city again these women will have made a trip of

MRS. ALICE SNITJER BURKE.

15,000 miles in a little car, so light it can be pushed about by hand. En route they will traverse twenty-five states, among them four on the Mexican border.

How to provide against mosquitoes in Jersey and rattlesnakes and Gila monsters in Arizona, hostile Mexicans on the Texas frontier and hunger everywhere will be among the problems of these errant ladies, who fear nothing at all, not even punctures.

Miss Richardson, who was born in Virginia and hails from Maryland, says she will solve the hunger problem by carrying a fireless cooker on the running board, and Mrs. Burke says she fears no accident, for she can put on her own tires and that without "getting myself dirty. I don't have to crawl out from under a car as black as my hat." she states.

She certainly looks immaculate enough in the picture. At the end of every day's long run there will be a suffrage speech given "somewhere in America" for the National Woman Suffrage association, and the occasions at which these will occur will take in all possible social groups and a variety of locations. The compact compartments of the suffrage car, in which the women are advised to carry "an ax for cutting firewood, a shovel to dig themselves out of mudholes, a pistol against rattlesnakes and a rope to tow some other unfortunate," will also carry evening and afternoon gowns for the speakers.

Mrs. Burke is a western woman, whose first husband, Captain Armstrong, was one of Roosevelt's "rough riders" in the Cuban war. She has a daughter, who was the center of a little story which Colonel Roosevelt called "the prettiest incident of his western trip" when he was in California during his presidency. At Captain Armstrong's death Mr. Roosevelt struck off a copy of a bronze medal and sent it home to the captain's daughter. Years afterward when he was riding in state through San Francisco's streets the president saw the little child standing on the curb wearing her medal, and he stopped the procession to lift the child into his car. "My little rough rider," he called her.

Planked Shad.

Have a fish cleaned and split down the back, wash and wipe dry. Have ready a clean oak or hickory plank about two and a half inches in thickness and the length of your oven. Set in oven until heated through. Rub shad with plenty of butter and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Lay it open side up on hot plank and fasten corners with tin tacks. Lay plank on upper grating and rub fish frequently with butter until done. Carefully lift the tacks and place fish on a hot platter. Garnish with slices of lemon and sprigs of parsley.

After Half A Century

By F. A. MITCHEL

Two old ladies were sitting in the ballroom of a chateau in France watching a multitude of dancers whirling by them. A figure appeared at the doorway, a gentleman in the costume of a Prussian dragoon of half a century before (1800), who at once arrested the attention of one of the women mentioned.

"Shades of my ancestors!" she exclaimed. "Can that be Gaston de Veaux come back from the dead?"

There was a singular movement in the limbs of the figure as it advanced into the room, the stiffness of old age mingled with the elasticity of youth, if such a mixture can be imagined. As he passed certain groups they turned to look at him. No one seemed to know him unless it was the old lady who had wondered if he were Gaston de Veaux. As he made his way among the dancers he endeavored to avoid them, but either his eyesight was defective or his joints were stiff, or both, for his efforts resembled those of a boy whose muscles had been overtrained or whose joints had been stiffened by disease.

He seemed to be familiar with the chateau, for he made for a certain door, through which he passed into a room where there were refreshments—it had always been used for this purpose—poured out a tumblerful of brandy and drank it off. This seemed to limber him, and he emerged again into the ballroom, walking more steadily.

At the opening of the nineteenth century France was in the throes of revolution. The De Veaux family occupied the chateau where now, at the time of the second empire, the ball was in progress. Gaston de Veaux during the former period, twenty years of age, an aristocrat, was obliged to leave France. He went to Prussia, where he entered the military service of the king. He was captured by the French under Napoleon I. and condemned to be shot for bearing arms against his countrymen.

It was generally supposed by his family that he had been executed. There was, however, a rumor that he had been given over to a commission of scientists for the purpose of experimentation in the suspension of human life, but if such was the case no report of the commission was ever found. At the restoration of the Bourbons a member of the De Veaux family went to Berlin to obtain De Veaux's body and bring it to France for interment in the family cemetery. It could not be found.

The lady who had made the exclamation at the ball, "Can that be Gaston de Veaux?" Mme. Garnier, had known him—indeed, had danced with him in that very ballroom when they were both in their teens. She was the only person present who had ever seen him.

And now this figure or this apparition of a man of twenty-one or twenty-two, who seemed to combine youthful and septuagenarian attributes, filled her with what she could only describe as a crawly sensation. The year 1799 had entered the room to stalk about in one of the 1850's. The stranger's antiquated uniform gave the impression that he had supposed he had been invited to a fancy dress ball and had come as a Prussian soldier of half a century before. In whatever part of the ballroom he appeared the guests turned to look at him, and the face of every person doing so filled with wonder mingled with horror. A few, on first catching sight of him, were disposed to laugh, but their features soon turned to the same shocked expression as the others.

As the apparition—it seemed more an apparition than a man—passed Mme. Garnier she saw in his strange eyes the look of one who had returned to his home after fifty years' absence to find all changed.

"Gaston de Veaux!" she called.

The figure stopped and looked at the speaker.

"Is there one person here who knows me?" he asked in a voice as singular as his appearance, the voice of one suffering from hoarseness.

"Are you Gaston de Veaux?" asked the lady.

"I am. And whom may I have the honor to address?"

"Alas, half a century has passed over me also," was the melancholy reply. "Do you remember Louise Garnier?"

"Louise Garnier," repeated the stranger more to himself than to her. "No, no; not Louise Garnier, but her grandmother perhaps."

He passed on with that same mechanical walk, muttering to himself. After having made the circuit of the room, reaching the door at which he had entered, he turned and looked at the assembly. Every one of the assembly was looking at him. With a moan he turned again and disappeared, descending a massive staircase.

Why no one followed him was not explained. That age was more superstitious than this, and it may be that some took him for a ghost and naturally drew back. But later their failure to discover what had become of him was regretted, for from the time he disappeared, going down the staircase, no one reported having seen or at least especially noticed him except a coachman, who claimed that while driving in at the chateau gate he met a strange looking man in a queer uniform passing out. A good while after the singular appearance what was described as a leathery skeleton was found in a wood near the chateau. It was clad in clothes so rotted as to be scarcely distinguishable.

WHY HUSBANDS LEAVE.

What Statistics Show About Wife Deserters.

Why do so many husbands run away?

A statistician connected with the bureau of public welfare has been trying to answer the question.

After investigating thousands of cases of desertions he finds that the husband's action can usually be ascribed to one of the following causes:

Ill health and peevishness of the wife.

Slouchiness of the wife either in her own person or in her housekeeping methods or both.

The wife's habit of nagging or gossiping.

Dislike for children on the wife's part.

This statistician found that the strongest incentive to reconciliation in cases of family discord is almost invariably the child. He also found that very few wives are deserted who are—

Physically well and mentally cheerful.

Able to contribute to the family income either by outside labor or by frugality in home management.

Affectionate and home loving.

Sympathetic and considerate of their husbands.

The very interesting and valuable statistics which he collected prove that native American husbands are more prone to desert their wives than are the foreign born.

They also show that married life is the happiest when husband and wife are nearly alike in age, nationality, religion, moral standards, temperament, health and physical strength.

Mohair For Spring.

Mohair and worsted mixture is a fabric peculiarly suited for spring wear. It is light, cool, has a lustrous, silky sheen and because of its springy texture is perfect for the new flaring skirt and cape coat. Mulberry is a new color, which is especially glowing and soft in the mohair and worsted weave, and the new Bolling green is notably rich and distinguished in this material.

A Lanvin frock shows green mohair and worsted in stitched bands on a skirt of green georgette crape. The close bodice buttons straight down over the bust with white pearl buttons, and the long bishop sleeves are of the green crape with white satin cuffs. The collar is of white satin veiled with green georgette crape.

New Use For Peanuts.

Here is a new use for peanuts. Says a doctor: "Eat a handful of peanuts before retiring. They quiet the nerves of the stomach." What do you think about that? Isn't that a rather interesting sleeping potion? Then we are also told to eat them after each meal as an aid to digestion, provided they are fresh roasted. Bought salted peanuts are good, but homemade ones are better. So easily prepared, it is a wonder more people do not try them.

Night was falling when Polly Ann and little Ned settled down to hear Uncle Ben's good night story. It was about

AN ENCHANTED PRINCESS.

Once there lived a poor woodcutter and his wife in the middle of the forest. He had three sons called Edward, George and Albert. The two eldest were thoughtless, but good natured.

One day Edward, the eldest, said to his father, "I am going out to make my fortune, father, and when I have made it I will come back."

His father let him go sadly. On the way Edward passed a trap with a poor little mouse in it, but as he was so thoughtless he did not think of letting it out.

A few days after George set out to make his fortune. He, too, passed the mouse, but did not let it out.

After that Albert left home to make his fortune, but when he came to the trap he went up and let the poor little mouse out. Instantly it became a beautiful princess.

"Thank you, dear Albert," she said to the astonished boy. "A wicked witch turned me into a mouse, but will you come and set my castle free?"

Albert said "Yes" gladly. So he followed her, and at last they came to a grand castle. When they went in nobody was there.

Then the princess said: "Tonight you will be tortured by invisible beings. You will see only their hands and feet, but don't say a word, and in the morning I will come. This will happen for three nights, but on the third day the castle will be yours."

That night when Albert was reading ten pairs of hands and feet appeared and pulled his hair, pinched and kicked him and tore his book to pieces, but he never said a word. Next morning the princess came, and with her came a hundred attendants, whom he had made free by his watching. That night the same happened, and in the morning the princess came with 200 servants now. The third night passed, and still he did not speak, and in the morning the princess came with 300 servants and embraced him. She showed him all the cellars full of gold.

A few days after they were married, and after that Prince Albert went to his father's home to bring him to his castle. The brothers had come back penniless through their thoughtlessness. They all went to the castle, and the mother and father lived with Princess Marion and Prince Albert. The brothers married the sisters of Marion, who also had castles. They all lived to a good old age.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

Washable gabardine in white or cream color would make up this costume effectively. Tiny satin bows usurp the function of buttons, the adjustment being effected invisibly. The blouse has a very full peplum attached to the soft girdle of black satin. In medium size the costume calls for 4 yards 54-inch material and 1 yard 27-inch satin.

Fish Delicacies.

BAKED CREAMED SCALLOPS.—Put one quart of scallops in a stewpan, add one small onion, cover with boiling salted water, let simmer twenty minutes, then remove the onion, drain, cut the scallops into small pieces and place in a buttered baking dish. Cook three tablespoonfuls of flour in three tablespoonfuls of butter, add gradually one pint of milk, stir until thick and smooth, season with pepper and salt and pour the sauce over the fish. Cover with crumbs moistened with melted butter and bake until brown.

Oysters With Cheese.—Take a cupful of grated breadcrumbs and brown nicely in a little butter; butter a shallow dish and sprinkle with the breadcrumbs. Drain about three dozen oysters and dry with a clean towel and then season. Place them one by one on the browned breadcrumbs, strew chopped parsley over them and grated Parmesan cheese. Sprinkle lightly with breadcrumbs again and place in the oven. The layer of breadcrumbs will be brown in about fifteen minutes if the oven is hot enough. Serve with drawn butter and lemon garnish. If desired a little lemon juice may be poured over the oysters before placing in the oven.

Oyster Toast Virginia.—Quickly fry in a frying pan twelve thin slices of Virginia ham, then remove from the fire and keep hot. Put three dozen large oysters in the pan and cook for four minutes. Moisten with a pint of cream, season with salt and paprika, boil for five minutes and thicken with two egg yolks mixed with a little cream. Flavor with three tablespoonfuls of sherry wine if this is approved. On each of six slices of toast place two slices of ham. Place six oysters evenly over the slices of ham, pour the sauce over and serve very hot.

Shrimps on Toast.—Melt a tablespoonful of butter, add two cupfuls of rich milk and salt and cayenne pepper to taste. When hot add two hard boiled eggs chopped or cut into small pieces and two cupfuls of canned shrimps. Heat through and serve on slices of buttered toast.

TABLE LINEN.

Hints About the Keeping of Your Favorite Fad.

"Table linen must be properly handled in the laundry if you would have it retain its freshness," says Marie. Strong bleaches must never be used on fine table linens. Of course the linen is often badly spotted and needs to be cleaned in some way, but boiling water removes coffee spots, cold water removes cocoa stains and sunshine removes many more spots. When stronger agents must be used they should be applied and removed by intelligent hands.

They should be allowed to remain on the spots just long enough to eradicate them and then rinsed thoroughly out with clear water, for if they remain on too long they remove not only spots but pieces of the linen.

For fruit stains pour boiling water through them while the stains are damp, if possible. If they dry on rub them with lard and put through the usual washing process. Some old fashioned housewives have their table linen dipped in buttermilk to whiten it. The linen is allowed to remain in the buttermilk for a day or two, if necessary, and is then thoroughly rinsed in cool, clear water and later in warm water.

Always dry linen out of doors in the sunshine. If possible have a little bleaching green of grass. Table linen must be quite damp when it is ironed, and it must be ironed until it is perfectly dry. Napkins should be ironed on both sides and a tablecloth, too, to give it the best appearance.

Physical Fitness Woman's Big Asset.

No woman nowadays can afford not to be well.

Ill health—even mere "delicacy," with no positive manifestation of disease—costs too much. There is the obvious direct expense of doctors' bills and medicines. But indirectly you pay a much higher price for not being well. If you are a wage earner your lost time and energy, due to a lack of physical strength, must also be computed in lost dollars.

Poor health will interfere constantly with your social good times. It will mar whatever beauty you may possess sooner than any other cause. If you are a wife and mother illness and weakness will interfere with your duties and the comfort of those dear to you. Whatever your station in life you will find that the role of invalid and weakling is no longer fashionable or popular. For awhile you will have the sympathy of your friends, but the best of them will be bored with you sooner or later. They can't help it. A worship of physical fitness is in the air, and instead of whining and pitying yourself you must bend all your energies to the task of becoming well.

Cinnamon Rolls.

When it is desired to mold bread for baking take one loaf on a molding board, roll out to nearly a quarter of an inch thick, spread quickly with butter, brown sugar, white sugar and cinnamon. Roll up and cut off one and a half inch pieces. Have considerable melted fat in a dripping pan and dip the top of each piece into the fat. Allow them to rise until after the rest of the bread is baked, so that the rolls may be very light. They should be baked from twenty minutes to half an hour.

OSTRICH EGG MEAL FOR ALL.

Scrambled by Wife and Prosecutor's Family Heartily Partake of It.

Kansas City, Mo.—While Prosecutor Floyd Jacobs and family were visiting the zoo at Swope park one of the attendants brought in a freshly laid ostrich egg about the size of a toy balloon. It was said to be slightly undersized, so Mr. Jacobs was told he might take it home if he would promise to have it served for supper.

"My wife scrambled it," Mr. Jacobs said, "and it was about all the egg one family could eat at a meal. There wasn't much difference in the taste from an ordinary hen's egg, so far as I could determine, but it seemed to be a trifle richer. At least it satisfied the appetite quicker than the scrambled eggs usually served at my table."

Mutes Make Tires.

Akron, O.—Sixty deaf mutes are employed by a tire and rubber manufacturing company here. It is the policy of this establishment to employ all deaf mutes who apply for positions who are strong, willing to work and who have good eyes. They have proved to be efficient workers and are often placed in responsible positions.

Finds Indian Relics.

Calico Rock, Ark.—Cal Branscum of Cotter, a lineman for the Arkansas-Missouri Telephone company, has arrived here loaded down with Indian arrow heads, which he found on a little knoll in a small field a mile north of this place.

The Police System.

The police system, being almost entirely municipal in its character, has gradually developed with the growth of cities. In London a night watch was appointed in 1253 to proclaim the hour with a bell before the introduction of clocks. The old watch system was discontinued and a new police on duty day and night commenced Sept 29, 1829.

Influence of the Humble.

OUR LOVE OF SHAM

Why American Novels Lack Lifelikeness and Grip.

SENTIMENT VERSUS REALITY.

One of Our Artists Thinks That Our Public Demands a False Optimism Instead of the Compelling Facts of Life That Give Power and Charm.

In a recent interview Ellen Glasgow, one of our popular American novelists, stated:

"I think that in America we demand from our writers, as we demand from our politicians and in general from those who theoretically are our men of light and leading, an evasive idealism instead of a straightforward facing of realities. In England the demand is for a direct and sincere interpretation of life, and that is what the novelists of England, especially the younger novelists, are making. But what the American public seems to desire is the cheapest sort of sham optimism. And apparently our writers—a great many of them—are ready and eager to meet this demand.

"I don't know which is the more tragic, the fact that a desire for this sort of literary pabulum exists or the fact that there are so many writers willing to satisfy that desire, but I do know that the widespread enthusiasm for this sort of writing is the reason for the inferiority of our novels to those of England, and, furthermore, I think that this evasive idealism, this preference for a pretty sham instead of the truth, is evident not only in literature, but in every phase of American life.

"Look at our politics! We tolerate corruption. Graft goes on undisturbed, except for some sporadic attacks of conscience on the part of various communities. The ugliness of sin is there, but we prefer not to look at it. Instead of facing the evil and attacking it manfully we go after any sort of false god that will distract our attention from our shame. Just as in literature we want the books which deal not with life as it is, but with life as it might be imagined to be lived, so in politics we want to face not hard and unpleasant facts, but agreeable illusions.

"Of course," said Miss Glasgow, "we must distinguish between a realist and a vulgarian, and I do not see how a writer who is absolutely without humor can justly be called a realist. Consider the great realists—Jane Austen, Henry Fielding, Anthony Trollope, George Meredith. They all had humor. What our novelists need chiefly are more humor and a more serious attitude toward life. If our novelists are titanic enough they will have a serious attitude toward life, and if they stand far enough off they will have humor.

"I hope," Miss Glasgow added, "that America will produce better literature after the war. I hope that a change for the better will be evident in all branches of literary endeavor."

Baking Hints.

When making angel cake be sure to beat the whites of the eggs stiff, until you can turn the dish upside down and the whites of the eggs will not move. You will find your cake almost always will come out right and will be much lighter.

In baking bread be sure when rising it forms a thin crust before putting into oven, and when taking out of oven listen and see that it does not "sing," because if it "sings" it is not done.

When baking lemon pies do not have your oven too hot, as the lemon will curdle and boil over your crust.

Rhubarb Cobbler.

Chop rhubarb pretty fine, put in a pudding dish and sprinkle sugar over it. Make a batter of one cupful of sour milk, two eggs, a piece of butter the size of an egg, one-half teaspoonful of soda and enough flour to make batter as thick as for cake. Spread it over the rhubarb and bake. Turn out on platter upside down so rhubarb will be on top. Serve with sugar and cream.

GERMAN FEMINISTS WOULD DRAFT WOMEN

Idea Is That All Girls Should Be Conscripted For a Year to Learn Useful Work.

The Hague.—Conscription for women is the latest idea of German feminists.

German women have accomplished an amazing amount of work for the fatherland in the present war, but the feminist leaders assert that too much of the work has been dilettante, ill organized and ill directed.

What is wanted, according to these women, is the introduction of compulsory service for women—not military, but home service. Each woman, they say, should spend one year in the later teens learning work which should be useful to the state. At the end of that time she could return to the bosom of her family.

At a meeting held at Berlin recently Dr. Gertrude Baumer developed this idea. She showed how feminine work for the fatherland had been hampered by lack of training and organization, drew a fine picture of what could have been done had the women been called upon at the same time as the men, each woman knowing her job and knowing where to go to it.

Finally, she urged the advantages in the way of discipline which the men got from their years of service. "We must be done with dilettantism!" she cried. "Every woman must learn that she owes a duty not only to her child, but to the home, and not only to the home, but to the state, and, above all, she must know what to do."

Gold Coins.

Seventy per cent of the gold in the possession of civilized man is in the form of coin.

OUR WANTS.

Wanting nothing, you would lead an aimless life. You will get accustomed to living your life right through with a want in it. We all have to do that. You will get accustomed to wanting, and this habit will come to be a part of your life. You will be all the better for it.

OPPORTUNITY NEVER RETURNS

very few people seem to understand4 No doubt the majority of people would be able to give a definition of this word if they were called upon to do so, but very few people seem to know how to lay hold of the opportunities that come to them. So many people never seem to realize that opportunities come to them, and they do not know how to redeem the time or buy up the opportunity. Because of this, many ared isappointed in life. and many do not make the success out of life that they should. The reason men and women are careless along this line is because they fail to realize what these opportunities mean when they come to them. Men and women seldom know opportunity when they see him, and before they are aware he is gone, and when once gone he can never be overtaken.

This carelessness is manifested with respect to worldly things, and it is manifested with regard to spiritual things. Men have had opportunities in the business world and professional world to make a great success out of life, but have failed simply because they do not know how to redeem the time or buy up the opportunity. The great trouble with so many people is this, they do not know how to get a start in this world. They stand around waiting for something to turn up when they should go out and turn something up. Too many people fail before they get started. Their manhood and will-power is not strong enough to make them go forward from one guidepost to another until they have reached success. They feel they will fail, and because they feel this way failure stares them in the face before they ever make any attempt. Just look about among your own friends and neighbors and you will see the truthfulness of this statement You see it every day You see it on every hand. Some one has said, "Every period has it's special opportunity which if not used at that time escapes forever. It can never be recaptured." Youth has opportunities peculiar to itself and even old age has many opportunities which are permitte dto drift away. So every period of life has it's peculiar opportunities. And there is a time for every purpose under heaven.

Mr. George Knox says, "There isn't an occupation or profession in existence but what has been glorified by men who at first were no greater than you. I care not what your occupation may be, you can make such a start and follow that start with such a future and such a life that you will have immortalized your name, and made for yourself a monument that will reach the skies. Don't wait until you are a Napoleon before you begin. You might as well wait until you become a skillful swimmer before going into thew ater. It is waiting to do something great or waiting to make up your mind, or waiting to get good and ready that finds men growing old without a purpose...

Waiting until we have a better opportunity, simply robs us of that peace and happiness and joy that God desires us to have while we are in this world. God's word says that we should redeem the time because the days are evil and delays ared angerous and the opportunity may never come again. Most of the people occupying important positions in the world today are people who are willing to begin at the bottom ond work up. They are men andw omen who have not been trying to save themselves but have been willing to do all they can to help the business of the wgrld.

There are thousands of people in the world today who are compelled to look back over the past and acknowledge that if they had embraced the opportunities coming to them in life, if they had redeemed the time, thy weould have made a grand success out of life, and would have immortalized their names and made for themselves monuments that would have lasted many centuries after they were dead and gone But they let the golden oportunity slip away, and they are compelled to say, "It might have been'" They had the chance to make something out of themselves. They had the chance to live for the good of humanity and for the good of God's Kingdom but they failed to grasp the opportunity and as a result hove robbed themselves of the blessing. Even the operations of nature are guided by the power of God. Certain opportunities come to us at certain periods of the year, and if these opportunities are not embraced when they come, they will pass away. There is somethings you can do in the spring time which you cannot do at other times. The man who refuses to plow in the spring- the harvest comes. The farmer who is busy here and there with other things, may neglect to prepare the soil and sow the seed. If this is the case the opportunity does not occur. If the farmer permits the springtime to escape him, and leaves his fields unplowed and his gardens unplanted, however remorseful he may be about it, he cannot capture that opportunity after springtime has passed. The same thing is true in regard to the cultivation of the mind. Youth is the time for sowing the seed. This is the time when the mind readily grasps the lesson and seizes with firm hold upon new truths.

Take it along any line How many people are measuring up to the standard of God? How many people are getting out of life what they ought to get out of it? How many people can be considered a success in every sence of the word? When we stop long enough to consider this matter we find that a great many people are wasting a great man popportunities. They are busy here and there with things that do not amount to very much, and permit the most important things in life to drift away. It seems to be a very easy thing for people to become careless and to be taken up with everything, but the things that are of importance.

One time some one passed this remark about Zeuxis, the famous painter of his day, that he was very slow at his work. In reply to this remark he said: "I am long in doing what I take in hand because what I paint I paint for eternity."

Did you ever stop to think that the thinks you are doing must stand through eternity? And these things will decide your future destiny?

This man said he was busy here and there and the man was gone. We hear this same excuse today. Men try to excuse themselves by saying that they are busy with other things. You charge a man with missing the greatest opportunities of his life, of permitting his soul to run the risk of eternal loss and ruin, and he says, "I was busy." You ask a man to do something in the Kingdom of God and he will tell you he is busy. Many men are busy here and there with things temporal, but many are neglecting the spiritual.

It is boundless folly for any one to purchase riches and honor to the risk of losing his soul when he is not able to assure himself of one minute of life wherein he may take comfort in them. Very few people intend to sin away their day of grace, but they are busy here and there and before they know it it is gone. Every one of us has a soul and body. A life temporal and a life eternal. It would be a sad thing to lose both. Many people are doing it. Many Many people are sacrificing the spiritual for the temporal. The thing of the world cannot last forever. We riches and pleasures? Can you take them along? Well, if you have wasted the opoprtunity to lay up treasures in heaven your chances are lost. Both soul and body are gone. Some people let the opportunity get away by thinking they have plenty of time. This has led more souls to destruction than any other delusion.

EXPERTS IN TRACKING.

Australian Natives of Both Sexes Trained From Childhood.

The Australian aboriginals are the finest trackers in the world, London Answers declares.

On many occasions they have performed feats which are almost beyond belief. But to them the work is quite habitual. The boys are taught to track from birth.

The women are just as expert as the men. Horse tracks are child's play to them. They can track a horse at full gallop. They can track anything—possums, snakes, iguanas, even beetles leave sufficient trail for them to work on.

The standard of honor among these tribes is high. When one of them breaks their strict code, fearing the wrath of the tribe, he bolts and, knowing he will be pursued, uses all his knowledge in an effort to elude those in search of him. But it is questionable if there is a single case on record where he escaped.

What might be called classes in tracking are held for the youngsters. The tutor will get them in a body and then disappear into the bush and do everything he can to make them lose his tracks. He will tiptoe along fallen logs, swim a quarter of a mile along a stream, double on his tracks, and so on. Finally he returns to the boys, who then set out to pick up the tracks.

RETURNS $35 STOLEN YEARS AGO IN HOLDUP

Evangelist, Then a Huckster, Gets Money in Conscience Letter—Accomplices Didn't Contribute.

Hagerstown, Ind.—Twenty-two years ago, as J. N. Baldwin, then a huckster, was driving to his home, five miles north of here, he was held up by three masked men and robbed of $35, the robbery occurring just at dusk on the public highway and in sight of his home. There was no clew, and the matter was dropped without investigation.

Mr. Baldwin, who seven years ago moved to Cowan, near Muncie, and is traveling as an evangelist, recently received a letter sent from this place, in which $35 was inclosed. The letter read:

> Here is your money. I want to get this from my mind and get clear of this s'n. All these years since I helped to rob you have been years of hell. I was but sixteen years old, and bad company got me into it. The gun I pointed at you while the other two highwaymen robbed you was a pocketknife. The other two that helped are still living, but neither helped me make this up to you.

Some Shakespeare Statistics.

There are 100,007 lines in Shakespeare and 814,780 words.

The longest play is "Hamlet." It has 3,930 lines.

The shortest is the "Comedy of Errors," with 1,777 lines.

The number of characters is 1,277, of which 157 are females.

The longest part of any character is that of Hamlet, who has 11,610 words to deliver.

The part with the longest word in it is that of Costard in "Love's Labor Lost," who tells Moth that he is "not so long by the head as honorificabilitudinitatibus." —Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Mediterranean Blue.

The extraordinary blueness of the Mediterranean has two causes. One is that very few large rivers of fresh water run into this sea; the second that the Mediterranean is practically landlocked and, being exposed to a powerful sun, evaporation is great. By actual test the waters of the Mediterranean are heavier and more salt than those of the Atlantic.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

"Fulton First, Last and All the Time"

A gentleman noted for his sunny disposition, a man who seems to "take life easy," it it is expressed, was asked the other day how it happened he was always in a good humor. "I am thinking all the time of the things I have, NOT of the things I expect to get." he replied. And there is a philosophy in the words that ought to be framed in the minds of all of us—logic and sound common sense. If the things which one possesses do not bring happiness, there is no use for further contest, for the things that are sought will be only things in possession when they are acquired.

And yet there are a lot of people in the world who have never come to the point of thinking of the things they possess. Always the mind is upon something else. They worry over the possibilities, and find fault with the probabilities of life. They get no pleasure out of acquiring, for there is ever something else to be acquired. When they incur a loss in business they brood over the loss, rather than taking stock of what they have left. So it seems that the gentleman of good humor, himself seeking further conquests and by no means sitting down and giving up the chase has the right philosophy—"I am thinking all the time of the things' I have, not of the things I expect to get."

Time was when men talked seriously of earning. Now we make a business of spending. And we complain of the high cost of living, when half of the time we should be condemning the high cost of spending.

Talking about business or "talking shop" is considered very bad form. But talking about the values, virtues and upkeep of autos is held to be an extra smart brand of conversation. Whether we will or not all this talk produces direct results. Talking about spending begets more spending. No matter how much we earn, we never have anything left. But somewhere between earning and spending, there should be a place for saving. By giving thought, we manage much spending. Much saving can be accomplished by the same simple process.

Show Him the Characteristics of the Family Citadel and He Will Judge the Rest—Special Easter Services at the Tabernacle

Evangelist Peacock preached upon a theme last night which has won fame for him, and that was, "Home."

A special service will be held in the tabernacle tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock, Mr. Peacock preaching a special sermon. Mr. Warth and Miss Painter will sing. Two other services will be held tomorrow, one at 2:30 p. m. and the other at 7:30 p. m. There will be no meeting at the big building Monday afternoon or evening, but on Tuesday afternoon there will be a service at 2:30 o'clock.

The receipts for the entire day yesterday were slightly over $100. It was announced last night that the business women's rally would be held in the State Street church at the supper hour next Thursday night, the young women being invited to go directly from their work to the church where they will be entertained at supper. They will later go in a body to attend the service in the tabernacle. Richard Keller, a druggist of Phoenix, made a request last night for the reservation of a block of 200 seats for next Thursday night to accomodate the tabernacle league of Phoenix.

Mr. Peacock's sermon in part was as follows:

His texts were II Kings 20: 15, "What have they seen in thine house?" and Joshua 24:15, "But as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

Dr. Chapman said on one occasion if you will tell me what is in your home as soon as you finish your story, I will give you a picture of your home life, whether yours is a home oof confusion or a home where peace reigns constantly. Give me the privilege of reading the names of your guests, the friends whom you delight to have in your house, the privilege of seeing the titles of the books on your shelves in your library, the magazines you permit to come into your home, to listen to your conversation when you do not know you are overheard, allow me to say a word or two, to put a pointed question to the servants of your household, then permit me to talk to your chosen friends, and then I will give you a perfect picture of

All are cordially invited to attend all these services, and a hearty welcome will be extended to all. Especially emphasis is placed on the Sunrise Service. This is the first time this service has been held in this parish.

DEAN BARRY TABLET NEARLY COMPLETED

Oswego—The Dean Barry memorial to be erected in St. Paul's cemetery may be dedicated on Memorial Day, May 30. This has not been definitely decided on as the executive committee of the Memorial Association has had no meeting since last fall. Individual members, however, are in favor of that date if the monument can be gotten ready and in place.

FIREMAN'S HEARING WAS POSTPONED

The investigation into the matter of the suspension from the Fire Department of John Dwyer, the fireman who refused to accept a special assignment at the Tabernacle, was adjourned last night until a night next week when the Police and Fire Commissioners will take final action.

Germans Attack Verdun Heavily From All Sides

On all the fronts around Verdun the Germans are heavily bombarding French positions, especially those occupied by the French in their last attack around Le Mort Homme, northwest of the fortress, and in the sector from the Eastern bank of the Meuse to Fort Vaux. No infantry engagements have taken place around Verdun, although Paris records the occupation of a part of the crater made by a German mine in the Argonne forest.

The Teutons in East Galicia near Popovagora went on the offensive against the Russians, but Petrograd asserts that their efforts were without result. The bombardment by the Germans of the Russians holding the Ikskull bridgehead is still inp rogress. Further south of this point, west of Olyka and north of Mourivatza, the Germans essayed an attempt against Russian trenches but were repulsed.

On the Austro-Italian front there have been the usual artillery duels and at various points small infantry engagements. At no point, however, has any important change in position taken place.

Petrograd reports that the Russian caucasus army continues on the offensive against the Turks in the Black Sea district of Asia Minor. Constantinople in acknowledging the occupation of Trebizond by the Russians says the town already had been evacuted in anticipation of its capture, the Turkish troops withdrawing "in accordance with instructions to a sector where they will have a new task to fulfill."

Another defeat of the British in the Tigris region near Felahie is recorded by Constantinople. The British are declared to have been forced to abandon with heavy losses advanced positions they had occupied and compelled to retreat westward.

COMMON COUNCIL

Banks Will be Asked for Loan—Aldermen Asked to Cooperate in Modernizing Street Conditions

At a special meeting of the Common Council held last night, H. W. Adkins, city chamberlain, was authorized to borrow $12,500 to provide for the city's share in financing the proposed First st. payment. This action was taken following the approval of the resolutions adopted by the Board of Public Works, in the preceding night, apportioning the cost of the job to the property owners along the street, the trolley company, the State and the City of Fulton. The $12,500 will be borrowed in all probality from one of the local banks. on a certificate of indebtedness.

As soon as the money is available, a formal notice will be sent to Albany, thus concluding the city's share in preliminary arrangements. The Board of Public Works discussed at its last meeting

TO ARMS; MARCH!

Following close on the heels of the Dress Up Week comes the Clean-Up campaign. The week of May 8-12th inclusive should prove to be one of the liveliest drubbings Fulton has ever experienced, and when the final trump is sounded on the 12th there should not be a crook nor cranny that has escaped the hands of the committee. The host of Fulton women chosen by the Chamber of Commerce to assist in making spick and span Mother Fulton's home is a step in the right direction. It is the business of Fulton women, as well as of Fulton men, that our city be a clean orderly, beautiful place in which to live. Like the individual home, so the community reflects the ideals of the people who live therein.

The spirit of cooperation so ably demonstrated this week in the business section may be duplicated throughout the residential and business districts if each individual makes an effort if ever so slight. Let each thinking person bear in mind that the main issue is a clean city; the issue is wider than this alone. As the winning of the prizes Display Week was the small factor of the issue just so a clean city in itself is the least of the resultant in a Clean-Up Campaign.

War has been declared in Fulton; the ultimatum has been read and as in Japan the message reads "It is said." Indifference and all its attendant imps must fly, so to the trenches with every loyal Fultonian. Amply supplied with brooms and rakes and seeds and good will the hostile hosts will meet a speedy finish.

To Arms! Forward March!

Mr. Horace Kent Tenney, in an address reproduced in the current issue of the Illinois Law Review, tells in this detail how the lawyer turns simple, colloquial, usable English into a "dead language."

"If a man comes to a lawyer and tells him that he has sold goods to another and not received his pay and wants a suit brought to enforce his rights, he may show to the lawyer a written contract evidencing the agreement of sale.

"That contract may be expressed in two telegrams, one of which from the seller to the buyer, would read: 'Offer to sell 1,000 tons of pig iron, $4.30 per ton, delivery thirty days, f. o. b. South Chicago docks, payment thirty days, draft against bill of lading.' And the other would say, "Accepted." A complete, perfect, enforcible contract sent by one live man to another live man over a live wire. And, having read it in the language of the living, the lawyer brings suit, and then he says: 'Now we will tell the court about it.'

And so, for the purpose of telling the court about it, he translates it into the language of the dead. And for that purpose he goes into his mausoleum and selects from among the solemn cerements of the dead a document already decorated—or mutilated—with 700 words, on which he finds inscribed the name. "Common Counts." And by a few strokes of the pen he makes this document, by the insertion of a few names and dates, refer to the individual case in which he is retained. And thus he has, by this translation, expanded the simple, plain statement of the contract made between those two live men into this elongated formal and formidable statement.

"And the first part of it begins with an averment that the plaintiff has sold to the defendant 'goods, wares and merchandise'—using three words where one would amply suffice, but not using one which describes or suggests the kind of goods which were the subject of the sale. So far as this document is concerned, it might be either pig iron or pigs or potash or pearls. And this he does not because it is the way he thinks or the way he speaks, but because it is the idiom of the dead language which he feels bound to employ.

"And then, having made this concealing statement of the facts, and having worded it in the formal language familiar to the men who knew Westminster Hall when it was a modern building, he gives rein, as they did, to his fancy, and proceeds to aver that a whole lot of things took place between these parties; that the plaintiff sold other 'goods, wares and merchandise' of different kinds; that he worked, and worked hard, for the defandant; that he lent him money, and had an accounting with him of various transactions between them. That, in short, between these two innocent bystanders there had taken place all of the transactions which can occur between men and result in money liability.

"And that he does, not by the use of the English language which he uses in his own transactions, or which anybody at any time has ever used in his own transactions, but only because it is the idiom and form of the dead language which he feels bound to employ."

We have seen a good many keen and logical pleas for the abandonment of "legal English." We never saw one that included the whole fact and argument as neatly and completely as this one illustrative case of Mr. Tenney's.

REPUTATION

Some one has said that 'Reputation is what men think of us; Character is what God knows of us."

In olden times there was vastly more difference between reputation and character than there is now. Be cause the people were ignorant, charlatans and fakirs of all kinds were able to build up wonderful reputations that they did not deserve.

Even now in countries where the people are not educated it is possible to deceive them in many ways. There is a good example of this in Mexico, where only a small percentage of the people can read and write. Nearly every man who can read and write has been able to gather around him a little band of poor, ignorant fellows who actually believe that he is the only man who can save the country. He gets these poor fellows to go out and kill and rob other men and burn their homes and destroy their business in the belief that they are freeing Mexico.

These little two-by-four leaders have built up great reputations with a few people because the people are ignorant.

There is a vast difference between their reputations among these ignorant people and their real character as seen by enlightened people.

The same thing is true in the Balkans and in Turkey and in Russia and in many other parts of the world where the most of the people are not educated.

There isn't much chance for people, and especially business men, to build up false reputations in this country. Those who do not advertise or brand their goods are sometimes able to fool people for awhile, but they usually are found out eventually.

For the advertiser it is next to impossible to build a false reputation. The only way he can make money is by building a reputation that will bring his customers back to him time after time and by having these customers send their friends to buy his product.—Utica Press.

OSBORNE'S TRIUMPH

With most of the indictments already dismissed, the indictment of Thomas M. Osborne, former warden of Sing Sing prison, for alleged personal immorality, is also dismissed. This practically ends the conspiracy against him by the bi-partisan Westchester machine, and leaves Mr. Osborne practically clear of all the charges made against him. There has been more than a suspicion from the first that the real cause of Mr. Osborne's persecution was that he interfered with the spoils which the Westchester politicians had been taking from the management of the prison. As soon as he is entirely cleared, as everybody expects he will be, his prosecution having apparently collapsed, it is most probable that he will be restored to his position, and allowed to continue unhampered in the future the beneficent humane work he was engaged in. The public, from what it knew of the facts, has been backing Mr. Osborne's character as against the purposes of those who were persecuting him.—Watertown Times.

NO MOON GREETED COLUMBUS

Anybody who says there was a full moon the night before Columbus discovered America isn't astronomically or historically accurate. And anybody who paints a picture of the scene with a full moon in it is open to criticism of folk who are finicky about details.

So it is that one of the pictures in the Ferris exhibition of historical American paintings, now in Congress Hall, finds itself being talked about. The painting represents Columbus's caravel the evening before the big find. There is a full moon just above the horizon, while the reflection of the setting sun is seen on the ship's sails.

A critic opened a controversy, and Dr. Eric Doolittle, professor of astronomy at the University of Pennsylvania, settled it. The critic said he didn't think there was a full moon that night. Doctor Doolittle, consulting his charts' proved there wasn't.

"On the night of October 11, 1492," he said, "the moon did not rise until 10 o'clock, and could not have been seen at sunset. Furthermore, it was midway between full moon and a half moon."—Philadelphia North American.

WITH THE SUFFRAGISTS

The Independent, in its page of significant remarks by people in the lime light, cites the following from Felix Tumulty: "It is the expedient thing for the politicians to get on the suffrage band wagon."

The New York Post answered the question, Why did Senator Brown who is opposed to woman suffrage fight to prevent a vote? by saying: Because he was convinced that woman suffrage would be defeated next year by 700,000 votes instead of 200,000.

The Premier of British Columbia has announced a referendum vote on woman suffrage at the coming general election. If it carries, the first of next year will see equal suffrage established in the province. It will in consequence be possible to travel from Mexico to the Behring Sea and from Hudson Bay to the Pacific Ocean without stepping foot off from territory in which women vote on equal terms with men.

In June, East Cleveland, which carried for suffrage in both 1912 and 1914, will ratify or reject a new city charter including a proposal for numicipal woman suffrage. The suffrage proposition was added by the unanimous vote of thec harter commissioners.

The Daily Mail, a London paper opposed to woman suffrage before the war, has been so impressed with the activities of women since that it suggests a cabinet containing equal numbers of men and women, because "women, the practical minded sex, not only talk but act."

Domesticity for women and a high death-rate seem to go hand in hand. Statistics from Germany, a country famous the world over for the strictness with which the housefrau has been kept to her kitchen, show that Germany for years has had an excessive infant death rate.

The German baby, so the report goes, with its super-domesticated mother doesn't begin to have as good a chance to live as the baby in England, where women have always worked in Political campaigns with men, or the French baby whose mother is the business partner of her husband, or the baby in America where women are—so says the cynic—anywhere but at home. And the report might have added that it is in equal suffrage New Zealand where one finds thel owest infant death rate in the world.

Your Handwriting Shows What You Are

By WILLIAM LESLIE FRENCH

4.—Obedience and the Reverse

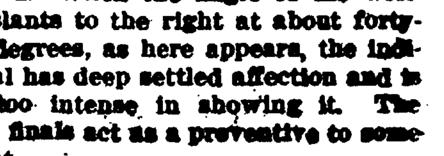
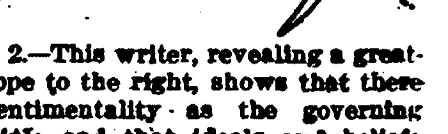
PROBABLY nothing plays so prominent a part in the lives of human beings as the affections. And the various degrees of love and the reverse appear like beacons to those who care to observe the signs. What is generally known as temperament is easily gauged from script forms. The first point to be considered is that the slope largely determines the degree of affection, the amount of emotion.

NO. 1.



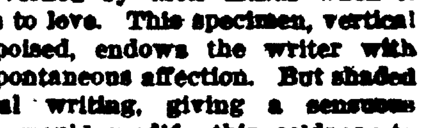
No. 1.—When the angle of the writing slants to the right at about forty-five degrees, as here appears, the individual has deep settled affection and is not too intense in showing it. The short finals act as a preventive to some extent.

NO. 2.



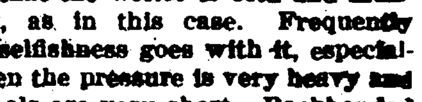
No. 2.—This writer, revealing a greater slope to the right, shows that there is sentimentality as the governing principle and that ideals and beliefs concerning others are high, for in this connection the more uniform the writing in pressure the more persistent the ideal. Were this writing larger and shaded, then the emotions would control.

NO. 3.



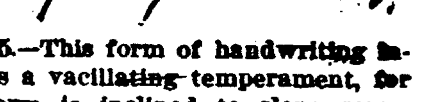
No. 3.—You will note that when the writing is upright persons are apt to be governed by their minds when it comes to love. This specimen, vertical and poised, endows the writer with less spontaneous affection. But shaded vertical writing, giving a sensuous trend, would modify this coldness to some extend; again, widely spaced, showing generosity of feeling, would also give more freedom.

NO. 4.



No. 4.—A deliberate backhand indicates that the writer is cold and indifferent, as in this case. Frequently gross selfishness goes with it, especially when the pressure is very heavy and the finals are very short. Backhanded script with extended final letters and letters rounded also gives the individual a good deal of human feeling. I do not wish the reader to think that all people who write like the above would be cold propositions.

NO. 5.

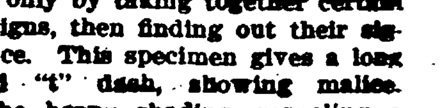


No. 5.—This form of handwriting indicates a vacillating temperament, for the form is inclined to slope somewhat to the right and then to the left. In the final court of appeal you would not find a perfect constancy in wabbly script.

NO. 6.

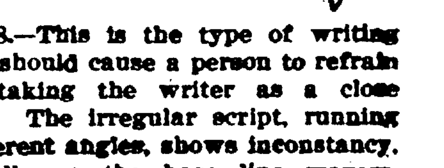
No. 6.—Honesty of purpose, directness and much reliability are denoted by straight writing, the base line not waving at all. So, taking the angle of this writing, you could be sure that constancy in affection would be found. The same with upright script.

NO. 7.



No. 7.—As hate and revenge are traits which are found in many different styles of writing, they can be determined only by taking together certain trait signs, then finding out their significance. This specimen gives a long pointed "t" dash, showing malice. And the heavy shading, revealing a strong animal nature with the marked slant, shows that such an individual would take revenge on any one who crossed him in love. The same would hold good if the writing were backhand, cross strokes blunted and the general style irregular.

NO. 8.



No. 8.—This is the type of writing which should cause a person to refrain from taking the writer as a close friend. The irregular script, running at different angles, shows inconstancy, especially as the base line wavers. Lying! The large, loose style and down strokes shaded give such a person emotionality and a loose way of doing things. Heavy, muddy script also shows the brutal tendencies, especially when the "t" and some down strokes end in a club formation.

Now, in regard to this question of the affections, there are signs which modify, not many, but important, though for general use those above described will help the reader to make a decision.

PROFESSOR IRVING FISHER.

SIMPLE LIFE BEST

Wear and Tear Cause Statesmen to Die Young.

SAYS WORK ISN'T TO BLAME.

New Haven, Conn.—That the simple life is the long one and that the convivial social life of the nation's representatives in congress is not conducive to longevity, but has, on the contrary, been the means of taking off at a too early age many of the best men of the country, are deductions made by Professor Irving Fisher, one of the best known political economists in the country, after an exhaustive study.

"Presidents, vice presidents and congressmen are a select group, endowed at the outset with unusual vitality. The vitality of most of them is severely taxed and materially reduced by the heavy responsibilities and bad personal hygiene incident to a public career. A minority escape the worst of these conditions and retain the major part of their natural endowment of vitality. Bad hygiene has been more destructive than the weight of responsibility.

"This conclusion is suggested by the fact that the vice presidents suffer a greater curtailment of life than the presidents, although vice presidents have far less responsibility, but spend much more time in Washington social life than the presidents. It is also suggested by the fact that the civil war period, with its greater weight of responsibility but more simple living, showed a lower mortality than the periods preceding and following, with less weight of responsibility but less simple living."

Professor Fisher said that historically there has been a progressive decrease in those causes of death consisting of infections which kill their victims chiefly at the earlier ages, but a progressive change for the worse in those causes of death consisting of the wear and tear diseases or degenerative diseases which kill their victims chiefly at the later years.

"These opposite changes," Professor Fisher says, "in the infectious and degenerative diseases would explain the improvement in mortality at the earlier ages and, on the other hand, the nonimprovement and, in the case of Yale graduates, even positive retrogression in the mortality of the older ages. Again, they would explain the marked exceptionality of the older ages in the civil war period. For if it was plain living which explained the low mortality of that period we should expect the more marked influence of that factor to appear just as it does, at the older ages at which the wear and tear mortality is chiefly registered.

"The damage to vitality which we find in public life is not, therefore, put forward as an argument against entering public service, nor will a knowledge of the facts probably tend in that direction, certainly not among those who place public interests above personal interests, as every public man should. But knowledge is power, and a knowledge of the facts should enable us to protect our public men or enable them to protect themselves and to do so in the public interest. This can be accomplished by better general health conditions in the country and its capital, by better health customs and habits, by better ideals and by a more systematic application of the perfect ideals already existing."

In connection with the lives of the presidents of the United States, Professor Fisher says:

"The longevity of each president is reckoned from the date of inauguration—that is, from the time of his first being president. Thus Washington became president at the age of fifty-seven, when the 'expectation' of life, according to the American experience table, was sixteen years. He actually lived, however, only eleven years instead of the sixteen. John Adams, on the other hand, lived after inauguration twenty-nine years, which was two and three times his expectation of thirteen years."

Girl Asserts Married Couple Should Quit When Love Ceases.

ALL SHOULD EXPRESS SELVES

Declares She Gives Vent to Her Feelings Every Morning in Singing, Shouting and Dancing About to Her Heart's Content.

Los Angeles, Cal.—"When married people cease to love they should quit. Marriage as we know it today is a terrible mistake. When two people fall in love nothing in the world should keep them apart."

This statement was but one of a series equally unorthodox which Miss Violette Wilson uttered at her father's home in outlining her unusual theories regarding life. Miss Wilson is the daughter of J. Stitt Wilson, former Socialist mayor of Berkeley. Recently, following an eight months' course at the University of California, she suddenly withdrew in order to get away from a system of education which she declared crushed her "individuality" and deprived her of her intellectual freedom and joined her father and mother here.

Miss Wilson is pretty. Although she is only nineteen, she outlined her ideals and aspirations with the touch of a woman twice her years. Also she is epigrammatic. When she says a thing she puts a "punch" in her every phrase, and some of the things she says are, to say the least, interesting.

"Why did I leave the university?" she echoed in answer to a question. "Simply because I was being stifled. I would sit and listen from 8 a. m. to 4 p. m. to some pompous professor who was telling me what he had read of other people's thoughts. It was intolerable to me. I planned a literary work. I began it in Berkeley. But in some strange way I found I could not work on it at the university. My ego was being crushed, and I left."

About the only things connected with modern college life of which Miss Wilson approves are the athletics and the student activities, such as the editing of papers. "Sororities should never be allowed," she ejaculated. "Athletics develop initiative—permit one to express self. At Baddale's, the school near London which I attended, I was the only girl on the football team. I played center wing, and I had a great time too!"

Freedom! That is Miss Wilson's favorite word. "What is life without freedom?" she exclaimed. "I have left the university. Were my ideals to clash with those of my father and mother I would not hesitate to leave them. I most assuredly wouldn't give in.

"We should all express ourselves. Before I take my bath every morning I dance. I put on a light chiffon garment, throw all the windows open and give vent to my feelings in singing, shouting and dancing about to my heart's content.

"The vast majority of men, especially business men, want a pretty little plaything for a wife. The sweet things hardly ever give a serious thought to the rearing of children. They know nothing about eugenics. They are, it must be confessed, clinging vines. They have no intellectual interests in common with their husbands. They are toys—pets!

"Some day there will be neither marriage nor divorce. We will rise to such a plane that love will be back of our unions—real love, which will not require a ceremony to make it legal and binding."

Meantime the professors are wondering why Miss Violette Wilson, one of their most brilliant pupils, departed from Berkeley.

SENT WRONG BODY.

Finds French Officer's Corpse Instead of Young Woman's in Coffin.

Crawfordsville, Ind.—Miss Helen Elston Smith of this city, niece of Mrs. Lew Wallace and of Mrs. Henry S. Lane, both of whom were distinguished Crawfordsville women, had the unusual experience in New York city recently of finding the body of a French army officer in the coffin which was supposed to contain the body of a young woman friend whose death occurred in Europe. Miss Smith was in New York to await the arrival of the body of her friend.

It is presumed that in some manner a mistake was made in the shipment of the coffin and that Miss Smith's friend's body was buried in some part of war stricken France with military honors.

BOYS HYPNOTIZE SELVES.

Students Do It by Gazing Steadily at Bright Object.

Columbia, Mo.—A demonstration of hypnotism by Professor Max Myer, head of the psychology department of the University of Missouri, recently showed that hypnosis can be induced without the influence of a hypnotist. Professor Myer hypnotized students by having them gaze fixedly at a bright object with no sound to distract attention.

Later he suggested that the hypnotized student was an artist painting a picture, a wounded soldier home from the trenches or an intoxicated diner out, and the students acted their parts. Lee S. Eads of Hamilton, Mo., was the star subject in Professor Myer's demonstration of hypnotism.

Color Harmony.

The key to all color harmony is simply this—that kindred or related colors harmonize, go well together, while unrelated colors are antagonistic to each other. Those colors are kindred which are side by side on the spectrum band or the color circuit. Red is kindred to orange because orange is an admixture of red and yellow; orange is kindred to yellow because of the yellow in the orange; yellow is akin to green because green is an admixture of yellow and blue.

AN ATTACK ON HUMAN WELFARE

Attempt of a Congressman to Lengthen Day of Toil.

SPIRIT OF RETROGRESSION.

Increasing the Hours of Labor Would Result in Decreased Efficiency and Consequent Economic Loss—Congress Has Too Long Neglected the Interest of Government Employees.

After a brief and ill advised existence the Borland amendment has been fittingly interred. At the last minute, when the legislative and judicial appropriations bill for 1917 was under consideration by the house committee on appropriations, Congressman William P. Borland of Missouri offered an amendment the purpose of which was to increase the minimum number of hours of work of government employees in the District of Columbia from seven to eight hours.

Mr. Borland offered the amendment purely upon his own responsibility and avowed that his purpose was in the interest of economy and efficiency. But the congressman who proposes to promote either economy or efficiency by increasing the hours for clerical work is in complete variance with the results of experience in all lines of work. Concentration of thought, sustained effort, accuracy and all the other qualities that are necessary for clerical work are secured in the best degree when the hours of work are short. These qualities require tension of nervous and physical energy. Fatigue resulting in decreasing efficiency invariably accompanies lengthening of hours of work.

A greater quantity and better quality of work can be accomplished by brain workers in short hours that permit ample time for recuperation, rest, recreation, leisure and other diversions. In proposing to lengthen the hours of work for government employees Mr. Borland represented a spirit of retrogression, the spirit of the old task driving employer who is willing to grind his employees lest any particle of energy should not be exhausted in the day's work.

Mr. Borland's proposal runs counter to a movement whose members have evolved out of their own struggles and experiences the philosophy of a shorter workday. These workers have learned that shortening the hours of work is the fundamental step in protection and betterment.

If Mr. Borland really desired to further efficiency and economy in government work he ought to have recommended a very different policy. He should have recommended ways and means for developing initiative, for bringing out the best ability of all employees and for enabling each to do the work best adapted to his ability and training. He ought to have recommended a retirement system with pensions for those no longer able to render adequate service to the government.

There ought also to be agencies for adjusting difficulties that arise in the course of work between clerks and their chiefs, to provide for discussion of conflicting claims and conflicting purposes and to furnish a permanent means whereby those who are working can express their ideas and their demands in regard to things that concern themselves as well as the service.

GREAT COST OF THE WAR.

Europe Spending $25,000,000,000 a Year. Mexican Invasion Cheap.

It is costing Europe $25,000,000,000 a year to carry on the war, according to figures in the April letter of the National City bank of New York. Uncle Sam's expedition into Mexico is costing $50 a minute—one nine-hundred-and-fifty-secondth of the European cost.

The annual rate of expenditure of the big fighting powers is divided as follows:

Great Britain, $5,000,000,000.
Germany, $6,000,000,000.
Russia, $6,000,000,000.
France, $4,400,000,000.

The remainder is made up by Italy, Servia, Bulgaria and other warring nations.

MANY IN FULTON TRY SIMPLE MIXTURE

Many Fulton people are surprised at the QUICK action of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-i-ka. This simple remedy acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel, removing such surprising foul matter that ONE SPOONFUL relieves almost ANY CASE constipation, sour stomach or gas. A few doses often relieve or prevent appendicitis. A short treatment helps chronic stomach trouble. The INSTANT, easy action of Adler-i-ka is astonishing. W. H. Gayer & Son, druggists. adv.

C. S. CARROLL TO GO TO NORWAY

Young Fultonian Receives Rapid Advancement---Will Leave America May 13th.

Friends of Charles Sumner Carroll, son of Mr. and Mrs. James K. Carroll of 168 W. 2nd st. are interested in the advancement of the young man, who left the employ of the Dilts Machine Works about four years ago to enter the Carborundum Company's works at Niagara Falls and who now has before him a voyage to Norway.

At the present time Mr. Carroll is in the employ as assistant salesman, of the Union Carbide Company, in Toronto, Canada, where he has risen in the esteem of his employers to the extent that when it came time to choose an assistant to the secretary of the company who is to have charge of the largest carbide manufacturing company in the world, young Carroll was selected. He will come to this city next Saturday on a short visit and will sail from New York harbor on May 13th on a Norwegian steamer bound for the "land of the midnight sun."

The Union Carbide Company has in course of construction an immense plant in a place near the capital of the country, Christiania, and with it will be built houses to accommodate the families of the officers and employes. The town will then have a population of about 6,000 persons.

In a letter to the folks at home young Mr. Carroll tells of the horrors of war witnessed since he has lived in Toronto; of the thousands of wounded and sick men brought from overseas to recover or die, and taken through the streets of the city. He has been assured that in crossing the Atlantic, which will occupy fifteen days, the vessel will be steered clear of thew ar zone.

GROCERS PROMISE TO BE CAREFUL

They Fear in Many Towns Pure Food Law Will Impose Many Penalties.

Grocerymen in many towns are somewhat uneasy because of the fact that they feel that they may be called upon to pay fines for possible violations of the pure food law which may innocently have occurred. Whether the local grocerymen will be called upon to liquidate with fines or not they do not know, but grocerymen in some of the other cities have been getting "stung" through violations of the law in selling packages of products which contain coloring and which they have failed to mark because of the lack of knowledge that itw as nesessary under the pure food act.

Much depends upon whether or not inspectors of the government have been here and found violations. They may not have been here at all as yet, but on the other hand they may have been here. The grocerymen do not know.

It seems that government inspectors have been visiting some of the cities and made the rounds of grocery stores. They made purchases of dried bulk goods like peaches, apples, apricots, prunes and similar food articles which are often artificially bleached or colored.

The law, so it has developed since the government has commenced taking action, requires that the fact that the food contains such coloring or bleaching be printed on the label of the original package and also that when they are sold in small packages that the groceryman write or stamp such information on the small package sold to the customer. It is soid that many of the grocerymen did not understand that they were compelled to write or stamp this information on the small package and that grocerymen generally have not been doing it with the result that many of them hove been "hooked."

If the federal inspectors have been here and found violations the grocers are liable to receive some jokers from Uncle Sam in the form of notices of fines. That has been the custom in some of the cities where the inspectors have visited and it is said that some grocerymen have had several $50 fines imposed. This has resulted in uprising on thet apr of the grocerymen in some of the cities where the violations have been found and they hove taken stands to fight it. If the inspectors have not been here as yet and in the event that they have and found no violations the Auburn groceryman need feel no fears regarding the pure food law in that regard.

In the event that inspectors have not visited Fulton they are liable to appeor at most any time because they do not get out any advance posters heralding their coming and with the knowledge that they are liable to get "hooked" for violations in not marking thep ackages of food that contain bleaches or coloring, telling what they are, the Fulton grocers can take time by the fetlock, as it were, and have everything fine and dandy when the inspectors go shopping for prunes and other dried fruits of the season.

Grocerymen in cities where the inspectors have called and found violations propose to fight their case on the ground that the government has not taken adequate means of informing them of the fine technicalities in the law and that the only fair way would have been to have warned them first and then taken action afterward if the violations were found after due warning had been given.

WHAT CARRIERS HANDLE DAILY

Number of Pieces and Weight of Them Will Astonish the Average Citizen.

The statement issued by Postmaster Peter T. Conley gives a pretty fair idea of the amount of weight that the city postmen carry each day and something of the amount of work that the force at the new Government building is called upon to do in the course of six days, rain or shine. The statement has been compiled in accordance with an order of the Postal Department, the figures representing the number of pieces of mail, first class and other, handled and the weight of it during one week, April 3 to 8.

The figures furnished by the postmaster show that the number of parcels delivered by carrier with horse and wagon (parcel post) were 665, an average of over one hundred each day.

Many letters are needed to make up one pound of first class mail, hence the average weight of this class carried by the city carriers, fifteen pounds, does not look big, but it should be observed that the seven men on the force delivered to residences and houses of business in the six days 105 pounds. This weight represented 4503 pieces of first class mail.

The postmaster's figures show that during the seven days the carriers handled an average of 1706 pieces of all classes of mail other than first class, representing an average in weight of 467 pounds.

The heaviest load distributed by one carrier on one day was 115 pounds and the largest number of pieces delivered on one day by one carrier was 1304.

The city carriers are employed eight each day, and the seven men engaged in the work serve a population of 11,059.

Mail is collected in the business section five times each week day, and in the residential sections of the city, three times. It is delivered three times in the ousiness section and two times in the residential sections.

All parcel post deliveries are made by man, horse and wagon, once each day, at 9 a. m.

The task of obtaining this statement was a big one to tackle and the clerks and carriers at the big post-office have been up to their ears in work since the jab of gathering the figures wasc ommenced. Work of counting and weighing the city mail was completed last week, but the rural mail cariers will continue their task throughout the month.

COMMON COUNCIL

the advisability of permitting the trolley company to maintain a schedule during the progress of the work, and to this end a conference will pe held by the city and trolley men for the purpose of reaching an agreement. It is feared that if the company operates its cars in the middle of the street over the freshly laid concrete before the brick is put in place there will be ac ertain amount of settling, which the city officials are anxious to avoid.

In addition to acting on the paving matter, the Councilmen audited election expense bills and granted the Wallace Advertising Company, of Oswego, permission to construct a fancy billboard at the foot of Rochester st., adjoining the Kennedy property. The board will be sixty feet in length, in the form of a right angle. The board will be illuminated at night by overhanging lights and will have fancy borders of moldings.

A number of communications were received from the Chamber of Commerce, submitted by Secretary Hollenga. Each one of the communications requested the Board's onsideration of nuisances existing within the city. The matters were left in the hands of which committees to investigate and report thereon. Certain buildings are dangerous to the public safety, the Chamber of Commerce thinks should be condemned. It was also asked that action be taken to prohibit thed isplay of merchandise on the sidewalks, which the Secretary claims does not conform to the practice of modern cities.

The practice of allowing beef to remain on the walks near shipping offices was discussed and it was recommended that the health officer put a stap to the practice. One of the communications objected to parking automobiles in the downtown streets; and that cars should be driven to the street corners to be turned around, the danger of turning in the middle of blocks being emphasized strongly.

Complaint was also made by the Chamber of the dust in the downtown streets. The Council was advised that as soon as the flusher is repaired and returned to the city downtown streets will be flushed each morning.

Mr. Hollenga requested the Council to appoint him as a Deputy Health Officer during the clean-up week in May. His desire was gratified, but the action of the Councilmen is subject to the approval of the Health Officer.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

It has been said of William Ewart Gladstone that he possessed a most gift, this, but there are some statistics fascinating; that he could make a romance out of a financial report and a poem out of a budget. A remarkable gift, this but there are some statistics that have in them so much of human interest that they need no such magic touch to lend them charm. Of this character are the figures which are coming to us through the medium of the press and correspondence from the new prohibition states.

Four hundred and one new accounts opened in Denver's laundries since prohibition went into effect—these simple figures bring to the mind's eye a picture of hundreds of weary, worn out women who through the long, saloon-cursed years have been bending over washtubs trying to earn a living for their families, now released for home duties because their husbands have become the breadwinners. Two thousand savings bank accounts opened in Denver since January 1—what an illumination this throws upon the situation in hundreds of homes that have lived on the ragged edge of poverty, liable in the event of accident, sickness or death, to plunge over the abyss; with the temptation of the saloon removed, finding themselves able to lay aside for the proverbial rainy day. Not a murder since January 1, a decrease of hundreds in suicides, only three-fifths as many crimes committed — how eloquently these facts tell of husbands brought back to wives, of fathers toc hildren, of sons to motherss, of weak wills controlled, and of worthless men restored to valuable citizenship.

Are not these facts and figures in themselves civic poems and realistic municipal masterpieces worthy of a Rudyard Kipling or an Edwin Markham?

Pure Logic.

Bad men cannot exist without good men. Goodness and badness being relative terms, if there were no good men there could not possibly be any one with whom to compare the bad men. Consequently the bad men would be to all intents and purposes nonexistent. Or, in other words, if all men were bad there would be no good men to look down upon them, and as they would not look down upon themselves and consider themselves bad they would be, for all practical and logical purposes, good.—Life.

Really Antique.

An excellent plaster of paris cast may be seen in one of the Egyptian galleries of the British museum of the famous sycamore statuette known as the "Sheikh-el-Beled," or "Village Sheikh." The original dates from 3900 B. C. and is still in perfect condition although it is the oldest known specimen of woodcarving. It represents an overseer of the workmen engaged in building the pyramids close to Sakkarao, where it was discovered.—London News.

HAVE YOU PAID YOUR INCOME TAX?

If yóu have reached that point in the accumulation of automobiles and other worldly gods where your income is opressive enough to warrant a federal tax and you have thus far failed to liquidate in accordance with the law, you will probably receive soon a rather trite and terse letter from the Internal Revenue Office in Syracuse calling your attention to the oversight and to the penalties that the government has attached for those who would avoid or neglect to pay their quota.

While being affluent enough to be called upon to pay income tax is looked upon by the less blessed as something to which to aspire, it seems that many of those who posses this wealth are cherishing it to the extent that they have neglected to produce their tax and for some weeks past the Syracuse office has had a corps of men at work rounding up the wealthy delinquents who have failed to meet the demands for the government and now the time has come when the office has set out to do the collecting.

Letters have been sent out to hundreds of moneyed people have overlooked the payment of their tax. These letters call attention to the fact that failure to file returns on April 1, has made the negligent ones liable to the penalties prescribed by law.

The letter further says:

"You are also notified that if the required return is not filed with me within 10 doys from the date heretc it will be my duty to examine your books and papers to prepare a return therefrom as provided in sections 3,-173 and 3,176 of ther evised statutes of the United States." The notice says: "Failure to file return may require summon compelling appearance at the office with your books."

WISHING AND GETTING.

An Old Man's Realized Day Dream and the Moral It Teaches.

They had started in the most primitive way, the man and his wife, back in the little log house, but they were dreaming of the day when they would own a farm of their own and not have to work so hard. After a time their hard toil was rewarded, and they owned a farm. Then it seemed desirable to add to this tract, and they worked a little harder. A new house seemed a necessary accompaniment to the large farm, so the work could not stop.

A son came to the age when he must be educated and have his chance in life, and they toiled on. All the time the old man dreamed of the days ahead when he could stop work and take life easy. Somehow the days did not come, or he did not recognize them when they came, for he kept on working until he had grown old and worn. Then his health failed, and he had to stop work.

The son for whom they had given precious years out of their lives now showed his gratitude by his gentle, unfailing love and care. It seemed to others that the goal had been reached—that the old man could now enjoy life, surrounded as he was by every comfort and attention. But he was quiet and sad, sitting with head bowed on his toil worn hands.

A neighbor, stopping in for a little visit, asked, "How are you getting along, grandpa?" Then the secret of all his sadness burst forth as he answered earnestly, "Oh, if I could only get out and work!"

What queer things our dreams are after all!—Indianapolis News.

PRETTY ROUGH SPORT.

The Game of "the Bounding Brothers of the Bosporus."

Many extraordinary forms of amusement have been devised by army officers from the earliest times down to the present day, but none perhaps have more startling characteristics than the following new and original game, which Sir Robert Baden-Powel describes in "Memories of India:",

It was introduced into the mess by a brother of our colonel, who came to stay with him. We believed him to be a quiet, harmless planter from Behar, and so he seemed throughout the evening, both during and after dinner, when he remained watching us playing the fool in various ways for our own amusement. But evidently our ways did not strike him as original, and he therefore invited us to play the great game of the bounding brothers of the Bosporus, and when he had once shown us we joined most heartily in the sport.

The game had few rules, but a certain amount of etiquette. The apparatus consisted of all the furniture, which was piled in a heap near the center of the room, and a writing table, which was placed a couple of yards from it. You were expected then to clap your hands three times—that was the etiquette of the game—then run at the table and turn heels over head on it into the pile of furniture, shouting as you did so, "I am a bounding brother of the Bosporus!" That was all. It was quite simple, but how it hurt when you landed on the upturned legs of a chair or the side of a table!

Ada Rehan's Bandsman.

Miss Ada Rehan used to say that the finest appreciation of her acting she ever observed came from a bandsman in the orchestra of a Birmingham theater. When she played the angry Katharine she had one piece of superb fury —a swift march to the back of the stage, a right about turn and then a straight march down the stage, pulling up short and sharp at the footlights. One night she saw a bandsman sitting directly in her line of advance shrink back in his chair at the moment of the full stop at the footlights.

"Sure, he thought, I wasn't going to stop on the stage," Miss Rehan said. "I wonder if he is married to a Katharine."

The next day she sent him a box of cigars.—Manchester Guardian.

Home Ties.

A sedate banker of Hamilton, Canada, was sitting in his office one morning when his ten-year-old hopeful drifted in, bearing with him an expression of unutterable gloom.

"Anything gone wrong, boy?" interrogated the financier. "Why, at your age you ought to be cheerful all the time."

"I know it, Frank; I know it," responded the youngster. "I'm doin' the best I can; but, honest, I had a terrible time up at the house with your wife this morning."—Saturday Evening Post.

For Young Folks

Taking Pictures on the Sand at Palm Beach.

Palm Beach, Fla., is the winter playground of many society folks from New York and other northern cities. By going south they miss the joys of winter, such as skating, coasting, snowballing and other healthful sports. Most of our young northerners, if they had their choice, would prefer to stay where the snow blows rather than spend it where the sun shines warmly all the time. That makes two summers in one year, which is almost too much of a good thing. The pure, bracing breezes of our northern clime put roses in the cheeks of the little people who brave its nipping frost. But we can't all think alike, so many enjoy the balmy breezes of the southland. The boy with the camera taking pictures in the sand is Master Jack Rutherford of New York. He seems to be having a good time and perhaps did not observe the camera man who turned the tables on him by snapping his photograph.

Feeding the Birds.

Whenever boy scouts take a winter hike a chance offers for that good turn to be done. By taking along a few pounds of cornmeal or a bagful of breadcrumbs and scattering some here and there in sheltered spots in the woods for the birds a great deal of substantial comfort and happiness may be given. After heavy snows, when fallen weed seeds and insects are covered up, or especially after sleet storms, when everything edible is coated over beyond possible finding for several days, many a little feathered "tummy" gets empty, and birds, with their excessive vitality and the necessity of keeping up a high normal temperature, are quickly weakened by lack of food and fall victims to resulting cold. It is not a rare thing to find many small sojourners in the winter woods frozen to death after a cold snap.

Boy Scouts Honor Anniversary.

Nearly 150,000 boys, members of the 7,375 troops of the Boy Scouts of America, assembled in special troop meeting on the evening of Feb. 8, in honor of the sixth anniversary of the incorporation of the boy scout movement in the United States. Promptly at 8:15 o'clock every scout stood at attention and repeated the scout oath:

On my honor I will do my best—

1. To do my duty to God and my country and to obey the scout law.
2. To help other people at all times.
3. To keep myself physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight.

Questions and Answers.

The following is an amusing game: Each player writes a question. On another slip of paper he writes an answer to the question. The questions are collected and put in a hat. Then the answers are collected and put in a different hat. Both are well shaken. Then each player draws a question and an answer. The result is very funny. For instance:

"Do you like roses?"
"Yes, with mustard."
"Do you like roast beef?"
"Those that smell nice."

Not Fair.

"Say, Bob," asked George, "is it true that schoolteachers get paid?"

"Certainly, it is," said Bob.

"Well, then," George said indignantly, "that ain't right. Why should the teachers get paid when we kids do all the work?"

The New Dress.

I've a new dress, don't you see,
Robin redbreast in the tree?
Tell me what you think of it!
Do you like it? Does it fit?

Don't you wish you wore a dress,
Instead of feathers? Now, confess!
Feathers are such funny things.
I could never use your wings.

Still I guess they suit you best,
Just as all girls should be dressed
As I am, so do not mind
If you think I've been unkind.

HOW TO CROCHET A PRETTY SILK PURSE.

Material required: Half ounce crochet silk, dark green or red, 1 hank steel or gold beads, No. 10, steel crochet hook, No. 18. Make a chain (ch) of 35, work 1 treble crochet (tc) 1 ch into the 4th ch from the hook. Repeat with 3 ch and work * 1 tc, 1 ch into each space between the tc stitches of last row and repeat from * to end of row. Work 5 more of these rows, break off the silk and make a second piece to correspond. In the 8th row of the second stitch join to the first with a single stitch and commence to work around with 3 ch. Work 3 rounds in the same manner, joining each with a single stitch. At the place where the two sides are joined one will be higher than the other. After the 4th round is joined work one round thus: * 3 d c, 4 ch, miss 3, repeat from * to end of round; end 1 dc. Break off thread and string the beads on to the silk with which you will continue.

From this point you will begin the beading. The rounds of beading are worked * 1 d c into the last stitch of the group of chain of previous round, 1 d c into the next d c, leaving 1 d c of last round not worked into; repeat from * all around. This will make a diagonal strip of solid crochet. For working in the beads draw the silk through once in each d c, then draw a bead close up to the hook before finishing the stitch. The beads will be on the inside of the work, i. e., on the opposite to that on which you are working, and will follow the diagonal strip. Work 13 rounds in this way and then 2 rounds of 3 ch, 2 d c, 1 round of 2 ch, 2 d c, 1 round of ch, 1 d c and draw up for the end of purse. When finished turn the beading side outward. Sew the two sides of the mouth on a pair of crossbars with a ring and drop for the other end of the purse.

FOR THE HORSEWOMAN.

How to Ride Horseback Even if You Aren't a Cowboy.

In riding sit erect and don't slouch along. Don't try to be a cowboy if you are not. We have the real simon pure cowpunchers and broncho busters, also we have the tinhorn variety of the same species. Steer clear of the latter; also be careful not to get into this category yourself.

Remember that a horse is only flesh and blood and not an auto. He gets tired and thirsty, and for goodness sake treat him accordingly. Because he is a livery horse and you are paying his hire treat him white just the same. Remember that some one else rode him yesterday and another will probably do so tomorrow. Give your horse the same kind of a deal you yourself would demand if you were in its place; even a broncho has "feelin's" and will appreciate your thoughtfulness.—Outlook.

How to Make a Unique Dust Cloth For the "Shower."

The next time you are invited to a novelty shower in honor of a bride to be or a bachelor girl who is getting ready for a two room apartment have ready a two in one gift. By this is meant a duster and glove combined. Buy a piece of cheesecloth measuring twelve inches square and then get another about eight inches square. Featherstitch the smaller to the larger piece, allowing one side to remain unattached. Trace the outline of some one's right hand on the little piece of cheesecloth and stitch along the lines directly through the two pieces. By slipping the hand in the fingers thus formed the neat little housekeeper can dust her furniture and protect her hand with the one article.

Should this gift seem insufficient you might make a bag of dark green calico. Make it fifteen inches long and nine inches wide. Finish it with a casing and run green tape through it. Across the front of it outline the word "Duster" with yellow cotton.

How to Make Clam Broth That is Delicious For Luncheons.

A delicious clam broth may be easily prepared by the following methods: Scrub and rinse the whole clams until the shells are bright and clean. Place on the bottom of the cook pot, hinge side up and close together. Cover about half the height of the clams with cold water and bring to the boil, when the clams will open and discharge their juices. Strain and serve. A little pepper and butter will improve the flavor.

How to Beat an Egg Quickly Without the Fuss of Whipping It.

Break the egg into an ordinary glass tumbler. Place a piece of clean tissue paper on the top. Hold it firmly down all round to keep out the air. Place the other hand on the top of the paper and shake the tumbler vigorously two or three times. The egg is then ready to use without any further effort and is as well beaten as if whipped for ten minutes.

How to Make Quince Marmalade For Breakfast Rolls.

MOTHERCRAFT.

The Wisdom of Treating a Child as if He Had Feelings.

Don't consider it necessary to systematically underrate your child. Your adult friends will know you do not mean it, but the child will not, and probably more characters are weakened by the lack of self confidence engendered by such a process than by the vanity which follows the silly bragging of overfond parents.

Don't think that the moment you are alone with your boy or girl you must find fault or endeavor to improve the occasion by a little moralizing, no matter in how loving a spirit. This is the hardest don't of all, for no one is so anxious to help a child toward perfection as is the parent, yet it surely leads to an avoidance of the moments alone together, which should be times of happy confidences.

Don't correct the child before others. Never mind if a well meaning relative does say, "My dear, I am surprised that you do not show more force of character; your children are suffering from a lack of discipline." Pass the matter over until you and the small offender can have it out alone. If the circumstances are such that it cannot be passed over take him out of the room.

Lastly, laugh often with, but never at, your child. This takes self denial, but it pays. Make up your mind that whatever others may say, he can depend upon you for a quick, sure understanding, without quibble or joke at his expense. This does not mean that he must not take his share of harmless fun. It is wholesome, and too much sheltering would make him oversensitive; but the mother who lets her child know that she never makes fun of him will be surprised at the confidence with which he relies upon it.—Mother's Magazine.

Economy In Curtains.

The best cheap material for the window curtains of a little summer cottage may be found in the common five cent cheesecloth. This has a texture which is more attractive than many handsomer materials, and it has the added charm of washing well, though extra length should be allowed in the hems and casings for shrinking.

Larded Sweetbreads.

Put them in cold water, remove the pipes and membranes; cook them in boiling salted water with one tablespoonful of lemon juice twenty minutes and plunge into cold water to harden; dry, lard them with strips of salt pork and bake until brown, basting with brown stock. Serve with peas.

Potato Drum.

Press three cupfuls of mashed potatoes through a sieve, add three tablespoonfuls of butter, half a teaspoonful of salt and the beaten yolks of three eggs. Shape with the fingers into the form of a drum, brown in the oven and serve with parsley stuck in the top.

Violet Underbodices.

Some of the new lace blouses show underbodices of pale violet crepe or silk. These are especially attractive for wear with a suit in some shade of purple or plum.

THE EASTER SUIT.

Expert Advice About Your Costume For April 23.

Gaberdines, serges, poplins, broadcloths, whipcords, golfines and bedford cords are prominent. Then there are the novelty materials in checks and stripes that will be very modish. The season's favored colors are navy, hague blue, tan, gray, reseda, black and white. The white tailored suit will be very smart for early spring wear.

In development youthfulness is the keynote. Skirts will continue short and will be ample in width. Many of the new models measure five yards at the bottom. The horizontal trimmings, such as folds, tucks, bands and ruchings, which are popular, emphasize the fulness. Many of the new skirts are shirred to the belt; others are gathered to a yoke, and then again the skirt may fit snugly over the hips and ripple below. Both the gored and circular skirt are fashionable. Panels are seen on the newest importations. A recent Paris model shows plaited panels at the sides, the front and back being plain. Side trimmings are strongly favored by fashionable dressmakers. This may be in the form of plain panels in matching or contrasting fabrics, horizontal plaits or cordings and in braided panels, and they extend the full length of the skirt.

In coats there is a great diversity. The suit coat may resemble the old fashioned pea jacket and extend just below the waist line, or it may be a close fitting jacket with a ripple effect below the waist line extending well over the hips. Some are in jaunty box effect, and others are in two sections, with the full lower section attached to a belt. All are equally modish. Collars are low and open at the throat, and there is a strong tendency to one or more capes falling from under the collar.

Fabric combinations are again in vogue and make it possible to renovate last year's suit. Serges and gaberdines are combined with taffeta or satin of the same or contrasting colors. A navy blue cloth with trimmings of black silk is very pretty. Checks and plaids are combined with plain fabrics. Faille and voile make a good combination. Navy blue with beige, brown with slate color, green, blue or brown with tan, belgian blue, with white or gray, are some fashionable color combinations.

and leave no heartache when smashed. Four of these, with pretty shades, will adorn your dinner table. A pair on your writing desk will give it quite a colonial tone, and two more on your dressing table will protect your beauty from the harsh facts of electric lighting.

The New Fichu.

The revival of Louis Seize fashions has renewed the interest in the fichu type of neckwear, and the demand therefor has been met by a clever manufacturer, who has designed a fichu that may be bought by the yard.

The fabric is georgette crape or net, edged with plaited ruffles of its own material or with tiny flounces of lace. Some of the fichus show embroidered designs. Then there is another style, where the fichu has one side fluted and the other finished with a picot edge.

No matter which way is preferred, fichus are all ready to be cut the desired length and draped on the shoulders. They go a long way toward freshening up a frock which is not absolutely new, but which is too good to be cast aside thus early in the season.

Surpliced Bodice.

The old time surplice bodice promises to be much in evidence as the season advances. It has been modified to meet the demands of the present, but is full of quaint grace and charm. Sometimes the fronts are extended about the waist to form a girdle, which ties in a bow with long sash ends at the back. The sleeves of these bodices are usually long and close fitting, with flared cuffs that half cover the hands.

Keeping In Touch With Fashion.

For the afternoon tea or bridge party this dress may be attractively developed in olive green satin combined with crepe Georgette.

If fashion indications are worth anything, it is certain that draped skirts and skeletonised bodices will have a great vogue for the remainder of spring and during the entire summer. This effective frock is developed in olive green satin and the blouse is of chiffon cloth. In medium size the costume requires 5 yards 40-inch satin and 2 yards 44-inch chiffon cloth. Women seeking attractive skirts to wear with summer waists would do well to select this model, for it is smart in taffeta as well as satin.

Today's dressmaking lesson deals with the cutting of the skirt. Study the cutting guide carefully to avoid mistakes, and be careful to see that the parts of the pattern are laid on the fold or on a lengthwise thread of the material, as directed.

The back gore and piecing for the front gore are laid on an open width of material, each section being placed over a lengthwise thread. The satin is doubled, of course.

Take the remainder of the goods and fold it in half. Place the front gore directly on the lengthwise fold, as illustrated in the cutting guide and all will be ready for work.

If the skirt is desired shorter than the length provided, cut off the lower edges of gores or turn a hem the desired amount.

The draped sides are trimmed with buttons of self-material, these buttons appearing again on the deep cuffs of the lace sleeves and on the points of the flare collar.

Sports Frock Of Checked Mohair.

A sport suit for street wear, fashioned from checked mohair. Trimmings and buttons of dark silk braid.

The present strong vogue of sport styles is a fashion development to which smart dressmakers are giving decided attention this season. The separate blouse or coat is the important garment in connection with the sport styles for street wear. The most fashionable model is shorter than other coats, but quite as full below the waist line. The costume shown here requires, for average size, 4⅝ yards 54-inch material.

It is an easy matter to make the coat. The underarm and shoulder seams are closed first, after which the front and back are gathered between double "TT" perforations. Sew the skirt section to gathered edge of front and back as notched then turn under edges of extensions in front and back on slot perforations; lap on skirt section to small "o" perforations, notches even: close seams underneath and press. Center-front of jacket is indicated by long line of small "o" perforations. Adjust underfacing to position underneath front, corresponding edge even. The front of jacket may be rolled back on small "o" perforations.

Face the 2 collar sections next and join the sections, notches and small "o" perforations even. Sew collar to neck edge of front as notched; and sew neck edge of back along small "o" perforations in collar section, center-backs even. Sew front edge of collar underneath front, bringing corresponding single large "O" perforations together.

Adjust the belt to position as illustrated, bringing front and back edges of belt to indicating small "o" perforations in front and back.

Then adjust belt strap to position on jacket, passing the ends through a buckle and fasten over the front edge of belt: leave the left end of strap free for opening.

Close sleeve seams as notched, easing any fulness between notches at elbow. Turn hem on small "o" perforations. Sew in armhole as notched, small "o" perforation at shoulder seam easing in any fulness.

A binding of dark braid, with buttons in corresponding color adds just the touch of contrast required.

The Kitchen Cupboard

SEASONABLE PUDDINGS.

PLUM PUDDING NOT TOO RICH.—Put half a pound of well chopped beef suet into a bowl, half a pound of raisins, half a pound of dark brown sugar, half a pound of breadcrumbs, half a pound of flour, the grated rind and the juice of one lemon, one teaspoonful of mixed spice two tablespoonfuls of molasses, mixing well with a wooden spoon as each ingredient is added. Now put in a saltspoonful of salt and stir in a pint of milk or a little more if necessary. Dip the pudding cloth into boiling water, sprinkle with flour, spread it over a bowl and pour in the pudding mixture. Boil hard for three hours filling up the saucepan as the water boils away. When taking up the pudding dip it into cold water for a second. It will then turn out firm and whole.

Grandmother's Indian Pudding.—One quart of milk, seven tablespoonfuls of Indian meal, one cupful of molasses, one-half teaspoonful of salt. Put the milk in a kettle and when scalding hot stir in the meal, which has been wet with a little cold milk. Take from the stove and add the molasses, the salt and one-half cupful of cold milk. If you wish, add two tablespoonfuls of chopped suet to make it richer. Bake two hours in a moderate oven.

Prune Pudding.—One pound prunes, whites of three eggs, two-thirds cupful of sugar, one teaspoonful of vanilla. Stew prunes until tender in as little water as possible. Pour off juice, remove stones and chop fine with silver knife. Beat whites of eggs until stiff, mix well with prunes, add sugar and beat hard again. Flavor with the vanilla, pour in unbuttered dish and bake in moderate oven twenty minutes. Serve with cream of milk.

Individual Apple Puddings.—Put a tablespoonful of thick sweet apple sauce in greased muffin tins. Make a batter of two cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of shortening worked in with the finger tips and milk to make a batter like cake. Put a tablespoonful of batter over apple in each muffin tin. Bake until batter is cooked. Turn out of tins and serve with a lemon sauce.

Changed the Koreans.

Koreans were quick to quarrel in ancient days and won a bad reputation on this account. At one time, a historian explains, fatal quarrels became so frequent in the country that drastic measures were necessary. A law was promulgated ordering adult males to wear on all occasions a china headdress shaped like an inverted flowerpot. It was impossible to fight when crowned with this fragile gear, and the penalties for removing it were severe. The first offense entailed fifty blows on the soles of the feet, and the second meant decapitation. This decree had the most soothing effects, the nature of the inhabitants changed as if by magic, and Korea was called the Land of the Morning Calm.

Worse Than Working.

The stage carpenter went to the theater manager and asked for an increase in his wages. The manager appeared surprised.

"Why," he exclaimed, "I really don't see my way to giving you a raise. You have nothing much to do. Half the time you are merely standing in the wings listening to the play."

"Yes, sir," replied the carpenter grimly; "that's just it."—Pittsburgh Telegraph.

Delay Explained.

"What are you doing there, Ellen?"

"Excuse me, miss, but my apron caught in the door."

"But you left the room ten minutes ago!"

"Yes, miss, but I only just found it out."—Passing Show.

"This is an odd way girls have of getting into society."

"How is it odd?"

"Why, to get in they first have to come out."—New York Journal.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

The sports Costume is to smart this season that it frequently is worn for a street suit. The model illustrated has a skirt of white cotton corduroy. Washable chinchilla cloth is used for the blouse, which is sashed and trimmed with large pockets. Two and one-half yards of cloth and 3 yards 40-inch corduroy make the suit. The chinchilla cloth should be 54 inches wide

ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH.

Diet Hints For Sufferers Afflicted With This Trouble.

Acidity of the stomach and ulcerated stomach are largely on the increase in both England and America, if statistics are to be believed. And Dr. Willard J. Stone points out in the Journal of the American Medical Association that these are the two countries in which the consumption of sugar is greatest.

Dr. Stone recommends an almost starch and sugar free diet for persons troubled with acidity. He says the following articles of food may be eaten with safety: Fresh fruit pulp or fruit juices, such as grapefruit, oranges, peaches and watermelon, without sugar; broth, soft boiled or poached eggs, fish, chicken, broiled or baked meats, bacon, milk, tea, cream, butter, green vegetables, such as asparagus, spinach, cauliflower, watercress, endive, squash, carrots, turnips, lettuce, fruit and lettuce salads, with olive oil dressing containing a very small quantity of lemon juice; Brazil nuts, pecans or filberts.

The following foods are prohibited: Candy, sugar, sirups and condiments; the fresh fruits which contain more than 10 per cent carbohydrates, such as apples, pears, bananas, cherries, currants, plums; of the vegetables, peas, parsnips, beans, potatoes, corn; the cereals, rice, macaroni, bread, crackers cocoa, chocolate and coffee.

Poisons in the Dark.

A writer in the Farm and Fireside gives some ingenious ways to identify poison bottles in the dark and to eliminate all chance of accident from mistaking drugs. "The safest method is to run a cord through the cork, leaving about eight inches of string on opposite sides of the cork. Then drive the cork in as tightly as possible and wrap the string around the neck of the bottle in opposite directions and tie securely. If that bottle is opened it will be opened intentionally. If there are no babies on the place an easier method is to run three or four pins crisscross through the cork. The pins sticking into the fingers will prevent accidental use of the contents."

World's Greatest Rink.

The largest skating rink in Europe, measuring about 35,000 square yards, is at Davos, in the canton of the Grisons, Switzerland, where all the great international skating competitions take place. It is generally open from the third week in November until the middle of March, and the climatic conditions prevailing at that altitude of 5,300 feet are so excellent that it is indeed an exception when the rink has ever to be closed during this period. A considerable staff of men is employed to maintain the rink in order. The ice is flooded every night and is scraped and polished in the morning with almost the same care that glass workers bestow upon plate glass.

your home though I may not be personally acquainted with you. This reveals to us that what we have in our homes generally determines what our homes are. By what people see in our homes and by knowing the kind of associates we have they are able to tell what sort of people we are. They can tell what we have been in the past, they can tell what we are at the present time, and what we will be in the future.

At home we see people in their every day clothes. We see them as they really are. And the question that comes to every one of us is the question put by Isaiah the prophet to Hezekiah, when the representatives from Babylon visited his home Isaiah said unto Hezekiah 'What have they seen in thine house?" and Hezekiah answered, "All the things that are in mine house have they seen." There is nothing among my treasures that I have not showed them."

I wonder how many people in this audience would be willing to show everything they have in their homes. Would we be willing to let visitors or strangers pass from one place to another in our homes, viewing everything we have in our possession? Would they see anything we would not like to have the world know about? Would they see in our homes things that would lead them to believe that we are honest sincere in our Christian profession or would they find many things not in keeping with the religion of our Lord and Master?

I fear that in many homes there are many things we would not like to have the world know about. There are many things not in keeping with the religion of Jesus Christ. Quite a number of people would be compelled to clean house or be exposed. We all have a desire to appear as well as we possibly can before the public eye, but what we have in our homes really determines what we are, and what our homes are.

The Nation's Greatest Need

Napoleon was once asked, "What is the real need of the French nation?" His reply was, "The greatest need of the French nation is mothers." This is true of the French nation. If I were asked to tell the greatest need of the American nation, I am sure I would not say financial responsibilities, I would not say greater resources in the mining and manufacturing world, but I believe the greatest need of the American people is that we go back to the days when the great majority of the people worshiped God in their homes and lived according to the precepts of God. Now I want to speak to you regarding the home. This should be the dearest spot in all the world to every right thinking man and woman that amounts to anything in this life. Because no matter where we go in this world there is no place quite like home.

The Defect in Homes

The downfall of most every man or woman can be traced to some defect in the home. Every gambler, every drunkard, every libertine, every murderer, every seducer, every harlot, every one of these depraved characters at one time sat at some mothers knee and learned to lisp the mother tongue. The trouble with many people is this, they furnish their homes nicely and they seem to have good intentions but God and Christ are shut out. This is where many make a mistake. God in the heart, God in the life, and God in the home will make thep oorest home the happiest place in all the world. If our homes are Bethels of God, the influences going out will be good, but if we have shut God out the influence will be for evil.

A little girl went on an errand to an elegantly furnished home. The lady was very proud of her home and she showed her the carpets, pictures and flowers, and said: "Don't you think these are lovely?" "They are beautiful," said the little girl. "What a beautiful home for Jesus to visit. Does he ever come here?" "Why, no," said the lady. "Don't you ever ask him?" asked the little girl. "We have only one room and a bed room and we have no carpets and we have no beautiful things in our home, but Jesus comes and makes us very happy." The lady told her husband of the conversation she had had with the little girl and he replied with tears in his eyes: "I have often thought we ought to worship God and thank him for his goodness and ask him to come and live with us." Through the influence of that little girl they became Christians and Jesus came and made them very happy. Jesus will bless and and every home where he is permitted to enter and if your home is not the happiest place in all the world, it is because Jesus is not occupying his proper place in your home. I wonder how many houses in this community have these words for a motto: "As for me and my house we will serve the Lord.'

Responsibility of Parents

The parents have no interest in spiritual things, and as a result the children are just like the parents. In very few cases does a family which does not send its children to Sabbath School ever open a Bible to say nothing of teaching it to the children. Is it any wonder children grow up wild? Is it any wonder when young men and women reach the age of 14 to 16 they drift away from the Sabbath School and church? When God is not honored in the home, in nine cases out of ten the children will not have much interest in the church. The great majority of the children in this country are growing up on yellow journalism, snappy magazines, and moving picture shows, and cheap vaudeville.

The streets of all our towns and cities the being lined with 5-cent theatres. Children swarm into them. At home they read the Sunday newspaper and spend the Sabbath feasting on the funny page. This paper has taken the place of the Bible in a great many homes. Our boys and girls are getting steeped in this atmosphere. Can it be said by the members of a home where the Sunday papers have taken the place of the Bible, "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

If the home is not a Bethel of God the children brought up in that home will not know very much about Jesus Christ. The Sabbath School has a work to do and in many places the Sabbath School is going a grand good work, but the Sabbath School can never take the place of the home. The day school can never take the place of the home. The day schools have to devote their energies largely to training the children to earn their living. Because of so much sectarian feeling in our land, teachers cannot teach religion. The word of God has been ruled out of many public schools. The teachers aren ot even permitted to read the Bible in the presence of the children. In many schools the voice of prayer is never heard. If children are to receive a religious training it must be in the home. If the parents have no concern about spiritual things, how can the children be taught about sipiritual things? In many homes the Bible is not worth considering. It is out of date.

So many people in the land are so strong intellectually they think the study of the Bible a waste of time. They would much prefer a yellow back novel. They know nothing about the teaching of God's Holy book, and they have no rock upon which to stand. Now if you think the Bible is out of date, and is not worth considering, if the Sabbath School is not a good place to send children, if religion is a sham, what kind of training are our children to receive? Shall we rear the present generation of youth on newspapers, theatre and moving pictures, or on the Bible?

The influence of the home will be good or bad. We have two opposing parties. God and thed evil. One will make good, honest men and women, the other makes criminals. To which class do you desire your children to belong. Much depends upon the instruction in the home. Many children are growing up in this land who know nothing about the Bible. They would not recognize the commonest reference in public speech.

I remember of once reading two passages of scripture at a funeral one was thep arable of the wise and foolish Virgins, the other, Ecc. 12th chapter. After the service a man came to me, a father, a member of the church and asked where he could find the references. He said, "I have never heard that part of the Bible before." Is it any wonder that we sometimes feel alarmed in regard to the influences of the home. If mothers, would spend more time in teaching their children the Bible and not so much gossip and society itw ould be ag reat blessing to the future generations. And if fathers would read and pray in the presence of their children not so many children would be wandering the street on Sabbath evening when they should be in the house of God. You say, "I do read the Bible and pray. I do teach my children the will of God." Well? Do you live it in their presence? Some people have family prayers and they get up from their knees and begin to rail about everything and everybody connected with the work of the Lord. It would be better for you and your family if you never had family prayer in your home, because your influence is not for the advancement of Christ's Kingdom. As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord. What does he mean? He means no matter what happens, no matter what others do, they can do as they please, no matter what the circumstances may be, under all circumstances he intends to serve God. This is genuine Christianity. The only kind of Christianity. The only kind that will bring blessings, temporal and spiritual to the home, and make the home a fit dwelling place for God. Can you reach the standard.

Delicate Instruments.

Though the man in the street might easily mistake a slight seismic disturbance for the rumbling of a traction engine or an explosion, the marvelously delicate instruments which record earthquake shocks are immune from such deceptions. Sunk in the earth on solid foundations, the recording pen of the seismometer ignores any local tremblings which have not a seismic origin, but the faintest real earth quakings, though they have traveled thousands of miles through the earth, set the pen tracing the telltale graph by means of which the seismologist calculates the place, time and magnitude of the happening.—London Chronicle.

He Made Good.

Lord Lansdowne once had a remarkable prophecy made concerning him while he was an Oxford graduate. Jowett, his tutor at Balliol, greatly admired him and always said that he would do great things.

"There goes a man," remarked Jowett, "who is as certain to be foreign secretary in due time in whichever party he chooses as tomorrow's sun is to rise."

Of course at that time Lord Lansdowne had not the least idea of filling such a distinguished post, and yet in 1900, after a brilliant political career, he found himself at the head of the foreign office.—London M. A. P.

Wearing Your Rubbers.

How to elude your wife when she insists that you positively must wear your rubbers when you go out:

First.—Tell her you positively will not do it. This will produce in her an attitude of resignation, and she will almost forgive you for not wearing them, for giving her a chance to act the role of a martyr.

Second.—Say that you never wore rubbers before you were married. She will then tell you that you were always sick, too, and will work herself into a jovial glow by thinking what good care she is taking of you.

Third.—Wear the rubbers to keep peace in the family.—Judge.

Learning From Tumbles.

It does not matter how many tumbles you have in this life so long as you do not get dirty when you tumble. There is the greatest practical benefit in making a few failures in life. You learn that which is of inestimable importance—that there are a great many people in the world who are just as clever as you are. * * * and you very soon find out, if you have not found it out before, that patience and tenacity of purpose are worth more than twice their weight in cleverness.—Huxley.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

"Fulton First, Last and All the Time"

The gray winter of the North is passing. The path of the bleak season is strewn with all that is ugly and discouraging. The roads and walks are dismally unsightly. Piles or rubbish, everywhere, protrude upon the view in all their nakedness. Even the front-yard lawn, once green and velvety, after the ravages of frost and snow and water looks gray in its dejection. The scenery everywhere is typical of a wasted life. But soon the warm sun and spring's breezes will kiss the earth and all this bleakness and ugliness will be gone. Nature's green mantle will spread over the ground covering almost every inch of its naked unsightliness. The trees will be filled with leaves, and then will come the birds to sing and the blossoms to perfume the air. The dismal earth will be filled with life, song and beauty again. Our paradise will be renewed. Cannot every dismal, ugly, wasted life have a springtime, when it may start all over again? If trees, a year older, can dress up and be new again, may not a man? Why may not a human being with a wintry past resolve on a spring, followed with a forever summer, and with never another winter? The message of spring is HOPE.

Has it ever occured to any of the efficiency experts, cost of living computers, and welfare workers, that there is one important economic factor that never gets consideration? Does Mother ever get a day off? At first glance this seems a ridiculous inquiry. But second thought strips it of amusing qualities. How many Mothers are given a day off? How many business institutions or industrial concerns could exist if the general manager were required to work with the persistence and monotony imposed on Mothers? When one employs a servant, the matter of the "day off" must be settled before any agreement can be reached. The same is true of nurse, laundress, housemaid, cook, butler,—all persons employed in domestic service except only that one person who does the work of all these servants in a great majority of homes.

Everybody gets a day off but Mother, and she works all the time—to paraphrase the once popular song. Mother works so continuously that most of us don't realize exactly what she does.

Why wouldn't it be a good idea to start a campaign for a Mother's Day Off?

Why wouldn't it be a good plan for everybody in the district on a certain day—say June 1st—ordain that Mother shall not be called at 6:30 to begin the day's work; that father and the children will get their own breakfast; that Mary shall do the sweeping and dusting; that father shall see that all buttons are on and faces washed before the children start to school; likewise let father give the orders to the grocer, or, better yet, let the family take dinner at a resturant for the day.

On this day Mother is not to be disturbed. She is to be permitted to go where she likes. No questions are to be addressed to her regarding domestic affairs. She is to rise when she likes, go where she likes, stay as long as she likes. She will have a night key and let herself in when she completes her day. The family is to do exactly as though on day Mother wasn't. It looks like a good thing. Let's try it out in Fulton.

EVANGELIST DEFENDS CHRISTIANITY'S BELIEF IN THE RESURRECTION

The first week of the Peacock campaign showed Satueday night, a total attendance for the week of 10,150 persons and $438.50 in collections. Sunday's attendance of 5,200 or approximately one-half the population of the city brought the attendance record for the eight days up to 16,150 and swelled the collections to the total amount of $696.19.

There were three services yesterday, the morning meeting being attended by 2,000 persons, the afternoon session by 1,200 and the evening attendance being 2,000. The collections for the day were respectively $149.19, $28.52 and $60.01.

The program for the coming week is as follows: Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons regular services at 2:30 o'clock; Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings, commencing at 7:30. Mr. Warth and Mr. Davidson will meet with the children at 3:45 tomorrow afternoon to practice for the children's chorus which will replace the regular Tabernacle choir at the Saturday night meeting.

Tuesday night, the First Methodist church members will attend in a body; Wednesday night, the Baptist church, and Thursday night the Presbyterian church members and the business women. The business women before the meeting will be the guests of the women from the different church at a luncheon in the State street church. Thursday night, 200 members of the Phoenix Tabernacle League will have as ection reserved in the building.

Dr. Peacock's morning sermon was in part as follows:

1st Peter 1: 3-4. Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which, according to His abundant mercy, hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in Heaven for you.

The resurrection of Jesus Christ is a subject of never ending interest to the people of God. It is a subject upon which men have held varied opinions. Those who have no faith in Jesus as the Son of God have tried to prove that the Resurrection is simply an imaginary tale in the minds of His disciples. While those who believe in Jesus Christ as the Saviour of the world are positive that Christ did rise from the grave and ascend to the right hand of the throne of God.

To the thoughtful mind, to the sore heart, no language can be sweeter, or more beautiful than the words of the Apostle Peter in this text: Blessed be the God and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which, according to His abundant mercy, hath begotten us again unto al ively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefied, and that fadeth not away, reserved in Heaven for you." And then we are interested in this great theme because the shadows darken over our own pathway. We are moving toward weakness and defering, into the dark grave. And the question that naturally comes into the mind as we look upon these things is, "If a man die, shall he live again?" No human being has been able to answer this question. Call in the best physician in Fulton, call upon the greatest surgeon in the world, and if he speaks truthfully he will be compelled to say, "I cannot answer the question." Go to your philosopher, say to him, "I have come to ask this question: "If a man die, shall he live again?" " He cannot tell you anything about it. Go to the millionaire, say to him, "Millionaire, you have money You can buy courts and judges and legislatures. Tell me, if we die, will we live again?" He cannot answer the question, Go to Alexander the Great, who, after conquering the world, sat down and wept because there were no more worlds to conquer. Ask him this question, Can he answer it? No, The only one able to answer this question was Jesus Christ. He said: "I am the resurrection and the life. He that believeth on me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."

The resurrection of Jesus Christ is the one torch that has done more to enlighten the people of this world than all other torches. It reveals to us that Jesus had the power to conquer physical death; that he had the power to rise from the dead. He had the power to raise others from the dead to an inheritance incorruptible and undfiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in Heaven for all who are kept through the power of God through faith unto salvation. This is the hope of the Christian. Peter says, "It is a live hope, not a dead hope; not a lanquid and languishing hope; but a living vital active principle. It's author is God. It's source is mercy, it's medium or channel is through the resurrection of Jesus Christ. It brings us to an inheritance which we begin to enjoy here, and shall continue to enjoy unceasingly in the hereafter. Because this inheritance is incorruptible and undefiled and fadeth not away, this is altogether different from the things of this world. We are told the things of this world will perish, but the blessings of Jesus Christ will be reserved in Heaven for the people of God. Is it any wonder that Peter burst forth into such grateful emotion when he said, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to His abundant mercy, hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by ther esurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in Heaven for you?" These are the words of experience. Peter knew what he was talking about. He knew God had begotten him unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus. Paul had passed through a similar experience when he said: "Now this I say brethren, that flesh cannot inherit the Kingdom of God. Neither doth corruption inherit incorruption. Behold, I shew you a mystery; We shall not all sleep, but we shall be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised, and we shall bec hanged. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruption shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, "Death is swallowed up in victory. O. Death,

Chancellor in Berlin With Kaiser's Reply; Wilson Defended

Berlin, via Copenhagen to London.—The Imperial Chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, returned to Berlin this afternoon, which would seem to justify the assumption that the empire's responsible leaders at Great Headquarters have finished consideration of the American note and reached a decision concerning Germany's reply. What this reply will be naturally is unknown to any but the highest officials.

The Imperial Chancellor's return, it is understood, was not expected until Tuesday; hence a general decision appears to have been reached earlier than was looked for. There is no intimation of when the reply wil be formulated, but there seems to be much significance in the fact that the Lokalanzeiger, which is consistently well informed, says that "Germany's strength and prestige have so increased in the last twenty months in the eyes of the whole world that the German government has, indeed, only to follow the commandments of wisdom."

The obvious deduction, according to the view here, is that there is nothing to prevent Germany from making certain concessions if the leaders feel they can properly do so. Whether they do feel they can go thus far is ,of course, another question.

There unquestionably is a considerable peace party in Germany, which includes powerful financial interests, represented by the Bourse organs and the Frankfurter Zeitung, and including also the Berlin Tageblatt and socialist organs, Certain high officials also would consent to a breach or war with the United States only most reluctantly andu nderp ressure of what seems to them an unavoidable necessity.

It may be not without significance that Herr Meximilian Harden was permitted top rint a remarkable article in his newspaper, Zukunft, defending President Wilson's standpoint in plain words.

Whitman Says Hughes Must Run if Chosen

New York—Governor Whitman last night fired a new gun in the campaign to bring about the nomination of Justice Charles E. Hughes for the Presidency. He declared that it is for the people of the country, and not the Supreme Court justice, to determine whether he shall be President.

"I have not conferred with Justice Hughes on the subject," he said, "and I mean no disrespect to him when I say that I am not very deeply concerned about his individual desires in the matter. If the people of this nation believe that the welfare of the Republic requires his presence in the White House they have the right to insist that he shall go there. It is for them to decide and not for him, and I purpose to do everything in my power at Chicago to assist in the free expression of thec hoice which I believe is the sincere and well nigh universal choice of the republican party."

Although there have been intimations that Governor Whitman's advocacy of Justice Hughes nomination was ac loak for the Roosevelt boom, it may be stated on the very highest authority that he firmly believes Justice Hughes will accept a nomination and is sincerely for him. It is said by his friends also that he has not the slightest doubht that if popular sentiment finds expression Justice Hughes will be nominated almost without opposition at Chicago.

The Governor is not laying the foundation for a renomination for Governor on a Presidential boom for some one else. He has been assured by those who are in a position to know that his renomination is certain, no matter who may be named for President. There is a belief, however, that the Governor believes Justice Hughes as the Presidential nominee would carry New York State by a tremendous majority and therefore make reasonably sure the election of any other candidate on the ticket in the State.

IT IS BETTER TO LAUGH AT THEM

The readers of this newspaper are fully cognizant of the fact that in the opinion of the great majority of living, pulsating individuals, no greater opportunity ever existed in Fulton for a demonstration of the benefits which have or should have come to us after more than one year's expenditure of hard work and much money to rebuild a community than was presented during display week. Editorially and by giving over a large space free each day to the propaganda of the Chamber of Commerce the merchants and the buyers of this city have been told of the inconsistencies attending the practices of the past. Good business reasoning has been used, because it has been a belief that no greater service could be rendered the community than to encourage the lopping off of expenditures which build up away-from-home enterprises at the expense of those at home; and because the money thus spent is taken in great part from the pockets of people to whom the payment would be a real benefit. Naturally, therefore, this newspaper is rejoiced to observe indications of a return to sane doings. It is comforting at least to be warranted in recording the fact that with two exceptions the merchants of this city found it possible to be consistent in their dealings with home institutions by expressing appreciation of favors received through mediums which give freely of time and space (meaning money) to their business interests. These exceptions, we feel, should not be passed unnoticed, because of the ridiculous appearance they present. They are the acme of indifference to all teachings in connection with stimulating a belief in the making of Fulton a community of home-loving people; of establishing here a good example of consistency in everything relating to town development. They might be taken even more seriously but for the humorous side of life they present. And as for the action of the men who won prizes, and had the temerity to abuse the organization which gave them an avenue of escape from the bondage they have suffered for years, and the effect of that bond, no term too severe can adequately describe the spirit which prompts men to flaunt through a foreign medium their defiance of an observance of proper regard for home institutions. By this we mean the unprecedented and unbusiness-like action of merchants who announced their appreciation of prizes in a medium which does little or nothing for home institutions. It is here that the humorous situation develops, and The Evening Times is just tickled to death. It makes us laugh till we have a pain between the ribs to see men do things that might pass unnoticed in a boy. We therefore laugh at, and have pity for, the boys grown up who ask for something they do not give—support to "Fulton, first, last and all the time."

ECONOMY IN GOVERNMENT

(By Grover Cleveland)

It is the duty of those serving the people in public places to closely limit public expenditures to the actual needs of the government economically administered, because this bounds the right of the government to exact tribute from the earnings of labor or the property of the citizen, and because public extravagance begets extravagance among the people. We should never be ashamed of the simplicity and prudential economies which are best suited to the operation of a republican form of government and most compatible with the mission of the American people. Those who are selected for a limited time to manage public affairs are still of the people, and may do much by their example to encourage, consistently with the dignity of their official functions, that plain way of life which among their fellow citizens aids integrity and promotes thrift and prosperity. The genius of our institutions, the needs of our people in their home life, and the attention which is demanded for the settlement and development of the resources of our vast territory, dictate the scrupulous avoidance of any departure from that foreign policy commended by the history, the traditions, and the prosperity of our republic. It is the policy of independence, favored by our position and defended by our known love of justice and by our own power. It is the policy of peace suitable to our interests. It is the policy of neutrality, rejecting any share in foreign broils and ambitions upon other continents and repelling their intrusion here. It is the policy of Monroe, and of Washington, and Jefferson—"Peace, commerce, and honest friendship with all nations; entangling alliance with none."

OLD CHURCH MAY DISAPPEAR

Among the interesting questions coming before the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which will hold its quadrennial session at Saratoga Springs in May, will be the proposition to remove the old John Street Church edifice in New York, and allow a modern skyscraper—which will house the congregation somewhere within its walls— to be erected on the site. The land, the dimensions of which ar 82 by 62 feet, is valued at $500,000. This church was the mother congregation of Methodism in the United States, and is free from debt. The plan of selling the land and erecting a memorial skyscraper must be passed upon by the General Conference, which took over the title fifty years ago. As the question has not been greatly discussed, the outcome is problematical, as some of the old-time Methodists would regret to see the interesting relic of the founding of their denomination disappear. —Rochester Chronicle and Democrat

DAUGHTERS AND MOTHERS

Nature has sternly decreed that everybody cannot be a college girl, but the thoughtfulness of some of the statistical sharps has made it possible for everybody to know exactly how the college girl spends her money. The striking feature about the tables published showing the financial activities of the girls of Smith College is that very little money is wasted on the frivolous things of life. The average per capita expenditure there last year for "recreation, hospitality and extra food" was $35.09. That is, the average Smith girl spends 87.4 per cent of her money for necessities; 8.3 per cent, for pleasure—which includes contributions to church and charitiy—and 4.2 per cent for books and stationery.

Thrift and frugality evidently are a part of the equipment of the girl who goes to college—if the Smith girl is a fair sample. The idea that the college girl squanders enormous sums on soda water and bonbons must have originated with some would-be funny paper published by envious boys at a college not affiliated with the coeducational movement. Certainly the average college boy could not confine his expenditures for pleasuse to $35 a year—even including his contributions for charity and religious purposes—without acquiring a reputation as a "tightwad" that would follow hiim all through life.

If the small boy took any interest in statistics it would be easy for him to understand why it requires almost the equivalent of an operation to induce mother to dole out a few pennies for his use for purposes of gayety. He would also understand how it happened that the Illinois Congress of Mothers had the heartlessness to vote in favor of abolishing pie and long licorice strings. The daughter is mother to the woman, just as the boy is father to the man, and habits of prudence acquired in college naturally manifest themselves in after life. But the masculine person of adult years will place a certain importance on the mission of the Illinois Congress of Mothers to go on record in opposition to chewing gum.—Rochester Express.

TRADE CONDITIONS CONTINUE TO IMPROVE

Dun's Review, last week, says:

All elements considered, it is remarkable that business continues so large in volume. International complications—intensified by the develop ments of the week—fail to shake confidence or to check progress, nor have the extremely high costs diminished consumptive buying. The magnitude of demand, holding in spite of the general and extensive rise of prices, becomes more noteworthy, and transactions, though not yet at the maximum, run far beyond precedent. Outputs in leading lines largely surpass those of any previous year; yet all requirements are not being filled, because many producers are either unable to obtain a sufficient supply of materials and of skilled labor, or are booked so far ahead that additional contracts cannot now be taken. Transportation facilities continue inadequate, but some headway is made in relieving the traffic congestion and there is less complaint of retarded deliveries. Further wage advances, in most cases voluntary, testify to great industrial prosperity and, with millions of dollars added to pay rolls, saving deposits accumulate. The augmented purchasing power of consumers, however, is not yet fully reflected in the mercantile field, owing to backward weather in many sections. Easter business, while probably unprecedented in the aggregate, would have attained even larger proportions under more favorable conditions. Retail sales of footwear are not up to expectations, but manufacturers are pushed with orders for the spring trade, and distribution of dry goods, both at wholesale and in the department stores, continues very satisfactory. A gratifying feature of many reports, especially those from the East and West, is the improvement in collections. This strengthens the credit position and tends to lower the commercial death-rate, fewer concerns failing this month than in March, while the mortality is still much lighter than a year ago.

"THE GARDEN OF ALLAH" AT THE RICHARDSON

"The Garden of Allah", the big spectacular play made from Robert Hichens' novel, by that author and Mary Anderson de Navarro, will be the attraction at the Richardson, Tuesday and Wednesday night, May 2 and 3, and Wednesday matinee. Regular seats sale Saturday, April 29th.

The presentation of the dramatization of the Hichens' novel is backed up and fortified by the superb pictorial and realistic manner of the production. Them assive beauty of the settings and effects is utilized to drive across the footlight the essentials of the romance between "Borie," the renegade monk, and "Domini," who becomes his bride.

The story of the play follows the novel, a fact that many thousand readers of the book will follow with enjoyment. The glowing and beautiful descriptions of the various scenes described by Mr. Hichens in the book, are also closely followed. In fact, the authors, managers and producers spent many weens in Morocco where the scenes are laid, to get the desired atmosphere. Many animals were also brought over to America—camels, goats, donkeys, pigeons and other live stock.

Prominent among the members of the cast presenting the dramatic portion of the play may be found Mr. Lawson Butt, Mr. Howard Gould, Miss Edyth Latimer, Miss Estelle Thebaud, Mr. Albert Andruss, Mr. William Jeffrey and Mr. Leo De Valery. The company in its entirety consists of over one hundred and is exactly as seen for a year at the Century Theatre, New York City.

Special excursion arrangements will be in effect during the engagement. Mail orders filled now if accompanied by remittances and self addressed stamped envelope.

LITTLE TALKS ON THRIFT

By S. W. STRAUS

President American Society for Thrift

Thrift is being taught more and more through the schools. Various methods are employed by the teachers and educators such as school gardens, waste paper sales and school saving banks. One of the innovations started by a number of the rural schools in Georgia is reported by Prof. James M. Downing, of the extension department of the University of Georgia, who has just concluded a tour of the state schools. It seems that the school children buy a young pig, contributing 10 and 15 cents each. It becomes the school pig and is fed from the waste of the lunches brought to the school and is cared for by the children. When the following fall comes around the pig is sold and the proceeds go toward buying library books for the schools.

Farmers have two enemies—the chinch bug and the Hessian fly, but because the quail which eats these insects is not protected grain growers are losing $300,000,000 a year. Then there are two kinds of hawks—the marsh-hawks and the chicken-hawk. The marsh hawk is a benefactor. It has been estimated that it eats eight meadow mice a day or 2,920 in a year, saving the farmer $58.40. For this particular mouse causes considerable damage among grass roots, young fruit trees, and grain. Yet the marsh-hawk is frequently killed, being mistaken for the chicken-hawk which occasionally visits the farm and makes way with a chicken. The study of these various birds would be a good method of teaching thrift to the children of rural communities.

Those who think opportunities for success are not what they once were should study the career of Daniel W. Hoan, the newly elected Mayor of Milwaukee. Mr. Hoan is only thirty-five years old, having been born in Waukesha in 1881. He was forced to go to work when he was 14 years old because of his father's death. He was poorly equipped for any but menial work and began as a bus boy in a Waukesha hotel. Later he went to Chicago where he worked in restaurants as a cook. He saved his salary, as he aspired to become a lawyer, and entered the University of Wisconsin, graduating in 1905. He was unable to complete his law school course because of lack of funds, so he again went to Chicago where he worked for a law firm for $6 a week in the day, and attended a law school at night. By practicing thrift he was able to graduate from the law school in 1908. He went to Milwaukee where he practiced law and was elected city attorney two years later, holding that office until his election as mayor.

GETS MAIL WITH PULLEY.

Farmer Didn't Want to Walk to the Road to Get It There.

Whilesville, Mo.—To C. R. Thompson, a farmer living northeast of here, is given the credit of originating the latest method of having his mail brought directly to his door.

Some time ago Thompson decided that it was a waste of time and shoe leather to make the daily trip to his mail box down by the road, and he set his mind and hand to work on a device which would make said trip unnecessary.

He succeeded, and now by means of a set of wires and a pulley the trick is accomplished.

After the mail man's visit Thompson has only to step to his door and draw in his mail, box and all.

The box is sent back to its post by the roadside in the same manner.

Others in the community are so pleased with Thompson's device that they are going to follow his example, and it will doubtless not be long until "going after the mail," even so far as the gate, will be a thing of the past with the progressive farmers of northwest Missouri.

BIBLE 332 YEARS OLD.

Book Has Been In One Family Since 1584 and Is In German.

Ionia, Ind.—A. P. Fleckenstein of Ionia is the possessor of a Bible which has been in his family for 332 years. Most of the time it has been in Germany. It was in Hoerstin, Bavaria, until 1883, when it was brought to America. In 1893 it was exhibited at the world's fair.

The flyleaf at the beginning of the new testament contains the following tribute to the translator:

"A true translation into the German language according to the old translations used in the Christian church and enlightened with many wholesome annotations by the Rev. Dr. John Distenberger. To the praise of God and the most gracious pleasure of the Roman imperial majesty and to the good of the common German nation and now embellished with illustrations and put into this grand form. This book was printed at Cologne, Germany, in the year A. D. 1584 by Gerwin Calenium and the heirs of John Quentel. With the grace and liberty of the Roman imperial majesty."

Effort of a Dog Saves the Lives of Father and Son.

St. Louis.—Fannie, a Scotch collie, saved the life of John C. Shafer, a farmer and the dog's owner, and John Shafer, father of the dog's owner, on two different occasions in one week, when the men were attacked by an infuriated bull, according to a story told in Marne, Ill.

When the father went to the barn to feed, the bull attacked him. In trying to get away he fell several times and was bruised. His granddaughter, Nellie Shafer, arrived home from school at that time, and she sent the collie into the lot. The dog halted the bull and permitted the old man to escape.

The next morning, when the son went to the barn to feed, the bull attacked him. His cries attracted Mrs. Shafer, who went to the lot in her night clothes, taking the dog with her, for the second rescue.

LEGISLATURE OF 1916 A CONSTRUCTIVE BODY

No Direct Tax Imposed by Republican Party—Work Briefly Reviewed by Leading Members. All Promises Faithfully Kept.

Albany, April 24.—There was nothing spectacular about the work of the legislature of 1916, but its percentage of important constructive legislation was high.

Economy was practiced as far as it was possible to practice it without impairing the efficiency of government, but provision was made for carrying on all necessary work.

Numerous improvements were made in the state's business methods.

The policy inaugurated last year of paying all the state's obligations as they came due was adhered to without attempting to make any false show of economy.

All this was done without the necessity of levying a direct state tax.

Brief reviews of the session's work by Speaker Sweet of the assembly, Senator Elon R. Brown, majority leader in the senate, and Assemblyman Simon L. Adler, the majority leader in the assembly, are given below:

Promises Faithfully Kept.

Reviewing the work of the 1916 assembly, Speaker Sweet made the following statement:

"A good promise faithfully kept is a substantial cornerstone to a good character and an assurance of an enviable reputation.

"It is said that promises make debts. If so fulfillment pays them.

"Promises make friends, but performances keep them. The old Danish proverb is true, 'There is no virtue in a promise unkept.' Neither is there safety.

"These observations apply to individuals and may as fittingly apply to a state, a legislative body or a political party.

"The legislature of last year made a promise when it assured the people that it would make good the impaired credit of the state by meeting the direct tax of $19,000,000 due to misrule and the extravagance of former administrations. The maintenance of the credit of the commonwealth is as important as maintaining the credit of an individual.

"The legislature of 1916 has kept this promise, and as we conclude our work we confidently go before the people with the obligations of the state all paid and no direct tax.

"The provisions for the budget bill will facilitate prompt attention to all the financial needs of the state government. It will be admitted that in the present session we have made a step forward in the intelligent presentation of the appropriation bill, which carries a clear understanding of all the provisions relating to the interests of the different departments, and it will surely be noted that the bill has passed the legislature after full discussion without the necessity of an emergency message.

"We have not forgotten the agricultural interests of the state. We have made provision for continuing the work of good roads, for making effective the laws for payment of condemned cattle; have made liberal appropriations for the elimination of grade crossings when a previous administration gave nothing, and we have made an additional appropriation for the department of foods and markets, from which, with the co-operation of the grange and state officers with the department, much good can be derived to the mutual advantage of both producer and consumer.

"We have done our part toward placing upon the statute books laws which will facilitate the collection of taxes from those heretofore escaping their duty to the state by evasive methods.

"We have demonstrated our purpose and desire to relieve the city of New York from the overburden of taxation resulting from a vicious financial policy.

"Responding to the mandate of the constitution, we have made a reapportionment of the senate and assembly districts of the state. If this legislation has not entirely satisfied our personal wishes we may at least feel a satisfaction in the contemplation that we have obeyed the constitution, as all good citizens are bound to do.

"We have passed laws for an intelligent and effective system of physical training in the public schools to the end that our youths may be trained to a more sturdy manhood and higher ideals of good citizenship and thus meet the problems of self protection and self government.

"Much convenience will come from legislation which makes the fiscal year of the state end upon the 30th of June instead of the 30th of September.

"We have strengthened the national guard in order to increase effectiveness.

"It is a satisfaction to feel that between the executive and legislative departments harmony and good fellowship have been maintained, and in the service of the state we may justly feel a sense of pride that we have met the expectations of the people."

A Successful Business Administration.

Commenting on the work of the session, Senator Brown said:

"The legislature of 1916 has made progress in setting the finances of the state in order. Substantially all of the appropriations are included in a single bill which has been printed and open to the criticism of members and the public for at least ten days before its passage. To make this reform permanent a budget statute has been passed and a constitutional amendment providing that all appropriations must be included in an annual supply bill and an annual appropriation bill which must be passed without the aid of an emergency message. The serial bond amendment to the constitution has also been passed.

"With an annual expenditure of $60,000,000 the legislature has devoted itself to correction of faults in administration and to preventing waste. This vast sum will be provided by indirect taxes, which have been but slightly increased, and without the levy of any direct tax in the state. New sources of revenue have been found in amendments to the transfer tax, $2,150,000; the secured debt tax, $1,000,000; moving pictures, $1,000,000; excise taxes, $2,000,000. These additions to the present revenue of the state have enabled us to avoid a direct state tax this year and will have a permanent influence in reducing tax rates. It has been a successful business administration. Legislation has been passed marking out a division of interest and jurisdiction between the affairs of the city of New York and the state. Greater economy of administration in both city and state is thus insured and the designs of those who would embroil city and state in controversy frustrated.

"Appropriations have been made for the training and mobilization of the national guard and for military training in schools. The workmen's compensation law and the labor law, enacted before this administration came into office, have been greatly improved and corrected. The work of the civil service committee, the statutory revision committee, the public service committee and other legislative committees have already insured the enactment of important legislation, improved the administration of the law, preventing waste from excessive salaries, duplication of service and useless employment. A legislative apportionment act complying with the provisions of the constitution has been enacted on the basis of the population.

"A committee has been appointed to inquire into the distribution of milk, poultry and live stock with a view to stimulating production by securing to producers the value of their products and securing to consumers a wholesome and abundant supply at market rates unaffected by monopoly.

"The legislature has been free from a spirit of sectionalism, and laws have been passed and administered equally to all people without distinction of race, religion, social condition or place of residence."

Sane and Profitable Legislation.

"The session of 1916 was productive of much sane and profitable legislation," said Assemblyman Simon L. Adler. "The management of the finances and the financial policy of the state are ever of the first interest. This year a distinct advance was made in provisions for budget making. At the opening of the legislature the governor presented to it a complete tentative budget, which was promptly introduced in the form of a legislative bill. During the period the finance committees were perfecting the appropriation bill the governor's preliminary budget was in the hands of all the members of the legislature and in form for general distribution. The merits of this plan have been perpetuated and perfected by the passage of a budget bill which furnishes facilities to the finance committees of both houses for scientific budget making and provides legislative authority for the presentation by the governor to the legislature of a proposed budget at the opening of the legislative session. It further provides that department heads shall when requested by either house appear and answer inquiries and that the appropriation bill shall be a special order in both houses for eight full legislative days.

"Another measure of the session that will have a positive effect on the state's finances is the change in the fiscal year, which will under the new law begin on July 1 instead of Oct. 1. This will enable budget making to be much more economical and certain.

"A concurrent resolution proposing an amendment to the constitution was passed providing for the issuing of serial bonds for all indebtedness, thus instituting in future the pay-as-you-go policy in the state's finances. Other minor financial measures were passed calculated to perfect and simplify the state's financial operations.

"The reapportionment of the state into senate and assembly districts pursuant to the constitution and the recent enumeration was one of the duties undertaken and carried out.

"In the field of general legislation the legislature of 1916 has done efficient and competent work. Many of the general statutes were carefully studied, revised and perfected. The workmen's compensation law was revised in most of the particulars in which it had been found from the experience of the past few years to need revision and amendment. The labor laws of the state were revised with the same end in view and with the result of making them more reasonable and workable. In arriving at a decision as to what amendments should be made to the law in each of these cases the committees of the legislature having the matter in charge adopted the plan of inviting into consultation the representatives of the interests involved, and the final amendments to these laws, which were then presented to the legislature and passed by it, were the result of intelligent co-operation and compromise. Careful and conscientious work was also done in revising and perfecting the tax law and the inheritance tax laws and also the election law of the state.

"Special attention was given to making provision for the necessary increase in capacity in many of the state's institutions, particularly those of the insane and feeble minded. The result is that the overcrowding which has existed in both classes of institutions will be rectified at once.

"The legislature also took action upon a series of enactments known as the Brown committee bills, which were the result of the investigations made by that committee in connection with the finances of the city of New York and having to do with the relations between the city of New York and the state. These bills were conceived in a broad and statesmanlike spirit, and enactment into law will not only be of advantage to the city of New York, but will improve relations between New York city and the rest of the state.

"Legislation was further enacted to clear up the conditions in the prison situation in the state which had existed for many years. This legislation will provide for a new farm prison under modern lines and for the demolition of the condemned cell block at Sing Sing prison.

"The legislature began its work promptly and by steady application completed a large amount of real constructive legislation in four months."

MRS. ALICE SNITJER BURKE.

A SUFFRAGE TRIP

Two Ardent "Gists" Set Out Across the Continent.

WILL TOOL THEIR OWN CAR.

Armed Against Mosquitoes, Rattlesnakes, Mexicans and Hunger, Two Adventurous Women Start For California With a Small Auto.

No women have ever before made the trip just started by Mrs. Alice Snitjer Burke and Miss Nell Richardson of New York city. On April 6 they left Columbus Circle and were escorted to the Forty-second street ferry on their first lap to Trenton, N. J., by hosts of suffragists in automobiles. Before they see New York city again these women will have made a trip of 15,000 miles in a little car, so light it can be pushed about by hand. En route they will traverse twenty-five states, among them four on the Mexican border.

How to provide against mosquitoes in Jersey and rattlesnakes and Gila monsters in Arizona, hostile Mexicans on the Texas frontier and hunger everywhere will be among the problems of these errant ladies, who fear nothing at all, not even punctures.

Miss Richardson, who was born in Virginia and hails from Maryland, says she will solve the hunger problem by carrying a fireless cooker on the running board, and Mrs. Burke says she fears no accident, for she can put on her own tires and that without "getting myself dirty. I don't have to crawl out from under a car as black as my hat," she states.

She certainly looks immaculate enough in the picture. At the end of every day's long run there will be a suffrage speech given "somewhere in America" for the National Woman Suffrage association, and the occasions at which these will occur will take in all possible social groups and a variety of locations. The compact compartments of the suffrage car, in which the women are advised to carry "an ax for cutting firewood, a shovel to dig themselves out of mudholes, a pistol against rattlesnakes and a rope to tow some other unfortunate," will also carry evening and afternoon gowns for the speakers.

Mrs. Burke is a western woman, whose first husband, Captain Armstrong, was one of Roosevelt's "rough riders" in the Cuban war. She has a daughter, who was the center of a little story which Colonel Roosevelt called "the prettiest incident of his western trip" when he was in California during his presidency. At Captain Armstrong's death Mr. Roosevelt struck off a copy of a bronze medal and sent it home to the captain's daughter. Years afterward when he was riding in state through San Francisco's streets the president saw the little child standing on the curb wearing her medal, and he stopped the procession to lift the child into his car. "My little rough rider," he called her.

THE SPIRIT OF ORGANIZATION

Permeates With Hope Workers In All Lines of Endeavor.

WAY TO BETTER THINGS.

Opens a Vista of New Opportunities to Those Who Toil, With the Ultimate Assurance of the Attainment of Rights and Justice—United Effort Has Been Proved Effective.

By SAMUEL GOMPERS.

It's in the air—a vibrant hope that sees leading into tomorrow a road to better things. It's a contagious something, an infectious spirit of courage and inspiration that extends from the toilers of packing house towns to those actors behind the footlights; from the teachers in the public schools to the yet unorganized workers in the steel plants; from employees and clerks in the federal government to miners delving far down in the depths of mines. To highly skilled and to unskilled, to those with high standards of living and those with low, to those of American customs and ideals, to those yet unfamiliar with the traditions and the language of our land, there comes the vision thrilling with new opportunities, with the assurance of the attainment of rights and justice.

This thing which brings hope to so many, which points out the road to better things, is that intangible, invincible, powerful, revolutionizing force called organization.

Organization is the way whereby the toilers of all ages have found redress from wrongs and have secured greater opportunities. Organization has been tested and found effective.

There is nothing about organization that belongs to a particular group of workers, to special kinds of work or to any particular degree of skill or kind of preparation for work.

Workers of all callings must learn that there are principles of human welfare which are of paramount importance. Conditions of daily work and living will not be in accord with these principles of human welfare unless those workers primarily concerned have some conception of their interests and are prepared for sustained efforts to realize their ideals.

Organization is only an intelligent attitude toward everyday problems—the fundamental things of life. It is a preparedness for the best development, to take advantage of opportunities that constantly arise, as well as preparedness against exploitation, a narrowing of life's horizon and a cramping of individuality.

The primary step is to secure leisure. This must be supplemented by increased wages that make leisure a real avenue to better living and self development and freedom necessary for self respect.

Those who work for wages (even wages termed salaries) have the same kind of problems to solve, the same kind of opposition to overcome. Economic organization is the only agency that offers any practical effectiveness. The problem of securing fairer, more just relations between employees and employers is the same regardless of the degree of skill or intellectual attainments necessary for that particular work. Effectiveness in bargaining, power to enforce demands, skill in organizing economic power are the means to secure just compensation and improved conditions under which work is done.

Many who hold themselves aloof from "contamination" with trade unions, who hedge themselves about with "professional" pride, work longer hours and for less pay than do hodcarriers and common laborers. Teachers and government clerks need economic organization just as badly as do the most skilled and even the workers in the steel plants and packing houses.

There has been what appears to be a concerted effort by the enemies of the trade union movement to create the impression that the American Federation of Labor seeks to organize only the so called skilled workers. Quite the reverse is true. Those whose work requires a high degree of skill or special preparation are sure sooner or later to recognize the necessity and benefits of organization and to seek organization on their own initiative. But where less degree of skill is necessary for work and where standards and conditions are lower, then the A. F. of L. does its hardest work to arouse a desire for organization and to cause opportunities to inaugurate it. But when the workers once grasp the purpose and possibilities of organization there has entered into their mentality that which never leaves them and which changes their whole makeup.

The effectiveness of economic organization does not depend upon any strategic advantage derived from superior skill, but upon skill in organization and in presenting demands.

Because of skill in organization common laborers now receive higher wages than many government clerks, railroad engineers receive higher pay than many officials in petty banks.

There is coming for all workers a better life, a brighter day, through economic organization, for the maintenance of principles of human welfare—an organization which vivifies, democratizes and makes beautiful the world of work and life.

NO PAINTER'S COLIC FOR HIM.

Bill For "Tint" Makes Bachelor Issue Leap Year Declaration.

Elwood, N. J.—Robert W. Hunt, a retired college instructor, received a letter recently from a neighboring town containing a bill for 40 cents for "tint" purchased by "Mrs. Hunt." Hunt is a good looking bachelor with a steady income, and the inquisitive element of Elwood at once interpreted the postoffice bulletin in terms of leap year possibilities.

To quiet the buzzing gossip, Hunt has issued the following statement:

"We have had several offers of marriage, and one or two ladies have assumed we were engaged without making any offer, and it is with fear and trembling we pass each day of this year, which is divisible by four. However, when Mrs. Hunt does arrive she shall come as nature painted her, with eyes like the heavens, with cheeks like the rose and with lips like the damp of crushed strawberry. She shall have no need of 'tint.' When we want a kiss we don't propose to mess through two or three coats of paint to get it."

Dogs Tree Insane Man.

Oregon City, Ore.—Peter Brevio, aged forty-three, an Italian, was treed with the aid of bloodhounds arrested and brought back to Oregon City and committed to the State Hospital For the Insane. Brevio lived in a hollow tree, and his diet consisted of roots, berries and what food he could find around neighboring farmhouses. He stole an ax from a farmhouse and passed much of his time chopping down trees. A number of men of the district determined to arrest Brevio and went to his tree home. The Italian ran away. Dogs were then put on his trail.

DELICATE MONSTERS.

How Warships Are Lined to Protect Them From Fire and Water.

Although it may look very strong, a battleship is really a very delicate monster. Its vital parts have to be protected by several coverings of a material chiefly obtained from cocoanuts. This is to prevent certain portions becoming either too cold or too hot. For instance, it will be seen that the results would be exciting if the powder magazines became overheated.

A dreadnaught is entirely clothed in a suit of underwear to protect it from fire and water. The actual construction of the material is a secret, but it is known to be for the most part cellulose, which is obtained from the fibrous rind of the cocoanut.

Cellulose swells when it touches salt water. Therefore if a hole should be made in the ship's side, say, by a shot this cellulose expands and covers the opening, so preventing an inrush of water. The cellulose is also treated to make it fireproof.

Mineral wool is a material used upon the latest type of battleship. It looks like wool, but is really composed of snowy threads of a sort of glass. The men who pack mineral wool have to wear masks to prevent the needlelike particles from being inhaled. It is a remarkable nonconductor of heat and is used to cover the refrigerators and cold storage chambers and also the explosive stores.

The boilers and steam pipes of a dreadnaught have "jackets" in order to prevent waste of fuel. Sometimes these jackets are of mineral wool, sometimes wool and sometimes ordinary blanketing.—Pearson's.

Used Income of High School Instructor In Moderate Manner, and With Money He Earned by Writing He Was Able to Educate Eighteen Students.

Everett, Wash.—F. D. Mack, teacher in the Central school, has spent about $40,000 in educating eighteen students, seventeen boys and one girl, during the last sixteen years, according to a story he reluctantly told a newspaper representative.

Living on his school salary in a modest way both in Minnesota, his former home, and in Washington, he has earned the money to send students through universities by writing short stories and magazine articles. He has paid out between $2,000 and $3,000 on each of his "children."

Some of the youngsters were orphans, and some had one parent, but all were eager to learn and were handicapped by lack of money.

The thirteen boys who are alive are all actively engaged in the professions in which Mr. Mack has educated them. Two are druggists, one being in St. Paul and the other in Los Angeles. Two are instructors in the University of Minnesota, where they were graduated. One teaches mathematics, and the other is an instructor in German.

This latter young man plans to be a physician and in 1914 married a girl who wished to go to Germany to get her master's degree, so he and his bride sailed for Germany to continue their studies, only to be turned back by the beginning of the war.

Mr. Mack sent him through Normal school, the University of Minnesota and Harvard, where he received his master's degree.

A young man who chose to be a broker received his education at the University of Illinois. He started out to be an architect, but changed his mind and took a commercial course. He was graduated four years ago and is now in Minneapolis engaged in the lumber brokerage business. He is the best money maker of the "family." In his four years out of college he has made $40,000.

A mining engineer who was educated at the University of Minnesota is now working in a mine at Butte, Mont. The banker received a thorough commercial education, and then Mr. Mack set him up in business in a bank in Elgin, N. D. Mr. Mack says that if any of his boys wants to start in business he always gives them enough money to begin. He recently bought an eighty acre farm for one of them.

A dentist lives in Chicago. He had four years at the University of Valparaiso. Mr. Mack says this boy married a rich nurse.

One boy who studied to be a lawyer lost his health after his graduation from the University of Minnesota law school, so could not practice, and is now employed as chief of the Minnesota state fish and game commission, with headquarters at St. Paul.

Self educated and quiet, Mr. Mack would not be thought responsible for one of the most unusual philanthropies in the world.

Plant That Feigns Death.

In South America there is a plant, a species of mimosa, which resorts to death feigning, evidently for the purpose of preventing grass eating animals from eating it. In its natural state this plant has a vivid green hue, but directly it is touched by a human finger or by any living animal it collapses into a tangle of apparently dead and withered stems.

EASTER ABOARD U. S. S. NEVADA

The following interesting Easter greetings were sent by Benjamin Balch, one of Uncle Sam's boys on the good ship U. S. S. Nevada, to his parents, Rev. and Mrs. Balch of this city

The Log

Easter Greetings:

Well, the crew's reception on the quarterdeck last Sunday was a brilliant affair. The ship was decorated with flags and pennants. It was estimated that over two thousand visitors come on board.

By the way; we have a mascot on board, a goat from the U. S. S Rhode Island. We feel justified in saying, therefore, that "we have the Rhode Island's goat." Our mascot is a good deck hand; she eats up all the stray pieces of paper.

Our great inter-divisional athletic meet was held at the N. Y. M. C. A. on Thursday night resulting in a victory for the seventh division. About eighty men took part in the four evenes; namely the broad jump, high jump, hundred yard dash and relay race. Each event was hotly contested. Each team deserves great praise for its excellent showing. Everybody showed up particularly well also when refreshments were served.

One of the amusing events of the evening was a concert by the fife and drum corps of the second division.

Friday night through the courtesy of Col. Brady of the Vitagraph Co. we enjoyed an excellent moving picture show in the sail loft of the yard. The films were instructive as well as entertaining. One of them, the hero of "Submarine D 2" as you can imagine, was particularly interesting to us.

We are preparing for theb aseball season. There will be a ship's inter-divisional league of about eight teams In a week or so we expect to have a gymnasium on board where we can train for the different athletic events.

We expect to have our own moving picture machine in a few days.

The great 1st division of the Atlantic fleet has arrived in the yard. We belong to this division.

Sincerely,
BEN BALCH.

The Nevada is stationed at the Brooklyn yard.

VOLNEY TOWN TO HOLD HEALTH DAY

Indications are that there will be a large attendance at the "Town Health Day" exercises to be held in the town hall at Volney Center, Friday. Exercises will begin promptly at 1:30 p. m. and a program has been prepared consisting of papers to be read by some of the teachers of the town; a talk by Superintendent W. S. Gardner; an address illustrated by moving pictures by Dr. Frederick W. Sears of Syracuse, Sanitary Supervisor of Oswego County; and a talk to the children by Mrs. Elizabeth Moran Finegan, of Lyons, N. Y. Mrs. Finegan, who is connected with the State Department of Health is especially adapted to work with children, and is a pleasing and interesting speaker. The Ladies' Aid of the Bristol Hill church will serve supper to all thec huldren of the rural schools in attendance free.

Ceiba Tree of Honduras.

The tree known as la ceiba is one of the dominating features of the landscape in Honduras. It rises to a height of seventy or eighty feet before branching, and then a broad top spreads out like a huge umbrella. The trees are commonly six feet or more in diameter, but the wood is soft and not considered valuable for lumbeer. It is white, and many persons think it would be valuable for paper pulp. The tree bears a silky cotton, which is used to some extent for stuffing cushions.—Commerce Reports.

REMEMBERS OLD PRISONER

After an Elapse of Forty Years Chief Recalls First Arrest.

Bridgeport, Conn.—More than forty years ago, when Eugene Birmingham the present chief of police, joined this city's force, his first arrest was Michael Frawley, one of a gang of youths who came here from Derby and created a disturbance.

Recently Frawley, now an old man was again brought before him, this time for theft. Birmingham is noted for his ability to remember faces and names, and the moment he saw Frawley he recognized him as his first prisoner. Frawley is wanted in New Haven for stealing and will be taken there at the conclusion of his sentence here.

For the wee baby a nursery room separate from the living apartments of the family is especially important. Quiet, sunshine and good air are first requisites for the child's well being, and these are not easily secured when he is moved hither and thither to different parts of the dwelling as suits the convenience of his elders. The din and clatter and bustle of work and the confusion of movements, sights and noises are bewildering and harmful to the little one's sensitive nerves and brain.—Good Health.

NIGHT SCHOOLS TO CONTINUE

Department Will Work in Conjunction With Local Authorities to Instruct Foreign-Born Citizens.

Washington—In approximately 650 cities and towns located in 45 States of the Union the public school authorities, in cooperation with the Bureau of Naturalization of the U. S. Department of Labor, have established evening schools for the instruction of their foreign-born population. Several municipalities, with a keen realization of the educational deficiencies of the aliens, and appreciating the advantages to be derived through their knowledge of English, have extended the period of instruction to the end of the present scholastic year. In other cities the school authorities have signified their intention of maintaining the public schools as long as there is any evidence of need on the part of the adult alien population.

Unfortunately, according to reports received by the Bureau of Naturalization, the public school authorities of a large majority of the cities and towns, which have engaged in this stupendous rampaign for citizenship preparedness, have discontinued, or about to discontinue, their classes for alien instruction. Various causes are assigned, but the main difficulty appears to be a lack of funds for the compensation of teachers. In order to combat this condition, patriotic public school teachers and representatives of the principal organizations in many places have volunteered their services to continue this splendid work until such time as proper appropriations may be made for the purpose.

In all of the cities and towns now cooperating with the Bureau of Naturalization in this great educational movement the intention is to reopen the night schools at the beginning of the fall term. Advices have been received from various other smaller places where, for one reason or another, they have as yet been unable to join in this undertaking, that the public school authorities have determined to open night schools for alien instruction at the beginning of the next scholastic year. There is also contemplated in various cities a plan whereby the summer classes, which have hitherto run from July 1st to August 31st, may open their doors on May 1st, and extend the period in instruction to September 30th.

Great results have already been accomplished, and greater are expected. The Bureau of Naturalization since the first of last October has sent the names of more than 165,000 candidates for citizenship and their wives to the public school authorities of the country. It has also sent personal letters to all of these to induce them to enter the public schools. It has prepared an Outline Course in Citizenship, thousands of copies of which have been distributed to the public school teachers. It has also prepared a Syllabus of the Naturalization Law, which it has sent out with copies of preliminary naturalization forms to aid teachers in the instruction of candidates for citizenship.

The cooperation of the public schools with the National Government has come to stay, and the Bureau of Naturalization believes that this movement will go far toward solving the problem of the loyalty of every sixth resident of the country, there being nearly 17,000,000 foreign-born residents in the United States, of whom approximately 4,000,000 are citizens.

BIG BUSINESS THIS YEAR

General Wotherspoon, State Superintendent of Public Works, was here Friday on a tour of inspection, which is preparatory to the re-opening of the Oswego Canal on May 15th.

The state official was in conference with Myron Stranahan, District Superintendent of Canals. He stated to Mr. Stranahan that the tonnage carried on the canal this season would be far in excess of last year, basing his opinion on the preparations which are already under way by manufacturers and others who have suffered inconvenience in shipping as a result of the freight car shortage.

All along the route of the canal, Mr. Stranahan, was advised, docks are being constructed especially by lumber men. It is evident from this information and the general prosperity throughout the country that the canal will prevent a lively appearance.

Morin Brothers of this city have in view the early construction of a dock on the canal in the vicinity of their yards.

CONVICT BAILEY IS CAPTURED

With the capture of Frederick Bailey at Ogdensburg on Saturday night, the last of the trio who had escaped from Auburn prison within the last month, was rounded up and a search which had engaged the attention of police officials throughout the State ended.

Bailey, who was a trusty and emloyed as night electrician, broke open the ladder cellar on the night of April 14. Placing a ladder at the window of the chapel, where several members of the Mutual Welfare League were rehearsing for a ministrel show he released Patrick Joyce, another trusty, known in this county by the name of Parker. A few days before the escape of the prisoners, John Leroy Gaskins, serving thirty-one years, escaped from the prison by hiding underneath a gondola coal car.

The three men, oddly enough, went back to their usual haunts, Gaskins to Brooklyn from which place he was last sentenced, Parker to Binghamton, and Bailey to Ogdensburg. Bailey was committed from Jefferson county and his sentence would have expired October 27, 1916. All three men were well-known in the sections which they visited and their capture was easily ecected by the police. Parker made some resistance when taken into custody by the Binghamton police. He is the most dangerous of the three. He was borr. in Oswego and has given the police of that city mnch trouble.

ACTIONS SPEAK LOUDER THAN WORDS IN SHOWING INTEREST IN THINGS

The evangelist in handling his after noon sermon theme sent home many pointed darts. He said in part as follows:

Romans 10:1. Brethren, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is, that they might be saved.

Paul, the great apostle of Jesus Christ, was greatly interested in the spiritual welfare of his own kinsmen, the Jews. He says, His heart's desire and prayer to God is that Israel might be saved. He realized that the children of Israel were not pursuing the right course, and that the way in which they were going, would lead to destruction. He loved them and did not wish to see them perish. He loved them and was interested in them, and his love and interest were strong enough to make him go to God in prayer in their behalf. When people are interested in anything they generally let other people know they are interested. We can tell by the actions and words of men and women, the things that appeal to them most. Some are interested in sports, base-ball, foot-ball, polo, horse-racing and other amusements. We know they are interested in these things, because they manifest their interest in their words and actions. And so when men and women are really interested in the Kingdom of Jesus and the salvation of souls, they manifest this interest in their words and actions and prayers. In other words, they will be awake to every opportunity to help other people into the kingdom of Jesus and will be anxious to have others come. Dr. Torrey says:

The greatest work on earth is the work of leading others to Christ. It is a work that all can do. Let us be on the watch for opportunities whereever we go, on the street cars, on the street, in the stores, in the home, traveling everywhere let us watch for souls. There are men and women around us on every hand whose hearts are unsatisfied and heavy. The gospel message is just what thye need. We can lead them to Christ. There is no other work worth while in this world but thew ork of bringing others to a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ

I heared the other day of a young boy who had been arrested 25 times before he reached the age of 15. A man who was interested in boys, interceded in his behalf to keep him from going to reform school. He went to the boy's father and asked him if he knew anything about his son. The father replied that he did not. The man told the father that his boy had been arrested and asked him to go down and intercede, but the father refused. He said: I give that boy a good bed to sleep in and he has plenty of clothing and plenty of food and that is all I can do. My friends, This is the case with many people. They think this is all they are required to do. They never think of praying for their children or trying to teach them right from wrong

Evangelist, W. A. Sunday relates the following incident, which brings this point clearly before you. He says: I will never forget a scene which I witnessed some years ago. I left the tent late one night, where we were holding meetings, down in Paris, and among a number of others who left at the same timew as a young man that I was especially attracted to by his fine looks. I walked down the street with him and put to him the invariable question, Are you a Christain? He said: No sir, I am not. Then I used every scripture and every argument to get him to promise me to give his heart to God, but could not succeed. When we were about to separate I said to him: Are your father and mother alive? Both alive, said he. Is your father a christian? Don't know. Has been a steward in the church for several years. Is your mother a christian? She has been the superintendent of the Sunday school in the same church for some time. Have you a sister? Yes Sir. Is she a christian? Don't know. She has a primary class in Sabbath school. Do your father and mother ever ask the blessing at the table? or engage in worship around the family altar? No sir. Did your father, mother or sister ever ask you to be a christian? The young man said: Mr. Sunday, as long as I can remembeer, my father oor mother or sister never said a word to me about my soul. Do you believe they think I am lost? My which loved ones could take up the same cry against those who profess to be followers of Jesus. How are we going to answer the charge? We may offer one thing after another as an excuse, but what will we say when we stand before Christ? Surely, parents we need to wake up and realize the responsibility resting upon us. I know the hearts desire of every sane parent is for their children to be saved, but are we praying for them to be saved? and doing all in our power to lead th em to Christ?

Parents, Have we been praying for our children? Are we interested in them? Have they ever heard us pleading with God in their behalf? A little girl was lying at death's door. Her father was standing at the bedside ready to do anything he could to comfort his dying child. At last he said to her: Darling is there anything I can do for You? She looked up into his face and said Papa pray for me. The poor helpless father with tears in his eyes said, darling, I have never prayed in my life. I can't pray for you.

My friends, do we realize the responsibility resting upon us? Do we realize the influence we are exerting? Are we living the way God would have us live? Let us remember that our actions and words reveal to the world what we are interested in.

Let us pray and work and do every thing in our power to lead others to Christ that they may be saved and enjoy the blessings of Christ Jesus forever and ever.

Taking Up Domestic Science and Will Know How to Cook.

McPherson, Kan.—Leap year is producing reverse results in Central Academy and College here.

A dozen boys have applied for a domestic science course, and others will join. The instructor is Miss Viola Graham, and she has received a number of additional applications. The course will include cooking and sewing and will continue the remainder of the school year.

The girls are doing their best to prevent the movement of bachelorhood by inviting the college boys to attend parties, but the domestic science boy-students are busy practicing the culinary art, and they assert that if the women intend to live independent lives they also can.

HOSTLER AN HEIR.

Will Get Lawyer to Look After Estate When He Gets Time.

Pasadena, Cal.—Roxie Shadwick, a hostler at a local stable, paused in his work the other day long enough to open a letter handed him by the postman and read that he was an heir to the rich estate of a granduncle in Modoc county. Then he folded the letter and went back to smoothing the coat of one of the horses.

He has a recollection of his granduncle and asserts that the last time he heard of him he was reputed to be quite wealthy. Whether this wealth increased or decreased he does not know, but says he will seek a lawyer in regard to the estate when he gets time.

Finds Coin Minted in 1790.

Fredericksburg, Tex.—Arthur Kuenemann found a silver coin on his lot here which was found to have been minted in 1790 under Francis II., emperor of Germany, king of Bohemia and Hungary. The coin is the size of a silver dollar and in a fair state of preservation.

—Now on Exhibit—The Detroit Jewel Special Gas Range Advertised in the Magazines.

When you see this Detroit Jewel Special you'll agree with us that it is the most unusual gas range value you have ever looked at.

When you know that experts went from house to house interviewing hundreds of women to learn exactly what women wanted most in a gas range before this gas range was designed, you will realize why we chose the Detroit Jewel for our leader this spring.

Really you must see this range to appreciate its many superior advantages. It's a range that every woman will be proud to own and use.

This wonderful range is just the right size and designed so that you can do your cooking in the natural and easy way—saves work and steps. It is beautiful and sanitary—has porcelain equipment and baked Ebonite finish that requires no blacking.

In every way this range matches up with the most expensive ranges, yet the price—due to quantity production—is much lower than such a Gas Range has ever been sold for before.

We extend you a cordial invitation to see this big value Gas Range—Come in! You will be very welcome even if you do not expect to buy.

DEFENDS BELIEF IN NEW LIFE

where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin, and the strength of sin is the law, but thanks to God who giveth us the victory through out Lord Jesus Christ." Christ's resurrection is the proof of immortality.

In no uncertain terms, and in language incapable of double meaning, Christ proclaimed theg reat and glorious fact of the resurrection. He knew how the heart of man was oppressed by the dread of death; how the soul panted for life and clung to it with a tenacity born both of a love for it and a fear of it's opposite. How it must rejoiced his heart to whisper in to the hearts of men the glorious hope and assurance of the life beyond. Look at Him as he takes the hands of the heart broken sisters in His and says: "Thy brother shall rise again." Look at Him as he stands the young maiden lying white and still on her couch in the death chamber. Hear His words as He says: "Weep not. She is not dead, but sleepeth." Then He took her by the hand and said, "Maid, Arise!" and her spirit came again and she arose straightway. And He commanded to give her to eat. And finally, Himself bursting theb arriers of His own tomb, by His own might robbing death of it's prey, which for a little time held Him captive, thus proving that He had the poweer over the last enemy, and was Himself very life. My friends, this is the reason the gospel message has had such power in the world and in the hearts of men and women, because it begets in us a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, and assures that there is an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for all those who are kept by the power of God unto salvation.

Christ's resurrection proves that we have a living Savior making intercession in our behalf. It is the crowning proof of His divinity. Gilbert R. West and Lord Lttleton tried to over thrown Christianity by proving that the resurrection of Jesus Christ and the conversion of Paul were fictitious Mr. West chose to disprove the resurrection of Jesus Christ and Lord Little ton the conversion of Paul. You all know the results. West in his efforts to keep Christ in the grave was himself raised from the dead, and Littleton in his effort to prove that Paul's conversion was a myth was himself converted, and was led to accept Jesus Christ as his Savior. And these two men, after their honest investigation came together to worship Him whose religion they had thoughe to destroy. And for any one to say that he does not believe in the resurrection of Jesus Christ means to deny everything. There is no middle position in regard to this doctrine. In it we must either accept or reject Jesus Christ.

Mr. Henry Atwell tells of a remarke made by a little girl of four years which he thought was worth recording. Shew as walking with her father through the cemetery, when pointing to the graves she asked wonderingly, "What are these for?" The father said in answer: "They belong to the people who have gone to heaven. "To the angels. Yes, Ah! said the little one, that is where they have left their clothes. She was right. The body is only the clothes. And since Christ died and rose again we never think of our friends lying in the grave. They have gone to be with Jesus.

The Valley of Chambria in India is rinch in its fertility and beauty. The cause of all this fertility is a wonderful spring which flows from the hillside, and furnishes water for the irrigation of thew hole valley and for the use of the people who live there. "Once," says the legend, "The valley was without water, and there was desolation everywhere. The plants and trees were all withered, and people were dying with thirst. The Princess of the place took the sorrows of her subjects much to heart. She consulted the Oracle to learn how the constant curse of drought could be removed. The Oracle said that if the Princess of the land would die for her people abundant water would be given. Her grave was made and she was buried alive. Then forth from her tomb came a river which flowed down into the valley restoring all languishing life in field and garden and sending water to every door for the famishing people to drink. Ever since then streams have continued to flow from the wonderful spring carrying their benediction to every home." This old heathen legend beautifully illustrates what Christ did. The world was perishing for the water of life; Jesus died and was buried and from his cross and broken grave poured out the river of the water of life for the quenching of the worlds thirst. It's streams run everywhere and whereever they flow the wilderness has been made to blossom like a garden of roses. Beauty blooms wherever they run. All the world's joy comes from the grave of our risen Lord. And it becomes us as professed followers of Christ to make these words of Peter our own: Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to His abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead to an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you.

FLYING AIDS SICK.

Titled Englishwoman Says It Cures Nervous People.

IS HER OWN MECHANICIAN.

One's Eyes Would Open to See Lady Auckland Modishly Dressed and Then In Overalls Repairing Flying Machine—Has Lost One Son In War.

Palm Beach, Fla.—If you are suffering from nerves, from ennui or from lack of adventure step into a hydroaeroplane, rise gently from the ground and soar into the azure, over land and sea, descending upon either as the impulse moves you.

Lady Auckland, whose rank may be obtained from any of the books dealing with the British peerage, recommends aviation as a sport and as a cure. During the last season she, with her son, conducted a school for aviation here, not merely lending her name to the enterprise as a passing fad, but going into it in the most practical manner. One rubbed one's eyes to see her at one moment, modishly dressed, on the promenade with other fashionable visitors and the next in workwoman's shirt and overalls making mechanical repairs on her flying machine.

The transition from London society to an American workshop and business enterprise is interesting. Lady Auckland told the story.

She is the daughter of Colonel George M. Hutton, C. B., a great landowner and a noted military man. Her mother was a granddaughter of Arkwright, the inventor, and on both sides of her family she is descended from distinguished forbears.

"My early youth was spent at the old abbey of Knauth, on the banks of the river Trent," she said. "It was a beautiful old black and white house of the Stuart period, built on the site of the Cistercian monastery razed by Henry VIII.

"I had a very unhappy childhood, as my mother never forgave me for being born a girl, not even up to the time of my marriage.

"I married when I was only nineteen years old, but my married life was not a happy one. I had luxuries and all the advantages that social position can give, but my home life was not happy. My two boys were born nearly three years apart, and I became completely absorbed in them.

"I had a fearful shock in 1904 when I discovered that my husband had lost money on the Stock Exchange—all our moneys that were not in trust.

"Our beautiful home at Gravenhurst had to be sold and with it many of its world famed art treasures, including gifts from Marie Antoinette to the Lord Auckland of that time, who was ambassador to France.

"I found that unless I worked we could not keep our eldest son at Eton, and to take him from there at that time would have ruined his career.

"I went to work as designer to a large electrical firm and remained with it until I got a better position with a well known firm of metal workers in London. By this means I succeeded in keeping my oldest boy at Eton until he left in the ordinary course for the examinations for the army.

"Shortly after this time our dear old aunts died, and we were once again comfortably off and bought a heavenly place in the Isle of Wight. This house formerly belonged to Dickens, and here he wrote many of his works. The house was low, with a velvet lawn sloping to the edge of the steep cliff overlooking the channel. From this place we saw the Olympic pass and the ill fated Titanic on her fatal voyage. Here we lived some years until Lord Auckland again lost money.

"After years of sorrow there was a culmination. I was only second fiddle, so my son and I made up our minds to come to America, where he decided to take up aviation.

"My oldest son was killed at St. Eloi, near Ypres, on March 1, 1915, with two of his brother officers while leading their detachment to take some trenches. He was a lieutenant in the Sixtieth Royal rifles, having been appointed to that regiment by King George in 1913 after he had passed through the Military college at Sandhurst."

HOW TO PROVIDE FOR THE FIREPLACE AND ITS ATTRACTIVENESS.

Suitable andirons are not always easy to find, and frequently one sees a beautiful fireplace spoiled in appearance because it has been supplied with andirons and accessories out of proportion and of an inappropriate style.

Sometimes to a luxurious big living room is given a pair of little old time andirons which would do exactly for a cozy colonial bedroom, while small fireplaces are often thoughtlessly furnished with huge, heavy, modern andirons.

For rooms done in a quaint old time style of furnishing some of the reproductions of the Hessian designs of andirons painted in gay colors are good.

A complete set of fireplace furnishings may include an old brass fender with claw feet, a pair of steeple topped andirons, shovel, tongs and heavy rings to hold them to the jamb of the fireplace. Such a set would fit well in a modern colonial house.

Interior decorators say that a fireplace is not complete without a brass roaster and corn popper. The latter are on the style of the old time bed warmers. Several extremely well appointed fireplaces, strictly suited to the quaint environment of the room, have the copper bed warmer and the copper trimmed bellows hanging on a carved copper hook at the side.

Brass kettles in odd design hanging on a crane, flat toasters of brass and the long adjustable handled marshmallow forks are shown this season.

A HYGIENE NOTE.

How to Clear the Complexion Without Dosing Your System.

A glass of hot lemonade taken night and morning is a good thing to clear the complexion. Squeeze half a lemon into a tumblerful of boiling water, sweeten very slightly and drink as soon as it is cool enough.

Another thing a girl with a muddy complexion should do is to have a quick all over soap and water wash every morning with very hot water and then a sponge down with cold, ending up with a good rub with a rough towel.

As to food, don't eat rich, highly seasoned things. Light homemade pastry doesn't hurt; neither do plain cakes, but don't go in for tinned salmon and lobster, curry or rich, heavy cakes, and don't drink much coffee or cocoa.

Now, as to the way to treat your face itself: If your skin is really very thick and muddy it is an excellent thing to wash it every night at bedtime with very hot water and "green soap." Lather your face well and you will find the soap brings away blackheads and is most cleansing, but it is only suitable for really thick skin. It is apt to irritate a fine or thin skin.

Let the soap remain on a few minutes, then rinse it off in very hot water.

In the morning sponge your face with cold water and then wipe it over with eau de cologne and water or a little camphor and water.

How to Avoid Nervousness In This Rackety Age.

No one can help feeling nervous at times in this age of rush and racket, but every woman should remember that the more she controls this feeling the longer she will retain her beauty. It is quite possible to put on the brake, as it were, and not let the nerves run away with us. If people fret you it is not necessary to be rude to them. Try instead to avoid them.

Don't read books that irritate you. Books are plentiful. Therefore put away the offending volume and choose another. If a noise at night worries you don't let it continue to do so. Get up and see to the matter and put it right.

Don't let yourself get into the habit of being bored. It is not worth while. When you feel it coming on [illegible] at once into some task that w[illegible] your time and energy. I[illegible] better run away from certain things than let them irritate you.

How to Provide a Suitable Recepta For Soiled Linen.

A wicker hamper is perhaps the idea laundry container. But it must b[e] kept clean. One enameled white looks so clean that it is hard to remember that it may harbor impurities, even germs. It must be washed in hot water occasionally and dried in the sunshine, and then occasionally it can be further refreshed with a clean coat of enamel.

How to Remove White Spots on Your Pet Mahogany Furniture.

The white spots which hot dishes often leave on tables and other wooden surfaces can be removed by applying a mixture composed of equal parts of alcohol, olive oil and pure cider vinegar. Shake well before using. Rub well with a woolen cloth and polish with another soft woolen cloth.

How to Mend a Lace Curtain Without Large Expense.

A simple way to mend lace curtains after cleaning them is to take a small piece of old lace curtain or net the size of a hole, dip it in a little cold starch and place on the curtain to be mended; then press with a hot iron. It does not show it was mended.

Three In One

By EUNICE BLAKE

When triplets, all boys, came to Mr. and Mrs. Doncaster they were named—with facetious intent—Thomas, Richard and Henry; in other words, Tom, Dick and Harry. When the brothers came of age they made their homes in different localities. Three years later they arranged a reunion.

One of the first questions was, "Are you engaged?" though the way it was put to Tom was, "Have you got a girl?" To which he replied, "I haven't got a girl, but a girl has got me." "What do you mean by that?" "Well, I'm in love with Julia Atkinson, but she won't have me." "Doesn't she love you?" "She says she does, but claims that I have two defects, either of which make me unfitted to be her husband." "What are they?" "First, I am undemonstrative. She doesn't want a cold man. Second, I look on the dark side of everything. She calls me 'Mr. Dismal.'"

"Suppose," Tom went on, "you, Dick, call on Julia, personating me. She'll never know the difference. Plaster her all over with your taffy. Next time you go, Harry, and give her hot air. She'll think I'm changed, and I wouldn't wonder if she'll say 'Yes' after all."

"But can you keep it up?" asked both the others.

"I tell you what you do. You, Dick, rehearse on Harry, and you, Harry, rehearse on Dick. Then I'll see how it is done."

"Agreed!"

Tom threw himself on a lounge and lit a cigar. Dick went out of the room and in a few minutes came in and approached Harry with cordiality enough to convict a mob. One would have thought there was no one else in the world for him. After this lesson Harry went out, and when he returned he rattled off optimism like a mill race.

"That's all right, boys," said Tom. "I've received permission to call tonight to plead for the last time, with no hope to win. Take my place, Dick, and make an appointment if possible for Harry later on."

The same evening Dick appeared before the lady to be wooed. He looked a sad, loving look out of his eyes that almost broke her heart. But he soon took courage and adopted a different manner. It was not in what he said—affection is not necessarily expressed in words—it was in his pleading manner and those other auxiliaries that are natural to some and impossible to others.

"What's come over you, Tom?" asked the girl. "You've always been cold as a stone before."

"The prospect of losing you has lighted fires in my heart that will never be quenched till you tell me that you will be mine."

"If it were not for your pessimism I would," said the lady.

"Try me on that. I have been convinced of my fault and will make an effort to rectify it."

"Very well. I will put you on probation for a month. If at the end of that time you succeed in throwing off your pessimism maybe I'll relent."

Tom would have learned something had he seen Dick's parting kiss, though perhaps it was just as well that he did not. After the call Dick rejoined his brothers, who were expecting him, and he gave them an account of his visit—all but the kiss. He was to call again the next evening, which prepared the way for Harry's effort to supply Tom's second deficiency. Hope sprang buoyant in Tom's breast.

The next evening Harry entered the lady's presence, enthusiasm beaming all over him.

"Oh, sweetheart," he exclaimed, "congratulate me!"

"What's happened?"

"I've been taken in on the ground floor of the Acme Gold Mining company. For a $500 investment I shall be rich. They are taking out ore that pays $800 to the ton."

Dick took from his pocketbook a certificate of stock that was not worth the paper it was printed on.

"Upon my word, Tom, what's become of Mr. Dismal? I'll have to change your name to Mr. Aircastle. Tommy Aircastle; that's a good name."

"You don't believe me?" reproachfully.

"I believe that you are trying to convince me of your reformation as a pessimist. I don't care if you remain something of a pessimist in disposition, but I do care if you weigh down others with your lugubrious views. Since you are under probation for your coldness, you may consider yourself under probation for your other fault. We shall see how you succeed."

Harry returned to his brothers, and when he reported that he, too, had been put on probation, the three of them embraced and then turned their attention to refreshments as on the evening before.

"Now, Tom," said Dick, "you practice on either me or Harry every day during the term of your probation. We'll coach you; and, mind, don't go to see your girl except immediately after a lesson from both of us."

Tom took the advice and persuaded his brothers to remain with him until he was "out of the woods." At the end of the month he was accepted and became the husband of Julia Atkinson. After their marriage she continued her husband's training. Her own demonstrative bearing became subdued, and Tom unconsciously relapsed into pessimism. But, on the whole, they got on together as well as most couples.

popular. This is cut loose, belted, short sleeved, while shapely in lines. A bit of embroidery finishes the buttoned front, the collar edge and the cuffs.

For Spring Brides.

A dainty and acceptable gift to tuck into the bride's traveling bag as a little surprise to her when her destination is reached is a boudoir set of cap and ribbon slippers. The whole output may be folded very small in its tissue paper wrapping and will take up scarcely any room at all in the bag—not as much as the handful of rice which is sometimes slipped in by a mischievous bridesmaid. The cap is an ordinary boudoir cap of white point d'esprit, filled with fine white lace and trimmed with the best quality satin ribbon in pale blue or pink shade. A bow of the ribbon is caught against the cap with a tiny rhinestone buckle.

The slippers have very flexible soles, cut from pale blue or pink goldenrod satin; two layers of satin for each sole, and a thin layer of cotton batting may be slipped between if one fancies a little thicker sole. Two inch blue or pink satin ribbon is sewed around the edge of the sole and fastened together at the back. About two inches of the ribbon are gathered along the upper edge over cord elastic to hold the slipper on the heel.

Ragged Sailors.

Materials.—Two cupfuls flour, two teaspoonfuls baking powder, one-half cupful sugar, an egg, one-half teaspoonful salt, three tablespoonfuls butter, one-half cupful chopped nuts, two-thirds cupful milk.

Directions.—Sift the flour, salt and baking powder, rub the butter in; then add sugar and nuts. Mix to a soft dough with the egg and milk, roll out thin and sprinkle with sugar. Roll up with the sugar inside, cut in slices three-quarters of an inch thick, place on a greased baking tin, brush over with beaten egg and bake about fifteen minutes.

Attractive Suits.

Every woman who can possibly afford it will invest in one of the attractive suits of pongee, poplin or silk homespun. They are a delightful combination of style and utility and, though rather high priced, are well worth the cost. They are to be had in white, cream and oyster white, tan, brown and biscuit Dutch, navy and gray blue, besides different tones of green and gray.

Now It's a Book Wagon.

Now we have little wagons to use in the library. Their rubber tired wheels move noiselessly over even hardwood floors, and their top is edged by a framework high enough to hold books, while two lower shelves contain the two different sizes of the magazines of the moment. These book wagons do not take up much space in the library.

Satin For Blouses.

A new blouse of white satin shows a delightful touch of color in the lining of primrose yellow taffeta that appears in turnover points of the high collar and the jabot-like frill on the front and in the lower side of the frills that finish the long sleeves.

A Restoration

By BARBARA PHIPPS

When I was a girl of twelve I one day looked in a mirror and was struck with the difference between my appearance and that of my brothers and sisters. While they resembled one another, I looked like none of them. Their hair and eyes were black; mine was auburn. They were stocky of figure; I was taller than any of them and lithe. Besides these differences, their faces were unrefined; mine, I was pleased to notice, was rather pretty. I was also better dressed than they.

It did not exactly occur to me that I had been born of other parents, but from that time I began to suspect that there was something in me different from what was in them. When I was fourteen my mother, who was as different from me as the others, told me that I must earn by own living. At the same time she confessed that she was not my mother. She said that when I was a baby I had been given to her to be taken care of, and up to that time a certain sum of money had been paid her regularly for my keep and a specific amount to be spent on my clothes. These payments had been stopped, and this was why I must shift for myself.

Since the day I looked in the glass and discovered the difference between me and the others of the family I gradually lost whatever of affection I had felt for them. When therefore she whom I had supposed to be my mother informed me that I must earn my own living I was content to leave them. I found a position as nursemaid for a little boy two years old and lived in the house where I was employed.

The mother of my charge was kind to me, and one day I told her my story. She was very sympathetic and told me that my experience, together with my appearance and a native refinement there was in me, led her to believe that I was the child of persons of the upper class. This is all she said to me. I wondered if she would not offer to help me find my parents, but she did not. When I spoke of trying to find them she said that it would be like hunting for a needle in a haystack, especially since they did not wish to be found. Were this not so they would seek me. The fact that my allowance had been cut off was especially discouraging.

Had it not been for this last mentioned fact I believe I should have made an effort to find those of my own flesh and blood, though I don't know how I could have made a beginning. As it was, I was obliged to be content with my lot. The only objection to it was that I had a feeling in me that I had been born in a higher sphere than that of nursemaid.

One day when I was seventeen years old my supposed mother came to see me and told me that a great change had taken place with regard to me. She was commissioned to take me to my parents.

"But," she said, "they don't know where you are, and it depends upon me whether you reach them or not. If you go to them you will be rich and can afford to pay me for what I do for you. Here is a note for $10,000, due when you come of age, a year from now. If you will sign it I will not only return you to your parents, but will furnish the evidence that you are their child."

I referred the matter to the father of my charge, and he said that it seemed best that I should sign it. I being a minor, it would not be legal anyway. I signed the note, and the same day the woman drove with me to a handsome house, and on entering I was received by a lady who took me in her arms and wept over me. I had become used to noticing my appearance in contrast with those of my own supposed station, and no sooner did I see this lady than I knew by my resemblance to her that she was my mother. Her hair and mine were the same shade of auburn.

Later a gentleman came and took me on his lap and caressed me. He was my father.

It was many years before I got all the reasons for my having been put in charge of the family with whom I grew up. My father made a clandestine marriage with one to whom his parents were opposed. Soon after I was born my father consented to abjure his wife, and I, when born, was hustled off without its being known to my grandparents that my mother had been married or I born to her. My parents agreed to all this, expecting that it would be temporary. But my grandparents were relentless, and my parents, becoming poorer and poorer, at last were unable to remit my allowance. My grandfather was finally taken ill and on his deathbed relented. He had left his money to charity, but at the last moment changed his will, leaving the property to his son.

Immediately after his death my parents sought me. It turned out that my supposed mother had received $10,000 for my return. The fact that I had also been forced to pay the same amount was not pleasing to my father, and he threatened to prosecute the woman for fraudulent conduct unless she surrendered the note I had signed. This she did.

For a long while after the great change in my life I could no nothing but think about my newborn happiness, and it seemed that my father and mother were bent on making up the many years they had been deprived of their child by the affection they lavished on me.

All this occurred many years ago. I am now happily married.

Cashmere Combined With Fancy Silk.

Rose cashmere and striped taffeta are smart and serviceable for this one-piece dress, which has the blouse front, back and long sleeve cut in one.

The one-piece frock is ever new because of the endless ways in which it is developed. This striking model combined old rose cashmere with striped silk in very effective fashion. In medium size the dress requires 4 yards 44-inch cashmere, with 2 yards 36-inch striped silk.

The dress will offer no difficulties whatever, if the construction guide is followed rigidly in making. After making the underbody and fitting it, take the blouse and close underarm and sleeve seams. Close centerback seam and hem the front, the center of which is indicated by large "O" perforations. Gather lower edge of sleeve fro flare cuffs. Sew cuffs to sleeves as notched and bring edges together at small "o" perforation in the sleeve.

To make the skirt and jumper is the next problem. Turn under front edges of front and front gore (in one piece) on slot perforations, lap right front gore on left, center-fronts even: stitch about 1 inch from folder edge leaving edges free above single large "O" perforation for a placket. Lap the remaining folded edge of front gore to line of small "o" perforations in side gore, notches even, stitch about ⅜ inch from folded edge to any desired depth, and press; close seam under plait. Close center-back seam. Gather upper edge of skirt between double "TT" perforations. Plait under-arm edges of front and back bringing "T" to corresponding small "o" perforations and tack. Underface front, from front edge to 1 inch inside of small "o" perforations: roll on small "o" perforations to form rever. Line back collar section and sew to front section as notched. Close under-arm and shoulder seams: and sew collar to neck edge as notched. Adjust to position stitching gathers in skirt along upper row of gathers in blouse, bringing single large "O" perforation to corresponding perforation in underbody, and bring small "o" perforation in skirt to under-arm seam.

An Interesting Linen Frock.

One of the most attractive shades this season is named after the humble blotting pad and appears to advantage, trimmed with white lines, in this morning frock.

Considerable interest in linens is manifested by the leading dressmakers of New York and Paris in their summer collections. A morning frock in blotting pad blue linen is shown here, made attractive by touches of white introduced on the collar and tiny straps finishing the lower part of the sleeves. If desired, the peplum may be omitted, leaving a trim waist finish, with the front extending below the belt. In medium size the dress requires 4¼ yards 44-inch or 5¾ yards 36-inch linen.

The material is folded in half n the cutting table, then each section

The material is folded in half on the guide, before any attempt is made to cut the dress. If the skirt or sleeves are desired shorter than shown, cut off the pattern on the lines of small "o" perforations.

The piecings for the gores are laid along the selvage edge of the material, so that when the front and back gores are laid on the linen on a lengthwise fold, nearly every available inch of space is taken.

The cutting guide shows the various small sections to be placed into position to avoid waste of linen. The jumper front and back and back of the underblouse are laid on a lengthwise fold, as is also the collar. On the upper row place the underblouse front, sleeve, peplum and round collar, if this is used instead of the straight one, on a leng- wise thread, in the order named.

The outerblouse is perforated for two different neck outlines, round or V-shapes, allowing for the introduction of a vest, if desired.

BUNNY RABBIT'S WORKSHOP.

There was a great deal of bustle and stir in the Bunny Rabbit's workshop.

Just then a lively little rabbit with inquisitive ears came in carrying a basket of eggs dyed beautiful bright colors. "Everything is going along finely," he said briskly. "My eggs are really gorgeous this year, speckled and spotted and brilliant as well. How goes it with you, old pal? Is the chocolate right? Really, chocolate eggs are so popular these days that they must be made especially fine to please all the little ones!"

"Oh, right enough, right enough!" answered the Bunny Rabbit wearily as he dipped the creamy cocoanut eggs into the shiny chocolate and laid them out to dry. "I can't complain of my work, but I do complain of the grass!"

"What's wrong with the grass?" replied the inquisitive rabbit as he deftly decorated the eggs with white sugar.

"Oh, there's nothing the matter with the grass, nothing at all, except that a week ago there wasn't any to be seen."

"Now, now, Bunny Rabbit, don't you borrow trouble," said his little friend as he flourished his sugar cone. "I'm sure the grass is doing bravely. Just you have a little faith in it. If we all love the children, as we do, then each one of us is working just as hard as we can to please them Easter morning. Be sure of this, and be sure that the sun and rain and balmy wind are helping the grass to grow, just as I am helping you to make bushels and bushels of eggs, just to please the little ones. When we work with love nothing can really go wrong, you know."

Now, when Bunny Rabbit heard this he stopped getting angry and began to work harder than ever. "I suppose you are right, little friend. I'll just live up to my part of the bargain and leave the grass to do the same. At least I can hide the eggs in straw nests if the worst comes to the worst."

So love and peace reigned in the workshop all the rest of that Easter Saturday. That night when Bunny Rabbit and his little pal stole quietly about the earth, laden with lovely eggs and gifts for the children, they saw that what seemed a miracle had happened. There in the light of the Easter moon the grass was waving, long and green and sparkling with dew, as though with happy tears.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

FISH FOR LENT.

DEVILED HALIBUT.—Boil two and a half pounds of halibut, then free it from skin, bone and flake it. Have ready chopped fine one large onion, six Spanish peppers (those canned in oil), eight olives and a stalk of celery. Add a cupful of fine crumbs and add the mixture to the fish, with two tablespoonfuls of chutney sirup, a tablespoonful of worcestershire sauce, a cupful of tart apple sauce, a gill of melted butter and the whites of two eggs stiffly beaten. Put into well buttered baking shells or ramekins and bake from twenty to forty minutes, covering them the first fifteen.

Salmon Souffle.—Flake enough cold boiled salmon to make two cupfuls. Add pepper, salt, the juice of an onion, two finely chopped cold boiled eggs, a teaspoonful of chopped tarragon leaves, half a gill of melted butter, half a gill of cream and the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs. Toss the ingredients lightly and turn into buttered ramekins. Bake until puffed up and delicately browned.

Creamed Codfish Tongues.—Parboil as many tongues as are needed to allow one to a portion. When done remove root and skin and have ready a French cream sauce made in the following way: Put in a saucepan half a cupful of butter and when melted add the juice of a lemon, add as much bicarbonate of soda as would cover a 10 cent piece and then add a large cupful of rich milk that has had a dessert spoonful of cornstarch dissolved in it. Stir until it is smooth, then add pepper, salt and the tongues. When all is hot serve.

Shrimp Tarts.—Line separate tart pans with good pie crust and crimp the edges. Shell and break in pieces a quart of freshly boiled shrimp. Make a good rich cream sauce and put in the shrimp, season well and fill the tarts, dusting the top of each with a few fine crumbs, grated cheese and pepper and salt. Put in the oven, and by the time the crust is done the filling will be brown on top.

HOW SWEENY GOT HIS FRANKFURTERS

Germans Left Basket of Food For American in French Army.

DISPROVED FALSE REPORTS

After Papers Saying That Germany Had No Food Were Given Kaiser's Troops They Took Unique Method of Branding Them as Untrue—Expected Bullets, but Got "Hot Dogs."

Lieutenant Charles Sweeny of the French Foreign Legion returned recently to New York to recover from a wound received during the French offensive in Champagne last September. Sweeny is an American, a graduate of West Point and the son of a former president of the Federal Smelting and Refining company of Spokane, Wash. The following story of a most unusual "Dutch treat" was told by Lieutenant Sweeny to Private Casey, a New York artist, also fighting in the Foreign Legion:

Sweeny is not a Frenchman even though he happens to be in the army service of France. After his graduation he married a Belgian girl and settled down in Paris. His wife and two small children are living in that vicinity at the present time.

"I started out about midnight," said Sweeny, "with a patrol to have a look at a new German bayou between two fortlets beyond our lines. I strung my men out so as to give warning of any German patrol and then led them past our sentries and the barbed wire. I was some distance ahead of my men and had got well within the German lines without seeing or hearing anything of the Germans.

Bullets Never Came.

"Now, this was not the first time that I had ever penetrated that far into the German lines, but it was the first time on such a mission that I had not had to dodge a German patrol and very often their bullets. These things ran in my head continually and made me think that I had fallen into a very neat trap which the Germans had laid for me. I expected to see them rise from anywhere any minute and hear the banging of their guns and the whistling of their bullets (if I was lucky enough to hear them, that is), and I began to wish myself well out of my predicament and back again in the comparative safety of our trench.

"This made me more cautious than ever, and presently I began to retreat. As I did so a round German helmet bobbed up out of a ravine not a dozen yards away. An instant later at the other end of the ravine another appeared. I squirmed away like a snake and got behind the only shelter in sight, a little scrubby tree, about three yards away.

"As I lay there quaking, wondering why the Germans did not shoot—for they must have seen me—I happened to look up, and there, hanging to a branch of the tree, was a fat, clean looking basket. I reached up, the limb on which it hung being only a few feet from the ground, and lifted the basket down.

"Then in a flash the explanation of the puzzle was clear to me. The Germans had left that basket there and meant me to have it.

"With the basket on my arm, I got up, bowed low to the round hats and walked back to our trench without ever being fired on.

"Inside the basket was an assortment of frankfurters and other food. There was also a note something after this wise:

Note in Basket.

"'We have been in front of you for over a year, and it is not against our comrades, the French, that we are fighting, but against our enemy, the English. Let us join forces against our common enemy. We are not starving, as you may well see from the little present we send you herewith.'

"Here was something that set me thinking pretty hard. I had escaped death or capture by a miracle, so far as I could see, and all in order that I might enjoy a hearty meal at the expense of the Germans.

"I set the basket down in the trench and fell to with a will, and I give you my word, Casey, of all the good things I have eaten I never enjoyed anything more than I did that Dutch treat—especially the frankfurters.

"They took me back to the United States immediately—'hot dogs,' the brightness of the sea, the yawping of barkers, crowds passing, the noise of thousands of shuffling feet—not the sort of shuffling we hear now, Casey, when a bugle call or the heavy sound of guns seems the chief attraction. It was a great shame I couldn't save you one.

"The meaning of all this was a puzzle to me until I found out that our boys had left a bundle of American and English newspapers in the spot where I had found the basket, with the paragraphs plainly marked in which it was said the Germans were starving. And the basket was the Germans' reply.

PEACOCK WONDERS WHY MANY PEOPLE REFUSE TO DO THINGS FOR GOD

The Evangelist's sermon last night was in part as follows:

God expects his redeemed to tell the rest of thew orld what he has done for them. This is the idea set forth in this text, "Let the redeemed of the Lord say so." I have often wondered why so many people have refused to do anything for God, when you ask them they have some evcuse. They are not willing to speak for the Master. This has always been a pozzle to me until I began to study this text, and since studying this passage of scripture, I believe I have learned the secret. All the people professing to be God's people are not the redeemed of God. Many are laboing under a delusion. They think they are redeemmed of God, but God may think something different. Now I firmly believe it is possible for us to be deceived in regard to this matter. And I positively believe many people are deceived, I sincerely believe many people think they are doing right when they are doing wrong. Why do I think they ared oing right when they are doing wrong. Why do I think this way? I will tell you.

Three-fourths of the people in the church are as ignorant as Hottentots concerning thew ord of God. They have never read the Bible. They know absolutely nothing about it. You would be surprised how many people in this audience would fail if they were put to the test this evening. Now so long as we ever read the Bible we can never know the will of God. When we come to church we think the minister is just telling a lot of stuff that doesn't amount to anything, and that the Bible doesn't teach any such doctrine. Now so long as we try to serve God in this way we will never amount to very much in the service of our God. The pcalmist tells us in this text why the redeemmed of the Lord have been redeemmed of the hand of the enemy. If we have been redeemmed from the hand of the enemy we are supposed to tell others about what God has done for us. Of course if we have never been redeemed it is a pretty difficult matter to tell people about it. Before we can testify for Jesus we must realize that Jesus has redemmed us from something. We must feel that Jesus has redeemed us from the hand of the enemy. And when we are positive that Jesus has redeemed us from the hand of the enemy, thew we will be anxious to see others redeemed and will testify concerning what Jesus has done for us.

Redeemed Should Testify

This is the idea in the mind of the inspired writer. The lesson that he wished to teach is this, that the redeemed of God should tell the world what God has done for them, and by so doing win the world for God, and point others to the way of salvation which God has provided for his people. This is a blessed work. The work of helping to save other people. It is a desperate work—it is a matter of life and death. And when we are careless and indifferent in regard to this matter, we are just lending our help in sending men an dwomen to hell. We should never think of being so careless and indifferent if our friends and neighbors were in trouble or distress of any kind. We would do all in our power to help them. Then if we believe Jesus redeemed us from the bondage of sin and death, why are we not willing to help other people find Jesus as the Saviour?

People Are Pershing

My friends men and women are pershing in sin and wickedness. They need our help. They are going down all around us. What are we doing to rescue them? We need have no fear of the gospel failing. The strong arm of God is long enough and strong enough to rescue the lowest. What we need is some one to carry it to those who need it. You all know of some one outside of the kingdom of Christ. Won't you volunteer to take the gospel of Jesus Christ to that one? If you refuse to do your duty he or she will be lost, and God will hold you responsible for the soul.

Now there are several places where ther edeemed of the Lord can testify for Jesus Christ. In fact, the redeeming of God can speak for God most any place. But I want to mention a few special places. The first place I want to mention is in the home. Let the redeemed of the Lord say so in the home. Probably you have been praying for your loved ones secretly, but have you face to face, with your heart full of His grace spoken to one for whom you have prayed? Have you ever told your loved ones that you have been praying for them? Can you speak to your children about spiritual things? I have been told that Dwight L. Moody won each of his children to Jesus Christ. Have you been able to lead your children to Jesus? My friends there are parents who would be willing to die that their children might live and yet those same parents' lips are sealed, and they are unable to speak to their own children about spiritual things. Christian parents, Sabbath School teachers, Christian workers it is high time for us to stop and ask ourselves this question. What have we been doing to bring the members of our own families the member of our Sabbath school and the people of our community to a saving knowledge of Christ? It is about time for the redeemed of the Lord to say so in the home.

Then another place the redeemed of the Lord should say so is in the church, We should be willing to tell others what God has done for us. The devil keeps a great many silent. He fills their minds with the idea that they cannot speak for Jesus. Let me give you a little personal experience. The first time I tried to speak for Christ I thought I would faint. I was so frightened I did not know what I was saying, but the second time was a great deal easier. Try it once and see if you do not get a blessing. Tell the world what Jesus has done for you. Your experience may prove a great blessing to some other person.

Testify in Daily Life

Another place the redeemed of the Lord should say so is in every day life. We can do this in the office, in the mill, in the store, on the street in the school, wherever we go, we can silently bear testimony for Jesus. By consistent living we can preach the gospel of Jesus Christ by giving the invitation we may be instrumental in starting some men on the way to heaven. By letting others know we are interested in them we may be able to lead them to Jesus. I cannot understand how a man can be a Christian and not be interested in the spiritual welfare of other people. Many of our most influential men have been great personal workers in the kingdom of Jesus. My friends if the members of the church would use their influence 365 days in the year for Jesus you would be surprised the blessing God would pour out upon us. The best way to learn to do a thing is to do it. Let the redeemed of the Lord say so. If Jesus and his religion means anything to you tell others about it and you will receive a blessing and the others will receive a blessing. I hope the spirit of God will take such a hold upon you that you will have no peace until you have done everything in your power to win Fulton and surrounding community for Christ. If you have anything in your life which keeps you from doing your duty, pray God to take it away.

Song of the Army Mewel

He couldn't tote with the motor lorry,
He couldn't fight with the army truck,
And for a time it seemed, begorry,
The army mewel was out o' luck.
The army mewel
What needs no fuel—
Oh, wan't it cruel?—
Was out o' luck.

He couldn't drag the fifteen inches
Or fly or manage a submarine,
But he's right there with hits in the pinches,
And he don't need no gasoline.
The army mewel,
He ain't no foo-el
And, as a ru-el,
Hates gas-o-line.

When Uncle Sam hits plain or mountain
Or desert that round the wide world runs
And there's no water nor petrol fountain
The mewel he totes the grub and guns.
The army mewel,
The precious jewel
And useful too-el,
He totes the guns.

Duration of a Wink.

The time occupied by the several phases of the movement has been measured, and it is found that the mean duration of the descent of the lid is from seventy-five to ninety one-thousandths of a second.

The interval while the eye is shut was in one case only fifteen-hundredths of a second. The rising of the lid occupies seventeen-hundredths of a second. A specially arranged photographic apparatus was used. The popular phrase that something is done "quicker than a wink" is therefore expressive to a degree that may be stated in fractions of a second.—Washington Star.

Economy Hints

A penny saved is a penny earned.—Benjamin Franklin.

EVERY one should have on hand directions for removing various stains which are apt to disturb one's peace of mind at some time or other.

A grease spot on silk is a common thing, and yet in many cases it could easily be removed by applying a paste made of equal parts of powdered French chalk and fuller's earth. Allow the mixture to remain on the spot for a few days, and then brush it off.

Iron rust, the bugbear of many housekeepers, can often be effaced by applying lemon juice and salt. Spread the stained article in the sun and keep the stained portion moist with lemon. Wash the article in the regular way when the stain has disappeared.

Milk applied to a fresh ink stain will prove successful in removing it, but the trouble is that the ink usually spills when there is no milk near at hand. In this event the unfortunate one must wait until it is convenient to purchase oxalic acid. Having procured it, the spot should be moistened with cold water before the acid is applied, drop by drop. Allow it to stand a few minutes, and then rinse the stained article in cold water, to which a little ammonia has been added. A medicine dropper is a splendid thing to use to apply the acid.

It is advisable for every woman who was unable to remove fruit stains that marred her linen in the summer to place the linen out in the frost now that real winter days are here.

Stubborn tea stains can be eradicated by spreading the stained portion over a bowl and pouring glycerin through the material. Afterward pour boiling water.

Boiling water poured from a height will also remove coffee stains.

FOR HOUSEKEEPERS.

How to Remember Certain Proportions In Cooking Common Things.

Four eggs to one quart of milk for custards.

One teaspoonful of vanilla to one quart of custard.

Two ounces of gelatin to one and three-quarters quarts of liquid.

Four heaping tablespoonfuls of cornstarch to one quart of milk.

One even tablespoonful of baking powder to one cupful of flour.

One teaspoonful of soda to one pint of sour milk. One teaspoonful of soda to one pint of molasses.

One teaspoonful of baking powder is equal to one-half teaspoonful of soda and one teaspoonful of cream of tartar.

In preparing for baking, mix dry materials in one bowl and liquids in another; combine them quickly and put at once into the oven.

The oven for baking bread should be hot enough to brown a teaspoonful of flour in five minutes. For biscuits it should brown in one minute.

Rubbing a pie crust with butter a few minutes before it is time to take it from the oven will make it crisp.

How to "Do" Your Hair For Evenings This Winter.

Coinards of tortoise shell or imitation amber, with touches of gold inlay on the ends, are intended to be thrust through the loose knot of hair.

Pins whose tops are on hinges so that they may be folded down flatly after they are thrust into the hair are set with rhinestones and with colored gems.

Tall Spanish combs of crystal set with brilliants that are beautiful in dark hair or the gray hair of the middle aged woman make stunning hair ornaments.

Gray pins of artistic shades and shapes are popular not only with white haired women, but also with girls who have blue eyes, since the use of gray pins or a gray comb in the hair will accentuate the blue and deepen it.

How to Let Down a Hem of a Cotton Gown.

Almost all cotton dresses shrink in washing and need letting down in the skirt. Before the dress goes to the tub take out the wide hem and turn it again at half the width. This brings the edge of the new hem to the crease in the bottom of the skirt, which gives a straight guide for basting. In almost every case the skirt comes out of the wash just the right length, with no streak of dirt to mark the old line.

How to Tell a Woman's Age Without Asking It.

The American Magazine gives the following rule for telling a woman's age:

"My son, wouldst thou know a woman's age? Watch her when she putteth on her hat, whether she rammeth it on carelessly or regardeth the mirror with overmuch care, for, behold, her eyes shall tell thee where her mind wandereth."

How to Make a Scalloped Edge In Embroideries Durable.

Before embroidering a scalloped edge place the piece under the machine and stitch around on the outline mark, then work from the outside of stitching, and the scallop will be twice as durable.

RAILWAY MEN DEFEND DEMANDS

Explain Their Position on the Eight Hour Day.

FASTER FREIGHT SERVICE.

Present System of Handling Slow Trains a Detriment to the Public. Dead Freight Travels Only One Mile an Hour—Granting the Shorter Day Would Benefit Railroads.

The technical side of freight transportation is treated in a simple manner in a statement issued by the four railroad brotherhoods whose members are demanding an eight hour day. The statement says:

A great deal has been said about the inability of the railroads to grant the eight hour day to railway train crews and switchmen, and a few facts bearing upon the necessity of a shorter work day are here presented.

The unit of wage payment is now based on the moving of rolling stock 100 miles per ten hours, or ten miles per hour. The men are now asking for eight hours, or twelve and one-half miles per hour, 100 miles in eight hours, and time and one-half for overtime after eight hours.

The railroad companies, as well as the public at large, would be benefited by the change. All trunk lines centering in large terminals have so called manifest freight, leaving these terminals each night, hauling from 1,000 to 1,200 tons of freight, which is called fast freight service. These trains travel over divisions up to 140 to 240 miles on an average of an eight to eleven hour basis. In many cases the so called drag or dead freight train, leaving the same terminal probably three hours ahead of these manifest or fast freight trains, is passed on the road, and the fast freight goes to its destination in eight or nine hours, while the dead freight is often caught by the federal sixteen hour law and has to tie up for eight hours' rest before getting into division or terminal points.

If one train can be sent over a division of say 140 or 150 miles in eight hours there is no just reason why the same class engine with another train should put in fourteen or sixteen hours over the same course. * * *

For example, take a car of bananas shipped, say, from New Orleans to St. Louis, which goes through in thirty-six or thirty-eight hours, while a car of dead freight would occupy almost three weeks getting the same distance; in other words, dead freight is moving in the United States on an average of about one mile per hour when it should move practically as expeditiously as any other commodity.

The statement has been repeatedly made that the men do not want an eight hour day, but are simply after an increase in wages. This absurd statement has no basis in fact, as the men do not want the overtime, and the only way to stop the working of the men overtime is to put a penalty on the use of overtime, so that the railroads would move trains more expeditiously and be more saving in their use of the men's overtime work. Pay for overtime to the worker is blood money, as this money is made after the man is worn out, needs sleep and rest, and digs at his very vitals and makes him old before his time.

Give railway train service men eight hours' work, eight hours' sleep and eight hours to pass with their families and they ask for no overtime and no so called exorbitant pay.

The manufacturers and shippers are constantly brought face to face with car shortages throughout the United States, which condition is largely brought about by slow transportation of so called dead freight. If cars loaded with this dead or slow moving freight were handled more rapidly to destination, unloaded and returned to service the company would earn a greater revenue on each car, which increase alone would offset any additional expense the company would sustain in making the change. Keep the trains moving by giving them the amount of tonnage they can handle over the division and it will be seldom that the trip cannot be made in eight hours.

There is no good, logical reason why railway and train service men should not be on an eight hour basis. Before the federal sixteen hour law was enforced the companies worked the men twenty or thirty hours, but after this law became effective they found they could get the trains through in fourteen or fifteen hours, and they will find this can be just as easily cut to eight hours as it was from thirty to sixteen hours. It needs only the co-operation of the company officials with the men to make an eight hour day on railroads a blessing and at the same time knock the shackles off of 309,174 railroad men in the United States now calling for relief.

Gary Indictments Quashed.

The criminal prosecution of six steel companies and Judge Elbert H. Gary, head of the United States Steel corporation, was brought to a halt, for the present at least, when Judge W. S. Anderson in common pleas court, Youngstown, O., sustained a motion to quash the indictments returned March 8. The indictments charged the defendants with being participants in a price and wage fixing combination.

We say: LET THEM RAVE ABOUT OTHER CITIES; FULTON IS THE BEST ONE AFTER ALL.

There are three distinct elements in modern society—the individual, the family and the community. The interests of each depends on the integrity of all, and the lines of cooperation followed in aiding in the upbuilding of the community come through the action of the family and the individual. Under ordinary conditions there ought to be no occasion for asking patriotic people who seek the welfare of the city or town in which they reside to purchase all of the goods they need there and thus develop its commercial interests. But so many so-called inducements have been offered them by outside parties and the arguments presented are of such a seductive character that at times they are lured away from the path of community duty and find themselves giving of their substance to others. It is plain that as the commercial features of a city move forward that the city and all of its people benefit in a corresponding ratio. To send the money you spend for household or personal necessities out of town is to help benefit some other city at the expense of your own. No patriotic Fultonian who is interested in the civic advancement of Fulton (and all who live here must certainly have that sense of home pride) can afford to make a move that will not be in line with the proposition to make Fulton one of the best cities in New York State. Every merchant who opens a store here gives employment to labor, takes his place among the elements associated intimately with the advancementof the city and is entitled to the continued annd loyal support of the people. The mercantile interests of the city are the controlling elements of material progress. The merchant is in touch with the manufacturer and often is the means of bringing other industries to the city. Nearly all of the real big industries brought to different cities were brought there through the efforts of the combined merchants.

The Tree Somewhat New to Many of Us Is Bursting Its Buds and After Week of 8th Will Bloom as Never Before.

The Imps of Dirt and Disorder in our city may well shake in their boots. Yesterday afternoon the women designated as chairmen in the Clean-Up Campaign met with the General Chairman, Miss Ada Thayer, and plans were laid for effecting a sure-nuff Clean-Up. Plenty of enthusiasm was manifested in the work and there is no reason to doubt that these plans, backed up by the muscle of the men's committee, will leave Mother Fulton's house spick and span from garret to cellar.

While the committee wasb usily mapping out ways and means Secretary Hollenga of the Chamber of Commerce presented himself and pointed out the amount of work necessary to obtain a Clean city. The campaign will not be an affair of small moment. The women evidently were not dismayed by the size of the task, for after Secretary Hollenga had dismissed himself they at once resolved all sorts of things—all pertinent to the campaign, to be sure. Ashes, tin cans, bottles, bundles of rags and boxes in alleys and back yards shall be wiped away and the city will know them no more. In their stead will prevail order, cleanliness and beauty. Flowers will bloom in the most unheard of places and the tree of cooperation so recently transplanted to our city, it is expected will put on an extra leaf or two.

The city's boys and girls will be asked to coöperate in the movement. They will be organized intogroups and each group will have a certaind istrict to look after. Theb oys will visit the homes inspecting alleys and back yards, and pointing out the things needed to

QUICK ACTION NEEDED TO RELIEVE TIGHTNESS IN DEPARTMENT FUNDS

It became officially known to the Board of Public Works last night, that unless provision is made at once to finance the Police and Fire Departments, those departments must cease to operate about May 1st, as there is no money in the city's exchequer that can be used to pay salaries of men. Relief, however, is promised when the councilmen meet tonight. City Attorney Hillick informed the Board that it will be necessary to make provision for meeting the salary expense of the two departments until the time arrives for collectiong next year's budget, which means until January 1, 1917.

Almost an innovation was introduced by Commissioner O'Brien in the matter of building bridges. His resolution provides that a railing shall be placed on the stone bridges in Seward st., and another bridge built in the same street, between 3rd and 4th sts.; the work to be performed by men in the direct employ of the city supervised by the Superintendent of Works. The resolution was carried, the idea of the Board being that it is in favor of economy. Heretofore such work has been awarded to contractors against the protest of the people who eventually foot the bills. In this matter the Board is guided by experiments tried in a few cases, all of them proving satisfactory.

Mayor Lewis asked that some action be taken relative to certain undersirable conditions existing in the city. His recommendations were as follows:

That West 4th st., between Phillips st. and the railroad be relieved of its filthy and deplorable condition, and that the same kind of treatment be accorded to Gansvoort st., from 1st to 2nd st.; that the stub of a pole now protruding above the sidewalk near the O. & W. station be removed, as pedestrians are making complaints, some of

German Shells Hammer Dead Man Hill; New Attacks Indicated

Paris—An unusually severe bombardment of the Dead Man Hill, which has been in progress for the last two days, is believer here top resage a new general attack west of the Meuse River. The German artillery from behind Forges Brook has been pouring a constant stream of shells onto the slopes of the height, to which the French artillery, from ther everse side of the hill, has been replying. Apparently the Crown Prince is not ready to send his infantry in, however, for the rifle attacks have been in small force and directed only against outposts.

Last night's official communication, in addition to telling of the big gun duels about Verdun, mentioned four separate air raids on German concentration camps or important junctions. It follows:

"Our artillery was active in the sectors of Westende and Steenstraette.

"In the Argonne we concentrated our fire on the region of Malancourt.

"West of the Meuse the enemy violently bombarded during the afternoon our positions in the region of Le Mort Homme.

"East of the Meuse and in the Woerve the artillery activity was intermittent.

"There is nothing to report on the rest of the front.

"Aviation.—Last night our aerial squadrous carried out several bombarding operations. Twenty-one shells and eight incendiary bombs were dropped on the railway station at Longuyon, five shells on the station at Stenay, twelve shells on bivouacs in the region of Montfaucon and the station at Nantillois."

The afternoon announcement said French troops made progress on Sunday night at the Verdun front northwest of Caurettes wood. They attacked with hand grenades and in the fighting took thirty prisoners, one an officer. Several German reconnoitring parties were dispersed southeast of Haucourt. There was rather heavy bombardment at Dead Man Hill. East of the Meuse the night was comparatively calm.

Chancellor to Confer With Emperor Today

Berlin—The American Ambassador was called by telephone to the Imperial Chancellor's Palace this morning. He went immediately and the conference with Dr. von Bethmann—Hollweg lasted an hour and ten minutes.

When he came from the conference Mr. Gerard declined to give to the correspondents any information concerning the nature of the discussion and would not answer a question as to whether any one else was present.

It is understood the German reply to the American note will not be delivered before the Imperial Chancellor has another opportunity of conferring with the Emperor.

Dr. von Vethmann-Hollweg devoted the afternoon to conferences on the submarine question with Admiral von Holtbendorff, chief of the Admiralty Staff. Several of the higher diplomatic officials participated.

"The Sussex either was or was not torpedoed by the Germans," says the Frankfurter Zeitung in its comment on the American note. "For the present we assume that Herr von Jagow's statement was right and President Wilson's untrue. But Americans must be convinced by striking proofs of the falseness of their assertions."

The Cologne Gazette says there is no doubt that the Sussex case, "which is still quite uncleared up," is "only a pretext for President Wilson to undertake a new hostile attack on Germany, while the real reason is to be found in the successes of the German submarine campaign and the damage it does to Germany's enemies."

Berlin correspondence of the Cologne Volkszeitung says:—"President Wilson desires war. Many Germans knew and believed that before yesterday."

"The article further declares:— "President Wilson demands that the submarine warfare cease altogether. The whole form and tone of then ote shows that President Wilson desires a conflict with Germany."

LOOK OUT FOR THE SPEAKER

Speaker Sweet is coming strong these days. There are many signs of his strength, but perhaps the most pleasing one of all to the friends of the Phoenix man was contained in a resume of the year's work of the Legislature which appeared last week in the New York American. Said the American:

"The Legislature which adjourns this week will leave behind it a record of some good done for the people. But the people are not indebted to Elon R. Brown, Republican leader of the Senate. They are to Thaddeus C. Sweet, Speaker of the Assembly.

"It took a revolt against the boss-ship of Brown to get these measures through the Senate. They were passed in the Assembly with the support of Speaker Sweet. Here is the record of the two men:

"Brown opposed the bill to end Death Avenue. He tried to make its defeat a party measure, but it was passed.

"Sweet advocated and secured its report by the Rules Committee of the Assembly.

"Brown appealed to his Republican followers to defeat the amendment perfecting the Widows' Pension Act. It was passed over his protest.

"Sweet advocated and secured the passage of the same bill in the Assembly.

"Brown opposed 80-cent gas for Brooklyn. He sought to make that a party measure, too.

"Sweet secured the report of the same bill, and it will pass the Assembly.

"Brown opposed the bill to end the drug evil, but it is now on the way to victory despite his stand.

"The voters of the State are looking forward to see Speaker Sweet round out his admirable record by giving his usual effective aid to the drug bill when it comes before the Rules Committee.

"The anomaly is that Brown, the reactionary and obstructionist, and Sweet, the progressive Republican, were elected by the voters of the same Senate district. But in fairness to the voters of that district it should be pointed out that at the election in which Brown's plurality was 2,934, Sweet in one-third of the district received a plurality of 4,036.

"The records of the two men, as we have presented them, should insure an even more emphatic popular approval of Speaker Sweet in the next election."

There is nothing said in the foregoing that is surprising. The fact of the matter is that Speaker Sweet is serious in all that he does. He may not be the only man who could rightly and safely be nominated by the Republicans to succeed Senator Brown, nor is The Evening Times prepared to predict his nomination, but as one of his opponents in this city has stated the Democrats of this district must unearth someone to match T. S., or the first thing they know they will be voting for the very man who has pleased the editors below the Harlem. The reason is plain. Speaker Sweet has been a conspicuous and influential figure in the Legislature, and his close attention to duty entitles him to the thanks of his constituents.

WHO SHOUTS THE LOUDEST?

Whether in a good cause or a bad one, the victory seems to be with the loudest noise in these piping times. For charity or trade, one must upraise a voice above competitors and toot one's own horn to make the paramount blare in the ensemble. "But this is a good cause" is the sufficient answer returned when the benevolent complain that calls are many and insistent. The emissary from a war-ravaged European land, coming to America to raise funds, must make it appear that whatever distress and destitution there may be in other quarters, this is the most pitiful plight of all. The money-raiser for a domestic mission must demonstrate that need elsewhere is not so great as in the piteous instance for which he seeks to enkindle sympathy. Some solve the problem of what to give and where to relieve by giving nothing and relieving none. That is an easy way out of it. It takes time and care to weigh the claims of goodness, to sift the wholesome grain from the chaff of fraud.

Purveyors of any kind of wares—heralds of their own abilities, advance agents of their own prosperity, as well as "barkers" for all manner of merchandise—are confronted with the problem of making themselves heard above their strepitant contemporaries. They think they must be like the child who, before jumping, seeks to engage the parental eye or the erratic attention of a group of playmates. "Look here!" or "Listen to me!" is the exclamation ere a feat is performed; and the others seeing that praise is won, are envious, and vie with one another for their share of the general notice and the applause. The games of the smallest children are the saneuvers of their elders on a diminished scale, a spade thrust in the peak of a sandpile may be a symbol of sovereignty, as when a conquistador planted a banner of Spain on an isle in the West Indies. Two boys at school fought bitterly because at the dinner table one had made a fort in mashed potato and filled it with gravy, and the other reached across and broke it down. "The little things a fellow cares about," magnified many diameters, go to make aw orld-embracing war.

In an era of "punch" and hammer, knock and boost, slang and hustle, it is a comfort to think that it is not always the loudest voices in the resounding symphony that shall be heard last. The modern drama may insist that it must have lines with a "kick" to them, humor of the knock-down-and-drag-out variety, scenes that shall "get across" because they startle tired business men (by whom the world revolves) out of their apathy. But there are not wanting tokens of mutiny in behalf of the kind and gentle and unboisterous influences. The "world-deafened ear" has had a surfeit of noises. It is beginning to ask why men and women, to prove they are at work, must keep up the stupefying racket of a small boy with a drum. There must come a time when our seeing and hearing shall not be victimized at every turn by an effort to startle and stampede the senses. Children ought to have a chance to grow up in a world of normal experience instead of abnormal sensation. There is such a thing as evolution by slow and ordered processes and education by refined and careful gradation, to a result that is lasting and worth while. Not everything that deserves the doing or the having is to be carried by a sudden, furious assault, like the charge of a maddened bull. There should somehow be time and room for the subdued illumination of the inner light and the soft voices that are musically sweet; and the Great White Way, ablaze and roaring, is not the high-road to the Celestial City.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Opinions

IN NEBRASKA

The later returns from Nebraska have reversed the apparent positions of Mr. Ford and Senator Cummins, Cummins having a lead of about 200 votes. But the margin is slight, and only the complete returns can show.

As to the factor of pacificism, about which so much is said in attempting to assign the reasons why Mr. Ford has run so strongly in certain States, Mr. Bryan is a pacificist, and certainly Mr. Bryan is as well known to the people of Nebraska, as Mr. Ford. Nor can William Alden Smith be less known to the Republican voters of Michigan than is Mr. Ford.

The issue of pacificism is not the only element which is necessary to be taken into account in explaining the circumstances which have caused the developments in connection with the Ford candidacy.—Buffalo Times.

THE TRUTH ABOUT MEXICO

The veil of secrecy under which the predicament of our little expedition into Mexico has been hidden from the public is at last lifting. Robert Dunn's notable dispatch to The Tribune from General Pershing's headquarters, lays bare the failure of our hunt after Villa. It analyzes dispassionately the causes of the failure and puts the responsibility for it squarely where it belongs—on an administration which neglected to make sufficient military preparation for the defense of our interests on the Mexican border, and was consequently compelled to trust for the success—even for the safety—of the Villa expedition to illusory promises of cooperation on the part of an unwilling and feeble de facto Mexican government.

The chase after Villa did not end in disappointment because our soldiers were lacking in energy, endurance or daring. They accomplished wonders with the resources at their command. The expedition was conducted with admirable skill The officers and troopers who pushed five hundred miles southward to Parral, through an exceptionally rough and barren country, covered themselves with glory. They did their full duty.

But their splendid service was wasted because they were handicapped at every turn by scanty numbers, insufficient equipment and supplies, lack of proper transportation and the ever-present necessity of guarding against attacks from nominally friendly bodies of Carranzistas.

Our fast-and-loose diplomacy with the Carranza government sent an undersized American force into Mexico without clear guarantees of friendly assistance. General Carranza has recently extracted from the administration an admission that he really never consented to the entry of American troops into Mexico.—N. Y. Tribune.

A MESSAGE TO PEACOCK

(By I. E. Hyde)

Hark, Listen! Mr. Peacock, take this from me:
If you think to shock Fulton, you are all at sea.
We may wear a pious phiz, but we merely play the game
For every stiff in Fulton has a devil, just the same.

For six long years I've been roaming through this town,
And I've yet to strike an angel in a pure white gown;
But I've met many devils with a pious, sheepish look,
And I've heard them whistle hellish tunes not found in the Book.

You may bat our church officials and drum up our preachers, too;
And for God's sake hit the populace hard—that's what you're paid to do.
Yes, herd the little kidlets left to gamble in the street;
Put brains in flirty mothers, help daddies to their feet.

While you can't shock Fulton, you may keep her from her doom;
For she seems to want to rent in hell if she finds a furnished room;
But we'll boost your mission; we'll pray, morning, night and noon;
And even then if you succeed you're a mighty lucky coon.

BUILD BUNGALOW COURTS IN WEST

The bungalow court, or "community court," is one of thep ractical and attractive solutions of the dwelling housep roblem which continue to gain favor in cities and suburbs of the Western coasts, says the Popular Mechanics magazine. Under this idea residence lots of fifty-foot frontage or more are improved with from two to sixteen bungalows, set facing a courtyard which opens onto the street.

These dwellings are preferred to apartments, for they accord more room and light and more easily take on the aspect of homes. They are generally rented furnished. Those of the better quality cost $2,500 to build, while others cost as little as $700, or even less.

The number of dwellings about a court depends on the depth of the lot and the amount of space devoted to the central courtyard, which may or may not include a drive. Frequently this court is laid out with great skill and may contain a fountain and shade trees. Almost every known variety of building material is used in these structures, including concrete, cobblestones, stucco, brick, shingles, weatherboards, etc.

The number of rooms varies from four to six or eight. Sometimes twelve or sixteen bungalows are built about a court, no two of which are alike as to style or plan. One such court in Pasadena contains structures suggesting the architectures of Japan, India, Italy, Switzerland, the mission style and other and more modern variations.

NOTED IRISH TENOR AT THE QUIRK MAY SECOND

John Finnegan, celebrated tenor soloist at St. Patrick's church, New York city, will appear at the Quirk on Tuesday, May 2nd, assisted by Mary Carson, soprano of the Century and Boston Grand Opera companies.

John Finnegan is one of the best tenors before the public, and has appeared with all the leading Symphony orchestras in this country. On May 30th he is to appear in Syracuse as leading soloist with Victor Herbert's Orchestra and is to tour with the orchestra the first two weeks in June. Miss Carson is a lyric soprano and is known both here and in Europe for her artistic work both in opera and concert.

George Roberts, who is on tour with Miss Carson, will play the accompaniments for both artists at the Fulton concert.

WOMEN ROOKIES WON'T DON TROUSERS IN CAMP

San Francisco—Women here who go to the military encampment on the Presido army reservation June 1 will not wear trousers, as the members of the American Women's League of Self Defense of New York propose, according to Mrs. Frederick H. Colburn, who has the drills in charge.

Instead each officer and enlisted woman will wear a snug little khaki Norfolk jacket with a sensible wide khaki skirt, fully six inches from the ground and elkskin shoes which will stand washing. Topping it all will be a round khaki hat something like sailors wear and the ribbons on it will rank. Each woman will have two skirts. A plain white shirt waist complete the outfit.

HE WINS DOLLAR BET, BUT IT COSTS $4.50

Pittsburg—Raymond Watkins bet a friend a dollar he would kiss the girl that passed him. He did. She was black, and indignant as well, Watkins, after collecting the bet, was arrested and paid a fine of $4.50, thereby losing $3.50.

Watkins and his friend were standing on a corner when the bet was made. Estella Stanton, eighteen, a negress, turned the corner, g azing sideways into the street, when Watkins gently seized her and planted a kiss upon her cheek. She called a cop, Squire Hahn heard the facts, saw the humor and let Watkins off with the payment of costs.

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL

FARMERS IN CO-OPERATION OBTAIN WATERWORKS

Unique System Installed In Orchard City, Colo.

Orchard City lies on a "bench" land or plateau above the Gunnison river valley. The soil is very fertile, and soon after an irrigation system had been installed all the land was taken up and placed under cultivation, writes G. A. Smith, the engineer in charge of constructing the waterworks, in the American City.

Owing to the character of the geological formation underlying the tract it is practically impossible to obtain water by drilling wells. The ranchers therefore had to depend upon the water from the irrigation ditches for all purposes. In the winter, when the irrigation ditches were dry, they had to rely upon cisterns and reservoirs which had previously been filled with rainwater. Since this water was not entirely satisfactory as to purity for drinking purposes and as it was also a problem to store sufficient water for all purposes, the people determined to build a waterworks system. A part of them were not able to pay cash for their share of the expenses, so they conceived the idea of securing a sufficient number of people to incorporate as a town under the statutes of Colorado, thus enabling them to vote bonds and raise the money for the waterworks installation. The scheme was so unique that they had considerable difficulty in disposing of their bonds, but after taking more territory into the corporate limits and thus increasing the assessed valuation of the town they readily disposed of the bonds, and the construction work was started.

The water is brought from the town of Cedar Edge, which obtains its supply from the nearby mountains by gravity flow line. It flows by gravity to a central distributing reservoir, from which branch lines radiate, following along the country roads and covering most of the territory within the incorporated limits. The system consists of approximately fifteen and a half miles of two inch, three inch, four inch and five inch pipe. The supply line from Cedar Edge to the distribution reservoir is eight and a half miles long and has a fall of nearly 800 feet in this length. By careful arrangement in the sizes of this line the hydraulic gradient was maintained so as not to exceed a pressure of more than 110 pounds on the line. The flow line, being under pressure for practically the entire distance, will furnish water for consumers living along the way. The remainder of the system will operate under a direct static pressure from a concrete reservoir of 100,000 gallons capacity, located upon a hill.

The Red Geranium City.

Waterloo, Ia., will soon be known as "the red geranium city of the world." Beds of red geraniums are being planted on each electrolier post in the downtown district of the city, and a campaign has been instigated to induce business men generally to have window boxes of red geraniums in their store and office windows. To further the idea it is proposed to adopt the red geranium as an insignia for business and private stationery.

New England Awakening.

Vermont and Maine are preparing to take full advantage during the coming summer of the "See New England" movement that the business men of these states are getting ready to promote on a large scale. Both of these states, whose playground advantages have never been sufficiently exploited, are likely to play a prominent part in increasing the vacation and tourist business of the section.

To Upbuild Devastated French Cities.

A reconstruction exposition under government auspices will be held in Paris, France, beginning in the month of May. The cities of the United States have been asked to participate in the exposition by exhibiting models of machinery, tools and hardware, electric light and sanitation plant machinery, such as will be needed in upbuilding cities of France devastated by war.

TOWN AND CITY PLANNING CONSIDERED AT CONVENTION

Suggestions by Bernard J. Newman of Philadelphia Housing Commission.

At the convention of the Pennsylvania Housing and Town Planning association held in Reading recently there were many suggestions in the address delivered by Bernard J. Newman of the Philadelphia housing commission as to why a continuously growing city or even a town whose population counts up to only a few thousands, needs plenty of extra room. Cities develop along two lines which, for mental, moral and physical wholesomeness, should be kept separated.

The development of a city in its industrial phases and features is intimately connected with its growth in homes or in the residential sections. In arranging the layout of a city or big town, however, the intermingling of industrial buildings and residential buildings is to be avoided. That part of a city that stretches along a water front is naturally adapted to factories, commercial warehouses and such, and there must be spacings for traffic approaches, and, in short, the layout of such a section should have regard entirely to its adaptation to commercial and industrial uses. It is the same with regard to those sections of a city that border the railroads. Such areas should be planned upon a liberal scale with regard to industrial uses.

A territory that is likely to be occupied by an urban population should be under a city planning organization. It should be laid off in advance with a scientific regard for both its continuous industrial development and its continuous residential expansion. It is an absurdity, almost a monstrosity, for such an area to be under county government representatives of agricultural interests. And such an area should not develop at haphazard; every detail of its development should be planned in advance.

TREES AND PLANNING.

They Are Important Elements In Landscape Gardening.

Why is it that in the planning and laying out of grounds an unfair percentage of time and money is always devoted to seeds, plants and shrubs, leaving the planting of trees to the last? asks Edward R. Parkinson in the New York Evening Post. Is it that the effective planting of them requires too much skill for the average person or because he fails to realize how much trees can be made to do for a landscape, not only in summer, but in the bleakness of early spring and the somberness of late autumn? Perhaps a closer knowledge of our native trees and those which are ours by adoption might disclose new possibilities in color combinations of which they are capable, for no one should be allowed willingly to miss these protecting and beautiful additions to the landscape without a protest.

As to the purely commercial viewpoint of a tree's value, which might appeal more forcibly perhaps to some than the artistic side, a stranger who was motoring by a friend's house last autumn stopped to admire the extraordinary number and beauty of the maple trees and acknowledged he would have no peace of mind until he secured at least one of them. It so happened that the owner had intended to move three of the younger trees to permit the more perfect development of some others, so that the stranger was lucky enough to realize his desire and paid $60 cash for one tree where it stood, in addition to $75 for moving it, thus making the total cost reach $135.

Now, had the first owner of this tree purchased it direct from the nursery when it was twelve feet high it would have cost him a comparatively insignificant sum. Another point not to be forgotten is the coolness it gives in summer and the warmth and protection in winter, while its leaves, if gathered in the autumn, make the very best compost to be obtained. But how amazingly ignorant is the average person about the many species and varieties of trees! To enjoy trees to the full one should know something of their habits and characteristics.

Bureau of Efficiency.

A bureau of efficiency and economy has been formed as an adjunct of the Portland (Ore.) chamber of commerce to have oversight of expenditures and important activities of city, school and county governments. The purposes of the bureau are to collect and promulgate information for advancing the interests of the people and through publicity to procure reforms in municipal administration.

Indiana Town to Be an Eden.

H. K. Volland, mayor, has issued a letter urging residents to plant seed in order that Columbus, Ind., may be made one big, sweet flower garden.

Mayor Volland opens his communication with reference to the garden of Eden and the gardens of Babylon and mentions the gardens of the Phoenicians, Assyrians, Greeks and Romans, likewise those of the French, Germans and Dutch.

SPRING HOUSECLEANING.

How It Can Be Made Easy by Adopting a System.

Housecleaning is no longer a thing to be dreaded. If done systematically it becomes as easy as any other household task. To clean a house systematically one must do it one room at a time, co-eds in the Kansas State Agricultural college are taught. This destroys the old custom of having the entire house upset at once, and the cleaning is more thorough than when done by the old method. The same general rules will apply to the cleaning of every room from cellar to garret.

First all small articles, including pictures, should be dusted and taken from the room or put under cover. The lighter pieces of furniture should then be removed to another room and those remaining covered. The walls and ceilings should be dusted with a special brush provided for the purpose, or with a broom covered with a soft cloth. The rugs should be taken outside and beaten or swept with wet bits of paper.

If the floor is hard wood it should be brushed with soft brush or string mop. This should be done with long, steady strokes from the corners to the center of the room. The dust should be carried out immediately. A cedar mop or string mop wet with kerosene is then used, still working from the corners to the center of the room.

After the dust settles, dust all exposed surfaces. The woodwork may be cleaned with a soft cloth, tepid water and a small amount of soap solution. The covers may then be removed from the furniture and the polished surfaces cleaned with a velvet sponge wet in tepid water and dried with a chamois skin. The rugs and small articles may then be replaced, and the room is in order with practically no disturbance to the remainder of the house.

HOW TO GROW VIOLETS IN YOUR BACK YARD.

Select a somewhat shady, well drained spot for the violet bed. Take away the top three or four inches of soil, unless it is well enriched loam, and replace it with equal parts of well rotted manure, leaf mold and thoroughly decomposed sod.

Late in April the plants may be set out. Usually plants can be obtained at a small cost from growers who are glad to thin out their beds. Put them six to eight inches apart each way. They must have plenty of water all summer. In the early fall put a cold frame over the bed. Cover the plants with straw or leaves after the first hard freeze and do not let them thaw. Then put the wooden shutters over the top of the frame. When thawing commences, in February or March, the wooden shutters should be replaced with glass ones. In the warm part of the day keep the shutters raised a little to let in the air. Never allow the plants to freeze again after they have started to grow.

By FRANK KOESTER, author of "Modern City Planning and Maintenance," etc.

Electric traction has superseded both the cable and horse car road. It has made surface travel as speedy as is consistent with safety, and it has enabled business to be concentrated in the centers of cities and homes to be located in the outlying districts. Electric traction has in a few decades released the city from the bondage of slow transportation and has stimulated urban growth in a way that would never have been possible under other conditions.

The only rival of electric traction is the automobile, for the most part a gasoline engine driven vehicle. In the form of coaches or busses it is used to a great extent in London and to a lesser degree in other cities, but it seems quite unlikely that it will ever become a serious rival of electric traction in the form of cars on rails.

As a civic problem, therefore, transportation reduces itself to the best method of laying out street car routes and the proper regulation of vehicular traffic.

The transportation system of a city should be so arranged as to furnish as direct a means of transportation as can be obtained from every point in the city to every other point at a single fare and to furnish ample facilities without congestion.

A highly desirable object in the transportation system of a city is to have the cars reasonably filled at all times, since this reduces the cost. In cities in which the residential districts are at one end and the business and manufacturing districts at another this cannot be accomplished, as the cars must run empty away from the business districts in the morning and empty toward them in the afternoon. If, however, the business district is in the center of the city the street car traffic may be arranged to much better advantage, as routes of cars may be laid out to traverse the city from end to end, passing through the business districts or transferring to lines that do.

One of the best systems of transfers is that in which a loop or belt line runs around and just outside of the civic center, with all cars passing over the loop or portions of it and transferring to all other cars. For example, in a city laid out on the radial plan eight lines double tracked will serve to traverse sixteen of the radial avenues, each line on reaching the loop passing around half of it in a semicircle and continuing on out the radial avenue directly opposite the one by which it entered the loop. Each line would thus have seven transfer points, from each of which the passengers could proceed in either direction over the seven other lines covering the other fourteen radial avenues. A number of transfer points serve to distribute the traffic with less congestion than if the transfers were all done at a single point.

If the traffic of the city is heavy it is advisable to have the loop constituted of several sets of tracks in parallel in order that the cars of the different lines will not be subject to delay by those of others. An example of the necessity of ample loop facilities is seen in the Brooklyn bridge terminal in New York, where eight loops are needed to handle the cars which stream across the bridge over a single track.

In connection with such a system of radiating car lines or lines intersecting at the center of the city, circumferential or belt lines at different distances from the center of the city, transferring to all the lines intersected, will serve to make the transportation facilities complete.

HOW

To Make Shabby or Old Furniture Look New

OLD furniture looks shabby in the spring, when almost everything else is fresh and clean, but it can be made like new with the expenditure of a little time and money.

First the old finish must be taken off the furniture. This may be done with a varnish remover, which may be purchased at a hardware store. Two quarts will remove the varnish from all the furniture in the average living room. This remover should be applied with a brush or a cloth and allowed to stand for a few minutes. It must then be rubbed or scraped off. After this the scraper should be used until the wood is reached, because a varnish will not take a stain.

If the wood is an open grain piece, such as chestnut, walnut or oak, a filler must be used to make a smooth surface. This may be bought or prepared at home. The formula for the preparation is as follows: One pound of cornstarch and three-fourths pint of boiled linseed oil or turpentine colored with burned umber or lampblack. After the stain and the filler have been applied, the wood may be covered with a floor or furniture varnish or a wax. If a wax finish is desired the stain should be put on and allowed to stand until the next day, when the wax or varnish may be applied. Wax is the preferable finish since it does not gather up the dust particles so readily as the varnish and is more easily applied.

Sure of a Job.

It was a new kind of a recommendation for a servant, but very effective. The old employer said nothing about her accomplishments as cook, waitress, laundress or chambermaid. What she wrote was:

"She is as strong as a man and twice as brave. Three times while in our employ she captured burglars single handed and held them until the police arrived and saved hundreds of dollars' worth of silver and jewelry."

All the manager of the employment agency had to do when that girl needed a situation was to read that letter out loud, and there ensued a wild scramble among his customers for the strong fisted maid.—Pittsburgh Press.

She Owed Her One.

How to Select a Desirable Fishing Line For Reels.

For a line one of the many splendid braided silk casting lines is the most desirable, but the hard braided brand must also be given some consideration, since the softer silk has a tendency to swell and stick to the rod when wet. Enameled lines, which are indispensable to the fly caster, are not suited for free reel casting, where the requirements demand a line that will run freely and smoothly.

How to Remove the Stain of Mildew From Cottons.

Mildew may be removed with salts of lemon solution, using either the crystals or powdered salts. Chloride of lime will also take it out, but care must be exercised not to burn the material. Directions for using on can.

Prayer Too Often is Made of Devout Words, Says Dr. Peacock

After resting one day from preaching three sermons on Sunday, Evangelist Peacock greeted an audience in the tabernacle this afternoon looking in the pink of condition. Why prayers are not always answered is a perturbing question to many Christians and the Evangelist was ready to relieve the minds of his audience. His sermon follows:

James 5:16. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much.

Are all the prayers going up to the throne of God answered? Does every prayer have power with God? If all the prayers are not answered, why are they not answered? And if every prayer does not have power with God, why does it not have power with God? I think there are many prayers and petitions which have no power with God. We are told in the Bible that we shall receive nothing if we ask amiss. God and His Son have encouraged His people to pray. In John 15:7, Jesus says: "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ask whatsoever ye will, and it shall be done unto you." And in James 5:16 we read, "The supplication of a righteous man availeth much in it's working." Elijah was a man of like passions with us. and he prayed fervently that it might not rain and it rained not upon the earth three years and six months. And he prayed again and the heavens gave rain, and the earth brought forth her fruit." This explains to us why some prayers have more power with God than others. All prayers are not answered, and every prayer does not have power with God. And the reason all prayers are not answered, and the reason all prayers do not have power with God is because there is a vast difference between true prayer and the mere repetition of devout words. True prayer is a deeper and stronger thing than the mere repetition of devout words. It is a believing soul's direct converse with God. Philip Brooks condensed it in to five words: "A true wish sent Godward." And this true wish draws us nearer to God. God understands prayer much better than any other person. And if we come to God in prayer when we are not really abiding in Jesus and have not Christ's words abiding in us, we need not anticipate an answer to our requests. "Delight thyself in God," says the psalmist, "and He shall give thee the desires of they heart." This is the rst characteristic of successful or effecthal prayer. I think one reason our prayers are not answered isb ecause they are selfish. We pray for things we do not really need. If God would give us the things we desire and ask for they would become a curse instead of a blessing. Sometimes we have a tendency to dictate to the Almighty, or command God to give us certain blessings. Now, in order to receive the blessing, we must have the right spirit toward our Heavenly Father. Dr. Cuyler says: "When a soul feels such an entire submissiveness toward God, that he delights in seeing Him reign, and His glory advanced, it may confidently form out it's desires, for the desires of God, and the desires of that humble submissive soul will agree. God loves to give to them who love to let Him have His way. They find their own happiness in the chime of their own happiness in the will of God. You remember the request made by James and John. One desired to sit on the right hand and the other on the left, in the Kingdom of God. This was a selfish request, and so long as these selfseeking disciples were seeking their own glory Jesus refused to grant their requests. But, after thye had been baptised with the Holy Spirit, everything was different. They poured out their souls to God, and God answered their prayers. It was John who said: 'If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ask whatsoever you will and it shall be done unto you." Just as soon as James and John found their supreme joy in serving God, their prayers were answered. If we are praying for something that will crown us with glory and honor we need not expect God to give us what we ask for. But if on the other hand we are willing to give God the glory, the victory will come. If we pray for a revival of religion in our churches, or in the community, simply to give us a name, we will be disappointed. If a minister should pray for converts simply to glorify himself, I do not think God would give him any converts. Such a prayer would not have power with God, because Jesus would be shut out of it.

Bishop Huges says: "We are often guilty of spiritual forgery.' We sign Christs name to prayers when our own names alone should be written. We ask for business prosperity in His name when we want it in our own name. We ask for victory along certain lines in the name of Christ when we simply want the glory ourselves. This is not effectual praying, and it will not avail much in it's workings. Now, in order that our prayers may be effectual, we must aim at the mark all the time, and know what we are after. This is where a good many of us fail. There is a story that comes from the fishing coast neighborhood that is calculated to emphasize the duty and propriety of absolute directness in prayer. When we pray we are not called upon to deliver theological addresse to the Lord, nor to make a full confession on all points of religious belief, nor give information as to the condition and prospects of all church and missionary enterprises. We are rather by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, to let our requests be made known unto God. If the whole church should come together at one time, and in one place, and unite earnestly, everyone, in praying for revival, there would surely be an answer from God, sending the revival.

At this fishing station I have mentioned, there was great concern, amounting almost to distress, for the season had almost half passed, and the fish, upon which thep eople depended for a living, had not appeared. Weeks had passed and now there was only one topic of conversation. All hearts were filled with anxiety. Some proposed a special day of prayer to God. The day of prayer was appointed, and at the hour agreed on, the people gathered in the humble church to pray. The minister read some passages of scripture to stimulate and strengthen their faith, and stated they had come together at that time to ask the Lord to send the fish to their coast, as in other years. He then called on one of the good men to lead in prayer. The man began by praying for everything under the sun but fish. The minister interrupted him by saying: "My dear brother, that is all very good, but we are here today to pray for fish." The people were very much in earnest, and one after another prayed directly for what they wanted. Some would wander and when they did the minister would remind them that they were praying for one thing. And while they were praying, word reached them that the fish had come, and it was the best season they ever had. How are we praying? I fear we are not keeping to the subject. We think we are called upon to pray for everything under the sum before coming to the thing we really want and desire God to give us. This is where we fail. I have often noticed when you ask people to pray for souls they pray for everything but souls and forget all about souls. John Knox prayed in this direct way. He prayed for men and women to be saved. He said: "Lord, Give me Scotland or I die." This is the way the little boy prayed for his father. It was this way the one hundred twenty prayed in the upper room. They reached the heart of God, and God gave them the blessing. Now my friends, if we really want the blessing God will give it. But we must make God realize we are after a certain thing. When we go into a store or shop, we make known our wants and the clerks do all they can to help supply our wants. The trouble with so many people is that they have no directness about them. We travel all over the world, and fail to tell the Lord what we want. Such prayers can never be effectual in the sight of God. Roland Hill once said: "I like short, ejaculatory, prayer. It reaches Heaven before the devil can get a shot at it." I think another reason many of our prayers are not answer-

AUTO DELIVERY SERVICE, MAY 1

Along with other advances made by the merchants of this city comes the announcement of a delivery system cooperative in nature which is designed to supplant the individually owned horses and wagons owned and run by market men especially.

Many months ago the idea of establishing the cooperative system of making deliveries of meats and groceries was presented to Mr. J. R. Brannan, in the employ of Dann & Sons, and since then the plan has been kept alive by means of intervews with the merchants who could be interested. Mr. Brannan now has the satisfaction of knowing that the plan will be given sufficient impetus to make it successful hence, he will on May 1st introduce to the people of Fulton the automobile delivery system which has been hoped for and looked for these many years.

NAVY RECRUITING OFFICER LOOKING FOR NEW'UNS

The city was visited today by one of Uncle Samuel's hale, hearty and well met seamen, in the person of Frederick Heim, Master-at-Arms, First Class, now stationed at the Navy recruiting office, 305 McCarty Building, Syracuse.

In addition to distributing literature setting forth the advantages to young men in the Navy, Officer Heim tried to interview as many former enlisted men as possible, to learn their views upon a topic absorbing the attention of the people right now—that of the formation of a Naval Reserve, which would include men married and unmarried who have served enlistments in the sea-going branch of the service. Officer Heim proposes to make monthly trips to this city until his object is attained.

SULLIVAN DEPARTMENT STORE IMPROVEMENTS

Mr. J. R. Sullivan, of West Broadway, has long contemplated making extensive improvements to his place of business. The work has now begun in dead earnest and when completed the store will present an appearance as nifty as the best in the cities. Instead of the old-fashioned entrance and high-from-the-ground show windows there will be a new receding doorway made wider than at present and windows that will reach quite close to the new concrete sidewalk to be built when the alterations are completed.

THE QUIRK TODAY

"Merely Mary Ann," Israel Zangwill's stage drama, which has been produced in photoplay by William Fox, gives an expose of the nefarious trade of the cadet as practised in the world's largest cities. The play deals with Mary Ann, a country girl who goes to work in a city boarding house and who is subjected to the loathsome attentions of Sid, dance hall habitue and cadet.

In the photoplay, to preserve the unities, Mary Ann escapes from her conscienceless tormentor. In real life, however, there are only too many thousands of cases which end differently. Concentrated attack on capitalized vice has recently been begun in various cities; hence, "Merely Mary Ann" is a peculiarly timely production.

WILLIAM J. BRADFORD announces that he has leased his sand and gravel bed to Thomas E. Mitchell and he will be pleased to have his former customers extend their patronage to Mr. Mitchell.

INHERITANCE TAX $11,175 ON ESTATE

Oswego —Surrogate Miller heard the application yesterday of Attorney Hillick in the estate of Helen L. Danenhower. Mr. Hillick acted for for the State Comptroller and E. B. Powell.

The distribution and tax of each portion follows: Bellen D. Williams, $31,862, tax $1,543.10; Ruth Danenhower, $298,638.07, tax $5,372.76; Sloan Danenhower, $128,171, tar $1,965.26; Ethel Beardsley Danenhower, $125,624, tax $1,982.48. Remainder to children, $45,153, tax $401.53.

Ellen E. Noda, a daughter, asked for letters of administration on the estate of Richard Noda, who died on April 17th. The value is given as $2,400 personal and $4,000 real and the petition says there are no claims nor debts except funeral expenses.

Earl S. Brown, asked for letters on the estate of Mary Stafford Hubbard, who died on February 16th, two sisters and two brothers filing waivers. The value is given as $60 personal. Besides the heirs at law mentioned, the petition states that "no other persons are interested except James G. Hubbard, whom it is claimed was the husband of the deceased, but who denies that he was."

Robert C. Jones, as administrator of the will annexed of David Wright, asked for sitation on final settlement. His account shows receipts of $4,701.26 and debts and expenses of $879.26, leaving $3,822 for the heirs.

H. J. Wilson and R. J. Pendergast, were appointed appraisers of the estate of Bridget Gibbons and on order was made directing the County Treasurer to fix the amount of the inheritance tax.

An account of James G. Riggs, as executor of Elizabeth Suicer Riggs, was ordered settled as filed. It shows receipts of $12,652 in mortgages, stocks and bonds.

Nellie Jones asked for letters on the estate of David Nashult, her father, late of West Monroe. He left $1,000 personal to three daughters, a son Leonard getting only $5.

Letters were asked on the estate of Eunice Shepard, Hannibal, who left $250 personal and $800 real.

P. S. COMMISSION WILL DELVE INTO PHONE RATES

Albany—The up-state Public Service Commission has announced that it will conduct an investigation of the short term contracts and contracts terminated before expiration in force by the various telephone corporations throughout the state. May 10 has been set for thefi rst hearing in the matter. From time to time complaint has been made to the Commission by telephone subscribers in various parts of the state against charges for telephone service for less than a year, such as service at summer homes, and as to the penalty exacted by the companies when contracts made for the year are cancelled in less than that time. The last of these came from New Rochelle and at that time the Commission, in dismissing the complaint, made a promise of an early investigation of the whole matter, which promise is now being fulfilled.

PRAYER, TODAY'S SERMON THEME

ed is because we do not comply with the conditions. When we desire to send a letter to a friend, we put the correct address and a stamp on the envelope. If we do not do this, the letter is held in the office, or else is sent to the dead letter office. I believe many prayers go to the dead prayer office. And thousands of well worded petitions never reach God. We are not willing to meet the conditions and so long as we are not willing to meet the conditions we cannot expect to receive the blessing. We must do our part if we expect God to do His. We should do our utmost to help God answer our prayers. Some people cannot get a message through because something has fallen across the wires. It may be some kind of sin. Then we are indifferent only when we want a special blessing. We must be in earnest all the time.

Len Broughten tells of a boy who was brought up in his church in Atlanta, Georgia. They oung man, who was the son of a poor washer-woman, worked his way through school and through seminary. He was preaching in the north for a time, and went home to Atlanta on a visit. When Broughten found out the boy was there he went around to see him and asked him if he would preach for him on the following Sunday. After much persuasion the boy consented. The news got abroad in some way, and on Sabbath morning when Broughten was entering his church he met one of his deacons coming out. He spoke and asked the deacon where he was going. The deacon replied that "the hour was wasted with 'that fool boy.'" He was going over to hear Dr. So-and-So. When Broughten reached the platform where he expected to find the boy he was much chagrined to find that the boy was not there. At about eleven o'clock Broughten went into his study thinking the young man might be there. When he opened the door he found the young man on his face before God pleading for power to preach the Gospel. Broughten says: "I didn't try to keep back the tears. I got down beside the boy and cried and wept with him, and when he was ready to preach he had such wonderful power that fourteen of his old "cronies" came forward at the close of the sermon and accepted Christ as their personal Savior." When Broughten was leaving the church he was met by the deacon who had returned in time to hear the close of the boys sermon and to see the men and boys taking their stand for Christ. The deacon said, "Broughten, Where did that boy get his power?" Broughten looked at the deacon and said: "Where you will have to get yours, deacon on his face before God."

KING—RICKERT

The marriage of Mr. Homer W. King, of Minetto, formerly of Fulton, and Miss Anna E. Rickert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Rickert of Bundy's Crossing, took place Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The ceremony was performed at the Rectory of St. Peter's church, Oswego, by the Rev. Father Heisler. The bride was attended by her aunt, Miss Tillie Snyder of Oswego, and the groom by his cousin, Francis C. Hill of Fulton.

Following the ceremony the bridal party motored to the home of the happy couple in Minetto where a dainty luncheon was served.

DISCUSS BELGIUM.

Von Bethmann-Hollweg Favors a New Kingdom.

CANAL PROPOSAL IS MADE.

Among Number of Plans Talked of In Regard to Future Relations Between Germany and Belgium Is a Channel From Rhine to Antwerp.

Berlin.—"After the war there must be a new Belgium."

This statement, made by the imperial German chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, in a recent speech before the reichstag, directs the interest of those who are following the trend of the German press to a number of plans discussed of late by the editors in the fatherland with regard to the future relations between Germany and Belgium.

The suggestion of a tariff union with the little kingdom now occupied by the kaiser's troops has been a popular topic of discussion in the press of Germany.

VON BETHMANN-HOLLWEG.

Among other projects on this subject suggested is one by J. Rosemeyer of Koeln-Lindenthal, a prominent engineer.

Herr Rosemeyer's idea, based on the ancient principle, "Navigare necesse est," is to create a new mouth of the Rhine by connecting that river with Antwerp, Belgium's great seaport, and Zeebrugge, the little town on Belgium's coast which now serves the Germans as a submarine base.

In a lengthy article which has been reprinted in many of the foremost pan-German organs he points out that such a "Rhine-west canal" would be welcomed by Holland. For the canal under his plan is to lead through Holland via Sittard, through Dutch Limburg and would thus be of great service in expanding not only German but also Belgian and Dutch commerce.

The distance from Cologne, on the Rhine, to Antwerp by way of the new canal would be, Herr Rosemeyer figures, 130 miles, while that from Duisburg to Antwerp would be about 122 miles. The former distance could be covered in seventy-four, the latter in seventy-one hours.

The total length of the proposed canal is figured at about 152 miles, and the total cost of construction is estimated at 314,000,000 marks, or $78,500,000.

CENSORS CO-ED GOWNS.

Some University Girls Were Sent Back to Change Dance Attire.

Bloomington, Ind.—The Indiana university authorities have established a censorship of clothes worn by the "co-eds."

The censorship is in charge of Miss Ruby E. C. Mason, dean of women, who is attending all dances and inspecting the frocks and gowns. If the evening gowns of the girls do not conform to regulations as to length and style the wearers are sent back to their rooms for a change of attire. This has happened to several young women recently.

The censorship is established because of the loyalty of the Indiana "co-eds" to the prevailing styles, especially in dancing frocks. The frocks have been cut so low from the chin and so high from the ground that they have been shocking to some, the university authorities say, all during the winter.

CATCHES STRANGE BEAST.

Looks Like a Fox and Climbs to Top of Trees.

Albert Lea, Minn. — A new and strange animal was discovered in Bancroft township by Emil Halvorson, who was hunting.

It appeared larger than a fox and when pursued jumped about the trunk of a tree and was soon in the topmost branches. Later in the day another of the species was captured.

The animal resembles a fox, has light red fur about the neck and head, but the rest of the fur is light gray, with a jet black stripe down the back. It is thought the animal is a hybrid or else has strayed here from its native haunts.

help the "city beautiful" campaign. All trash, leaves, papers, rags, tin cans, bottles, broken household utensils, old clothing and any other rubbish that may have accumulated will be hauled away in wagons provided by the Chamber of Commerce. Ashes and other material will be used to fill up the low places on vacant lots.

It is anticipated that Fulton people in general will respond to the call to arms foro a clean city, as every intelligent person enjoys cleanliness, not alone in his own door yard, but that of his neighbor as well. If anyone fails to join in the movement it will undoubtedly be because he doesn't understand. However, in anticipation of this it is arranged that such a person will at once have the situation explained clearly; diagrams may be used if necessary. Accelerated action is advisable when the opening gun of the campaign is fired on May 8th.

The next meeting of the chairmen of the women's committee will be held with Miss Thayer, general chairman, on May 1. In the meantime the chairman of each of the six wards will hold a series of Clean-Up conferences in their respective wards.

Aside from obtaining the final result, a clean city, the campaign is a healthy, happy, wholesome idea, and cannot fail to serve as a stepping stone to even greater things for our city.

CHANGES PROSPOSED IN TARIFF BILL

New York—Minor changes in the Rainey bill, appointing a permanent tariff commission, are proposed by a committee of the Merchants' Association. The committee report approved the bill, declaring it embodied all the essential features such a bill should contain.

The changes proposed are Section 5, last line to be altered to read "including dumping and cost of production," and section 7 to be altered to read "any document properly pertinent to the subject of investigation." This later is intended to protect persons who believe that a demand for a document is made for an improper purpose, and gives them the right to withhold the document and appeal to the courts.

The committee also urged that the salaries of the commissioners be $12,000 instead of $10,000, and that the full term be reduced from twelve to ten years.

Atlanta, Ga.—In a recent contest in which a prize was offered by the American Genetic Association for the largest shade tree in the United States the chief contestant from Georgia was a sassafras tree seven feet around. The prize was won by a valley oak in California, 27 feet 6 inches in circumference and 126 feet high.

The largest living elm is at Wethersfield, Conn, 28 feet in circumference and 100 feet high. It is estimated to be 250 years old. A chestnut in North Carolina is 33 feet, 4 inches; a white birch in Massachusetts, 12 feet 6 inches; a pecan in Louisiana, 19 feet 6 inches, and a catalpa in Arkansas, 16 feet. The tallest tree found was a yellow popular in North Carolina, which is 198 feet high.

BOWSER'S SIDE OF IT

He Avers That Mrs. Bowser Has Also Made Mistakes.

By M. QUAD.

Copyright, 1915, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Readers of the Bowser sketches cannot have helped but notice that Mrs. Bowser always twists everything around so as to appear one of the smartest women in the land, while I am held up to scorn and contempt as a faddist and an incompetent. I have stood this as long as I shall stand it. Mrs. Bowser is a very good woman, but I shall not longer allow her to boost herself up at my expense. If I have made mistakes she is also guilty of the same thing and should share the blame with me. She has related in these sketches thousands of my blunders, but I shall content myself at present with relating only a few of hers.

One evening last fall as we sat enjoying our home life I observed that I must soon see about the winter's supply of coal for the furnace. She replied that I was an overworked man and that it was her duty as a wife to take all the burdens off my shoulders she could. I needn't bother about the coal, for one thing. She would not have me strain my voice at the telephone for fear of producing some lasting injury to my vocal cords. I might go right along in peace and contentment and on the morrow she would order the coal. She looked at me so lovingly and her attitude was so confident that I left the business to her.

I shall not state that I expected she would blunder about it, but between you and me I looked for some calamity. On the next morning as soon as I left the house she got into communication with our coal man and asked him over the telephone;

"I HAVE BEEN A HOUSE PAINTER FOR OVER TWENTY YEARS."

"You have got coal, I presume?"

"We have kept coal for twenty-eight years," was the reply.

"Then I want five tons of it."

"Very well, madam. It shall be up today."

That was just like a woman—just like Mrs. Bowser. There are about a dozen different brands of coal. She did not specify whether we wanted it for the range or the furnace or a steam boiler, and as a consequence five tons of pea coal came up. Pea coal is the smallest size, you know, and will almost sift through a pepper box. The men had deposited half of it in the bins when she discovered her mistake. That pea coal would last about as long in the furnace as so much sawdust, and it cost her $4 in cash to have it reloaded and taken back to the yards, and she paid the money out of her weekly allowance and bribed the cook with a new pair of stockings to say nothing to me.

And again. When she tells me that we are out of butter I go over to the grocer and say to the swindler who runs the concern:

"Look here, Brown; I want five pounds of butter."

"Yes, sir."

"I want butter instead of lard, wagon grease or margarine."

"Yes, sir."

"I don't want to find any coat buttons, peach stones or vest buckles in it. I want good creamery butter and less than a hundred years old. If you attempt to swindle me I will make Rome howl around this old shebang. You know me, sir. My name is Bowser. I am a desperate and dangerous man!"

And wouldn't he have sent me the sweetest, nicest, slickest, juiciest five pounds of butter that two horn cows ever produced on this grassy globe? Sure he would.

And what did Mrs. Bowser do? She waited until she saw a farmer driving past on our street. Farmers occasionally come our way to dispose of their products. She rushed to the door and called to this farmer, and when he had come up the steps she asked in the gentle tones of an angel if it so happened that he had a crock of butter which he would be so kind and courteous as to sell to her for 2 cents over the market price. Yes, sir, that's just what she did instead of calling him a fraud and a robber to show him that he could not be deceived. The farmer replied that he had such a crock and it was such butter as had never been offered for sale in the city before. He brought in the crock. It looked good to Mrs. Bowser. Because it looked good on the surface she made no investigation. Because the farmer looked child like and innocent she did not doubt his word. She bought that crock and paid cash down for it, and all day long she was smiling and chuckling and thinking of how she would boast to me of her bargain.

Some butter was wanted for dinner, and the crock had been brought out and a nice chunk lifted up just as I came in. I could not help but see it. I must have been stone deaf not to hear the gasps of surprise and chagrin uttered by Mrs. Bowser and the cook. About two inches of nice looking butter had been spread on top of a crock almost full of dirt, and Mrs. Bowser had been made a victim of a bold faced villain. He had never been on our street before and didn't intend to ever drive there again.

Did I use sarcastic words then to Mrs. Bowser? Did I say that she ought to have known better? Did I say that it served her just right? No! No, I did not even look sarcastic at her and had not a single word to say. We had no butter for dinner, but not a kick from me, and Mrs. Bowser has never mentioned this incident in print, but on the contrary every time I brought home a dozen eggs, and she has found a bad one in the lot, she has told of my utter failure as a business man.

And speaking of eggs reminds me of an occasion when she asked me, in a soft, bland voice, why I didn't buy them at wholesale instead of retail. I replied like any conservative husband would have done, that I would think the startling suggestion over for awhile, but she could not be content. She was in our family grocery when the grocer offered a crate of twelve dozen eggs at wholesale price. She did not ask if he would warrant them fresh eggs, but closed the bargain at once and was very proud of her economy.

Mrs. Bowser wanted to make an egg omelet for dinner, and the first nine eggs out of that crate proved to be bad ones. Out of the twelve dozen eggs she found later on about three dozen good ones—that is, they were not so bad but what they could be forced down the throat. Now, then, how would I have proceeded to buy twelve dozen eggs? I would have entered that grocery and said to the swindler who runs it:

"I want to buy a crate of eggs at wholesale. I want them for 10 cents a dozen less than retail price. I want every egg to be as fresh as the summer dew on a pumpkin vine. If there is a bad egg among them, or a shortage in the count, I will come in here and work such destruction in this old shanty of yours that you will have to go into bankruptcy inside of an hour. Don't think you can swindle me, you old hyena. I am up to the games you practice on innocent customers! Twelve dozen eggs, sir, and every one of them a fresh egg!"

And wouldn't every egg have been fresh, and wouldn't I have saved a dollar or more where Mrs. Bowser lost two or three? Of course I would—of course. And has Mrs. Bowser ever told the public of the swindle in eggs? She has not even hinted it that such a thing occurred, and she never will.

One evening not so long ago she observed that our front steps needed repainting and that she wished I would employ a painter to do the job. I was about to declare that I would do it myself and thereby save $100, when she swished off on some other subject and shut me up. On the next day when a big tramp came along and begged for something to eat she asked him if he had ever done any painting.

"I have been a house painter for over twenty years," was his reply.

"How much will you ask to paint the front steps?"

"Only $3, ma'am, if you will furnish the paint. I wouldn't do it for any one else for less than $7."

We had five or six different kinds of paint down cellar, and Mrs. Bowser brought them up and mixed them altogether. There was no oil to thin them down, and so she poured in a pint of kerosene. The cook said that oil of some kind was highly necessary, and so she emptied a bottle of castor oil in on top of the kerosene, and the tramp went to work.

Were those steps when finished a thing of beauty and a joy forever? Not hardly—not as you could perceive. There were streaks of green and red and purple and lead color and white. There were spots of oil here and there. There were spots of the old paint showing through the fresh coat. They were variegated front steps. They were such as no house ever had before. This incident occurred days and days ago, but the steps have not been in use since, and they may not be for years and years to come.

The tramp had got his money and gone when I reached home, but a crowd still lingered in front of the house. I borrowed a ladder and climbed up to the chamber window to get in and found Mrs. Bowser mentally perturbed. But did I say anything to add to her sufferings? Not one single word. In fact, I patted her on the back and told her this was a good world to live in. She made the most of it when I bought a dozen hens and none of them laid an egg. But did I try to avenge on her when those steps were painted? Not a try!

I am still entering and leaving my house by way of the ladder and the window. But am I saying or doing anything to humiliate Mrs. Bowser? Not a thing. On the contrary, I am saying that she is a nice woman—a very nice woman—and I don't see how I could get along without her. She has her faults, as we all have, but I can excuse and overlook each and every one of them.

Running From a Fortune

By EDWARD T. STEWART

"John," said the chief of the detective bureau to which I was attached, "here is a very singular case. I have a letter from a party in London asking me to discover a man who is hiding not because he is a criminal, but because he is wanted to enter upon the possession of a fine estate."

It was indeed a singular case. Ralph Thornton, a son of John Thornton, a wealthy manufacturer of Birmingham, England, had come to America in flight from justice, or, rather, injustice. A crime had been committed which had been fixed on him. The circumstantial evidence against him was so strong that his attorney advised him to vanish. He accepted the advice and, though absolutely innocent, sailed in disguise for New York and never made known to any one in England into what part of the country he had drifted. The real criminal had been tried and convicted for another offense and had confessed that he was the guilty one in the crime of which Ralph Thornton had been accused. Ralph's father had meanwhile died and left him all his property.

The trouble in finding Thornton was that he would naturally suppose that any one looking for him would arrest him. Therefore it was necessary to approach him not by ordinary detective methods. I was furnished with a description of his person and informed that he was a university graduate and a scholarly man. I was also given the letter from London stating that he had been exonerated.

I spent a long while in finding out that he had gone to Colorado and engaged in mining there. On leaving England his father had given him £2,000, so I judged he was in fairly easy circumstances and expected to find him, if indeed I did find him, operating a mine.

Proceeding to Denver, I went from there up into the gold mining country on Clear creek, stopping at Empire, where there were a number of stamp mills. There I procured a list of all the men who had invested capital in mining interests and made inquiries concerning every one of them, satisfying myself that my man was not among them. However, I secured information of an Englishman who had been at Georgetown, farther up in the mountains, about the time Thornton came to America and who had sunk all his money in mines. He called himself Thomas Gregory.

Proceeding to Georgetown, I made inquiry for Gregory and learned that the last known of him he had turned wandering prospector. There seemed nothing to do but hunt him up, but it would be like looking for a needle in a haystack, and even if I found him I had no assurance that he was my quarry.

While considering what to do I was sitting one morning on the porch of the hotel reading a local paper. At that time the Venezuela matter with England that was handled so resolutely by President Cleveland was attracting attention, and I read in the paper an article written with a view to giving the British side. There were several Latin quotations in it, and it seemed to me rather the work of a scholar than a statesman. Without any definite object in view, I went to the office of the journal and asked who wrote the article. I was told that it had been sent in from a mining camp in the vicinity, but that was all the editor knew about it. I went to the camp and found there a man working with a pick and shovel whose appearance belied his calling. His accent was that of a well bred Englishman. He called himself Bill Anderson.

I talked about the article I had read in the Georgetown paper, condemning it bitterly as a British argument against the Monroe doctrine, watching Anderson to observe the effect my tirade had upon him. I could see that I was riling him, but he maintained silence.

"I've been told," I said, "that some one in this camp wrote that article."

Anderson shot a suspicious glance at me.

"Whoever wrote it is a university man," I continued. "Miners don't quote Latin."

Anderson turned and was stalking away through a thick growth of trees. I was not sure that he was my man, but I was sure he wished to escape me. I feared that if I let him go I might not get him again. It would be impossible to get in the fact that I wanted him for his advantage. I must take him by proceeding as if he were a criminal.

"You! Anderson!" I shouted. "I want you."

He turned, drew a revolver from his hip and fired at me, the bullet singing near my ear, then turned and ran like a deer. I followed him and saw him go into a cabin. I called to the others who were following me to help me capture him without bloodshed. They consented to surround the cabin on condition that I would make good my claim to him under the law. I promised. When the circle had been completed I sent one of the men to him with the letter that had been received from England. Then I waited to learn if I had the right or the wrong man.

Presently the two came out of the cabin, Anderson's, or, rather, Thornton's, face aglow with a pleasurable excitement. He advanced to me with a "Thank God I missed you," extended his hand and acknowledged himself to be Ralph Thornton.

He went east with me and sailed on the next steamer for England.

bination. The suit pictured is of a wide weave made to replace winter corduroys. Patch pockets, a stringy belt and beautiful silk tassels are smart details.

YOUR WINDOW BOX.

Begonias Are Easily Grown, and Ferns Are of Permanent Beauty.

Begonias are admirable plants for growing in window boxes. The foliage of all begonias is attractive, but especially so are the beautifully marked leaves of the Rex variety. The beefsteak, Gloire de Lorraine and other varieties may be expected to grow well and to flower under the conditions that suit the vines already described, says the department of agriculture.

Ferns in variety are available for the window box and may be selected at any florist's to suit the taste of the grower, but dwarf varieties are better suited for the room available. Ferns may be grown with begonias satisfactorily. Both require a temperature lower than the average living room.

Coleus is another group of plants that may be grown in a window box, but they must have sun. The leaves of these plants have a wide range of color and marking as well as of size and shape. They must have a warmer atmosphere than the plants already mentioned, a temperature of 55 degrees to 60 degrees at night being desirable. The mealy bug is often quite troublesome on coleus.

For an upright plant growing a foot or eighteen inches high aspidistra is satisfactory. The leaves of this plant grow in somewhat the same manner as garden flags, but there are varieties with variegated leaves as well as those with green leaves.

How to Transfer.

Here are suggestions for transferring the pattern before you to any material.

Perhaps the easiest way is the "windowpane" method. This is successful when the material is thin, like linen, batiste, etc. Pin the sheet of paper and the material together and hold them up against the glass of a window. With a sharp pencil draw on the material the design, which can be easily seen through the goods. If one-half of the design only be given unpin the paper and turn the other side to the fabric.

If you have carbon paper you should place the sheet between the fabric and the newspaper. The latter is on top. With a sharp pencil go over the outline of the design. The impression will be left in fine lines and will last until worked.

Vegetable Cutlets.

Boil six large potatoes, mash them, add butter, seasoning and enough hot milk to moisten. Chop fine three button onions, fry in butter to light brown. Wash, peel and scrape and boil separately twelve small carrots and four small white turnips. Chop and add with the onions to the potato. Season to taste, add a little minced parsley and cool. Mold into small cutlets, dip in beaten egg, then powdered cracker crumbs. Fry to a golden brown in boiling fat.

The Co-operative Plan

A Farmer Tries It on an Auto

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

I was driving across the country with a horse and buggy when I came to the wreck of an auto in the ditch, and a farmer was tinkering at it. He had a sledge, crowbar, an ax, a cold chisel and a screwdriver and had worked up a nice little state of perspiration.

"You appear to have a wreck here," I said as I drew in my horse.

"Appear!" he shouted as he looked up. "If this isn't the durndest wreck anybody ever saw I'll eat my hat!"

"How did it happen?"

"How does anything happen to an auto with a fool driving it?"

"Was it yours?" I asked, scenting a story.

"One-fifth of her was mine up to last night. Now the whole sad remains belong to me. Did you ever hear of the co-operative plan among farmers?"

"Lots of times."

"Waal, then, this was co-operation in buyin' and runnin' an automobile, and this is one of the results of it. The other result is that I am about $300 out of pocket and have lost a widder who was goin' to be my wife. If you want to hear all about it I'll tell you, for I guess it hain't any use to tinker any more at this blamed old thing."

The farmer took a seat on the mortal remains of the auto and drew a long breath and proceeded to say:

"There was Tom Evans, Joe Baxter, Jim Williams and Si Perkins. They are all farmers and live about here. They are all married men, and each one has a gang of children. As for me, I am an old bachelor, but I was a-sparkin' of the nicest widder woman in this county. The four men I have mentioned come over to my house one evenin' a month ago, and Tom Evans he asks if I would go in with 'em on the co-operative plan to buy an auto.

"'How much?' says I.

"'A thousand,' says he.

"'That's $250 each.'

"'Jest so, Sam.'

"And the auto was bought?" I queried.

"She was, sir. She arrived here glistenin' like a star, and she excited the wonder of folks for ten miles around. We got a feller from town to show us how to run her, and in about a week we was all ready to glide around the country. Bein' I was a single man and mightily in love with a widder, they said I might take the auto out first, which was very decent of them. I felt sure I could run the machine as good as any man in the state. It was a bright moonlight night, and the whippoorwills were singin' and the katydids chirpin', and that widder woman should promise to be mine before we returned."

"And did she?" was asked as the farmer heaved a long sigh.

"She didn't, stranger, and I'll tell you why. We had gone about a mile as steady as an old horse when the auto shied at a stone in the road, ran through a rail fence, wrecked the auto, and the widow gave me fits."

"It gets interesting," I said.

"Kinder interestin', stranger—kinder so. We got a machinist to tinker $20 worth of tinker, and the old machine could run again. Then it was Tom's turn. He has a wife and five children, and they all piled in. They was clippin' along as happy as larks when they came to a crossroad. The auto was for keepin' straight ahead, Tom wanted to turn to the right and his wife to the left, and the result was that the machine run into and knocked over the guidepost and then tried to climb a fence. The whole family took a spill and was scattered for twenty rods around. No one was killed, and there was no broken bones, but the bruises are yet blue, and Tom still walks bent over like an old man on account of the jar to his spine. By this time we had all got skeery of the machine; but, it bein' now Jim's turn and he not wantin' to be called a coward, he took out his family for a promenade. As the other accidents had occurred at night, Jim went out in the afternoon. He thought there might be somethin' in the night air that affected the old critter. There was seven in the family, and they was climbin' the hill beyond the red ridge when all to once the auto gave a snort and stopped in her tracks.

"'What's the matter?' asked Jim's wife.

"'Durned if I know, but she's got to go!' he answers.

"And she did go, sir—she went backwards. There was screamin' and yellin' and swearin', and Joe's wife slapped his face, but nothin' did any good. That auto kept on goin' backwards until it dumped them all in the river, which was about three feet deep at that time. They was shook up and bruised and half drowned, but they were lucky for all that. They waded ashore and left the old auto lyin' on its back in the river."

"But you got it out again?" I asked.

"Yes. We had to," was the reply. "It was in tryin' to get the old critter home ag'in that she suddenly bolted and run into a telegraph pole and wrecked herself as you see her."

"And she won't be tinkered up again?"

"She can't be. There's nothin' left to tinker, unless the blacksmith thinks he can make five wise men out of the five fools who bought her and lost about $230 apiece. I used to think co-operation of farmers was a beautiful thing, but durn my cats if I ain't through with it!"

Lovely Waist Of Satin and Lace.

An attractive little separate waist of gray satin with underblouse of lace. A variant of the idea is taffeta used with organdy.

There is no more fashionable way of making a fancy waist than to combine satin and lace in its development. Gray has come into its own again and is being used for adorable little afternoon waists. The model shown here consists of a jumper and underblouse, lace being used for the latter. All-over lace dyed gray is attractive.

In medium size the waist requires 1⅛ yards 40-inch all-over lace and 1¼ yards 40-inch satin.

In cutting the underblouse, spread the lace open on the cutting table so that section A of the pattern may be placed upon it. Of course, the lace should be doubled (not folded) so that the underblouse will be cut in duplicate. If the collar is of lace, it can be cut at the same time, being laid on the trimming as illustrated in the cutting guide.

Next, fold the satin and arrange along the lengthwise fold first, the front, then follow with the back. If a collar of satin is preferred to the one of lace, provision is made for cutting it on a lengthwise fold of the satin, as shown on the cutting guide.

The long one-piece sleeves are pointed at the lower edge, but provision is also made for another dainty finish by gathering them to narrow bands of satin, with a self-frill along the lower edge of the band.

There are also many dainty ways of finishing the neck of these separate waists. The narrow band of velvet either at the top or the base of the collar is one of the most effective touches possible to add to a blouse and it is frequently used by

This design is adaptable to development in organdy and taffeta, another extremely smart combination of the season.

EARLY BULB PLANTING.

Expert Tips About How to Manage Your Lily Bed.

Bulbs are real harbingers of spring, and there are no plants so easily grown nor so inexpensive as hyacinths, tulips or daffodils. Inside a bulb are many thickened scales, which contain enough stored food to develop the blooms. Because of this nourishment such bulbs as the hyacinth, paper white narcissus and the Chinese sacred lily may be grown in water if desired, though water contains practically no plant food. The whole growing period is supported by the food in storage.

For the same reason th... for potting bulbs needs to be loose and porous rather than rich, so that roots may easily develop. If the soil is a heavy clay it should be lightened by the addition of sand or even finely sifted coal ashes. Fresh manure must not be used. Even well rotted manure should be avoided unless it is thoroughly incorporated in the soil.

The best bulbs that can be bought are rarely too expensive. A cost of 5 or 10 cents each for bulbs is unimportant when growing plants from which you expect the best results. Tulips, daffodils and most other bulbs should be planted four to eight in a pot, but hyacinths appear best when planted singly. The pots should not be large. A little broken pottery is put over the hole in the bottom for drainage, and the pot is filled with enough soil so that when the bulbs are placed in it they will be just underneath the soil surface. A little space is left at the top of the pot for water.

After potting, the bulbs are to be watered thoroughly and placed in the dark so that they may start their roots before their tops. Most failures in bulb planting are due to a lack of attention to this simple detail.

Shad Delicacies.

Baked Shad.—Try to get a thick fish. Most dealers scale the fish for you. Remove the head and tail, split down the back and remove the backbone and the small bones along the edge. Wash in cold water, but do not allow fish to lie in the water, and dry with a piece of cheesecloth. Brush a shallow pan with one tablespoonful of drippings, lay the shad in, skin side down, sprinkle with one teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth teaspoonful of white pepper. Melt teaspoonful of butter and put over the shad, dust with a little flour and pour over one-half cupful of milk; put into a very hot oven twenty-five to thirty minutes. It should be light brown, and the hotter the oven the better the shad will be. If it browns in less than fifteen minutes reduce the heat, as it takes twenty-five to thirty minutes to bake thoroughly.

Directions For Frying Shad Roe.—Wipe the roe with damp piece of cheesecloth. Put one tablespoonful of drippings into fry pan; when hot put in the roe, cover with tin plate or lid and fry very slowly ten minutes. Remove cover and turn carefully with cake turner so as not to break the roe. Dust with salt and pepper, cover and fry for five minutes, uncover and fry light brown on both sides. Serve with lemon and garnish with parsley. Always be careful not to break the roe.

Easily First.

Teacher was impressing upon the class the importance of accurate observation. To illustrate she said, "Now each of you look around this room and tell me what is the most interesting object to you and why."

Tommy Jones was the first to raise his hand.

"Yes, Thomas, what is the most interesting object you have observed?"

"Your desk, please, miss."

"Why?"

SEPARATE SKIRT.

Style Tips About This Revived, Popular Garment.

The separate skirt is in for an excellent season. Always the outing period is favorable to the skirt of crash linen velveteen, corduroy and kindred fabrics. To these has been added recently an exceedingly fine silk jersey with a satin finish, which may be considered the skirt de luxe of the season.

If one chooses a velveteen skirt it must be of a pastel color. To wear a skirt of black velveteen for sporting purposes is to advertise oneself behind the times. The models of delicate blue pale pink, violet, canary, nile green and rose are exceedingly modish. To be sure, the white velveteen is also listed. It must be remembered that the velveteen is newer and smarter than the corduroy.

Should velveteen be considered too delicate or lacking in serviceable qualities there is the linen alternative in heavy weave and in the so called pastel or rainbow nuances. There is little attempt to drape these skirts, but the lines are very full, and many of them have pocket accessories.

For dressy purposes there are separate skirts of striped taffeta, principally in the black and white combination, or of shot taffeta, made with plaitings or ruches to go with the separate blouse of georgette crape, which may be garnished with bead embroideries or applique motifs. The black taffeta skirt will always find a place in the sartorial affections of the practical woman, and now it is much more dressy in its lines and trimmings than during the past few seasons.

One cannot omit mention of the broadly striped linens and heavy cotton fabrics that are offered in the new skirts. To say that they are striking is to put it mildly. Anything less than an inch wide for the stripe is regarded as too mild and unobtrusive to be worthy of a place on fashion's schedule.

Black and white stripes come in for approbation, but they by no means have the field to themselves.

leaves, the stems wrapped with wide white satin ribbon, while the flowing streamers with knotted ends are of a narrow matching ribbon.

Spring Housecleaning.

Shake curtains free from dust; double each curtain and baste the ends together, using strong thread and short stitches; soak in cold water, wash and starch; loosen one end of clothesline (one free from kinks) and slip it through all the curtains; replace line and pin hemmed ends straight. Do not sprinkle when dry, but press with hot iron before taking out basting.—Do not boil ecru curtains, but add coffee to last rinse water. Curtains wear better if the ends are reversed occasionally.

New China Book Ends.

Book ends are always interesting and unusual ones are sought after as gifts for all occasions. There is a new set in china which is particularly pretty. The design shows one book lying flat, its covers of dark gray, with yellow edged leaves, and another book, standing upright on the lower book, is partly open. The ends are quite heavy enough for all purposes, and the coloring of the china is particularly attractive.

Freshen Baby's Coach.

Quite often the upholstery of a baby carriage becomes faded, worn or soiled, but a new cover can be made easily. Cut a paper pattern the size and shape of back and sides of the carriage, and make a cover to fit out of white pique or a natural colored linen. Bind with a wash braid and make buttonholes along the edge. On the upholstery of the carriage sew pearl buttons and button the cover on.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

The smock is an exceedingly fashionable garment this season, being worn as generally as the ever attractive Russian blouse. This model is in blue linen and is worn with a skirt of white serge. In addition to the smocking the shoulder yoke and pouch pockets are worthy of mention. In medium size the smock requires 4 yards 36-inch linen and 3 yards 54-inch serge for the skirt.

Pictorial Review Smock No. 6570. Sizes 34 to 42 inches bust and 16 to 20 years. Price 15 cents. Skirt No. 6429. Sizes 22 to 38 inches waist. Price 15 cents.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

Sunday Night Suppers.

SHRIMP WIGGLES.—Two tablespoonfuls of butter, two tablespoonfuls of flour, one teaspoonful of salt, paprika, two cupfuls of milk, one cupful of peas and one cupful of shrimp. Melt the butter, add the flour and gradually pour on the milk, stirring continually. Season and add the drained peas, saving the liquor for soup the next day. Rinse, drain and break the shrimp into small pieces, removing the black substance found just under the surface. Add to the mixture, bring to the boiling point and serve hot on toast, crackers or with sandwiches.

Finnan Haddie.—two cupfuls of finnan haddie, cooked; two cupfuls of cream or milk, one tablespoonful of butter, one tablespoonful of flour, one egg, salt and paprika. Melt the butter, add the flour and stir until smooth. Gradually pour on the milk, stirring constantly, and when just boiling lower the heat. Add the slightly beaten egg and stir until smooth. Season and heat the fish in the sauce, taking care that the mixture does not boil, as that would toughen the egg. Serve on toast or crackers.

Deviled Oysters.—Two tablespoonfuls of butter, two teaspoonfuls of chopped parsley, two teaspoonfuls of chopped onion, a teaspoonful of mustard, two tablespoonfuls of mild vinegar, two tablespoonfuls of Worcestershire sauce, one-fourth teaspoonful of tabasco sauce, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, paprika, two dozen oysters. Put the ingredients in the saucepan or chafing dish in the order named, stirring constantly so that a smooth sauce may be formed; then add the oysters and cook until the edges curl (five minutes). Serve hot on toast.

Chicken a la King.—Two tablespoonfuls of butter, a tablespoonful of flour, two cupfuls of milk, a teaspoonful of salt, paprika, the yolk of an egg, half a cupful of canned mushrooms, one-fourth cupful of canned pimento, shredded; one-fourth cupful of chopped olives, two cupfuls of shredded chicken; one-fourth cupful of sherry. Melt the butter and add the flour, stirring till smooth; then gradually add the milk and let come to a boil. Season then, lower the heat and add the slightly beaten yolk. Add the remaining ingredients and let simmer until thoroughly heated. Serve hot on toast, crackers, or in a shell.

You can't "spell-bind" many men into liking what they dislike —every man's taste is his own

IF A MANUFACTURER in his advertising tells you (truthfully, as he believes) that he has the "best tasting cigarette in the world" and you believe him, you probably try his cigarette. It may be a very good cigarette. But his over-enthusiasm has led you to expect something almost impossible. You light that cigarette and—

Well, there's a good chance that you're disappointed. It may not be the fault of the cigarette. The cigarette may be mighty good. But you've been led to expect too much. You've been "over-sold."

And besides, tastes differ—who can tell what cigarette will best please your taste before you try it?

That's why we leave the taste of Fatimas entirely up to you. We believe you will like them; but you may not.

To be sure, most men like the taste of Fatimas better than any other cigarette they ever smoked. Figures indicate that. More Fatimas are sold than any other cigarette in the world costing over 5c.

But the taste isn't all.

If you do like Fatimas' taste as well as these thousands and thousands of other men do, you'll find a second reason for sticking to them for good. And that reason is that Fatimas will give you cigarette-comfort at all times. This is why they have won the name of being as SENSIBLE a cigarette as a man can find anywhere.

They are comfortable to the throat and tongue. You'll never experience any "sandpaper tickle" or "hotness" in the cool-smoking Turkish blend of Fatimas.

And Fatimas can be smoked more freely than any other cigarette we know of without leaving any mean after-feeling, as some less skilfully blended cigarettes do.

If you have never smoked Fatimas—you should try them.

JAPS LIKE OKUMA

Considered Representative Character of Oriental Great Men.

CONQUERS BY HIS DIGNITY.

Premier's Daring Intrepidity and Excellent Nerve and His Lofty Contempt of Death Have Won Praise, Described by a Countryman.

Tokyo.—Should any Japanese be asked by a foreigner to point out a representative character of oriental great men Japan has at the present time he would be inclined to mention the old count Okuma, who is now leading the country during these memorable epochs of the world's war through the most perilous seas of international politics.

His magnanimity toward his personal enemy who had actually attempted on his very life, his liberality in material ways toward those who are indebted or apply to him for assistance, his unhesitating readiness to shoulder any amount of responsibility if by so doing there is the least prospect of promoting the public weal of the nation, the grateful treatment of old friends and early comrades irrespective of the heaven and earth difference probably created in the social position, the high standard of morality he observes in his private life, his sterling integrity and strict probity, never questioned during his long public career of fifty years, all these and others support the assumption that he ought to be classed among true and cultivated gentlemen of the first class standing.

His invariable optimism in the depth of the gloomiest and melancholiest situation in which a mortal can find himself, his infinite resourcefulness in the face of any hardy and intricate problems presented him for solution, his daring intrepidity and excellent nerve and his lofty contempt of death that more than once confronted him, his resolute firmness to carry out amid showers of attacks and reproach, even at the expense of his personal safety and reputation, those plans which he believed to concord with the permanent interest of the nation, the calm serenity of his mind and the tranquil equanimity of his heart and his open hearted simplicity and friendliness with any one who is honored with his interview testify to the undeniable fact that he is equipped with every necessary quality that goes to make up a great hero of oriental pattern.

He is a man who conquers by his personal dignity and his overwhelming sweep-it-allness, not by the ingenuity of his artificial skill or the elaborate device of fine machinations.

As an educationist also he is entitled to claim the first and foremost rank in view of the distinguished services he has tendered to the cause of education in Japan. The University of Waseda under his presidency and other various schools pertaining to it comprise more than 10,000 students, while the graduates might count more than ten times the number. The university, divided into four colleges (literature, law, technics and commerce), practically absorbs the greater portion of the students who do not enter the governmental institution. The Waseda middle school is inferior to no other similar institution, either private or public, in the excellency of the educational service as well as in the quality of the students produced. In the list of those successful applicants for the entrance examination of governmental higher schools the graduates from the Waseda middle school always occupy the most predominant proportion, a fact most strongly appealing to the confidence of the Japanese public.

Count Okuma is also a distinguished educationist in a different sense of the word. He is the great teacher of democracy. Having belonged to the minor Hizen clan by birth, his situation in the Japanese politics has always been somewhat isolated as compared with those potentates who enjoyed the effective support and protection of the influential clan of Satsuma and Choshu that took an active part in bringing about the restoration of the imperial power through the dethronement of the Shogun. It is this very circumstance that made a democrat of him.

DRINKING HENS BEAT TEETOTAL SISTERS

Sprayed With Alcohol and Ether, They Waxed Fat and Laid More Eggs.

Philadelphia.—That roosters and hens that soak up ether highballs are better parents than teetotaler chickens was the assertion recently made to the American Philosophical society by Raymond Pearl, biologist at the Maine agricultural experiment station.

Mr. Pearl told of experiments upon seventy chickens, all of a crossbreed between Black Hamburgs and Plymouth Rocks. They were placed in tanks and sprayed with alcohol and ether for an hour each day.

The chickens didn't like either intoxicant when mixed in their water, but became lively in their appreciation and their antics after the spraying.

It was found that the drunken chickens grew much fatter than a number of brothers and sisters which were denied opportunity to dissipate. In a year the alcoholic hens averaged 184 eggs apiece, while their white ribbon sisters averaged only 181. The rum fighting roosters became lazy and quarrelsome, but otherwise appeared in excellent condition.

YOUNG MAN, BEWARE OF THE VASSAR GIRL!

Firm Advocate, She, of the Rule That the Wife Is the Boss Around Home.

Poughkeepsie.—The young men who keep on their dressers framed pictures of fair Vassar students and dream dreams of steam heated flats when they gaze at them will do well to note the fact that fifty of these students heartily applauded the assertion of a witness in the supreme court that his wife was boss around their house.

It was the spontaneous sort of applause that makes even a thoughtless man thoughtful, and it persisted despite the raps for order which Supreme Court Justice Young sounded, while he grinned behind a magisterial hand.

The young women, members of the political science class under Professor E. D. Fite, were in court learning something of judicial procedure when the witness on the stand, in answer to a question whether he had consulted his wife regarding a certain action, said:

"No, sir; I don't have to. My wife is boss in the house."

Patter, patter, patter went white gloved hands in earnest applause of the witness' honest attitude, and the young women nodded approvingly at one another.

Salem, Ore.—Governor James Withycombe granted ninety days' leave of absence to C. O. Bogart, serving a term in the penitentiary for assault with intent to kill, in order that he might plant his spring crop and save, if possible, his homestead in Malheur county from foreclosure proceedings.

Several weeks ago Bogart informed the governor that unless he could be given an opportunity to plant his spring crop his wife and eight children would be without provisions next winter and also unable to meet interest on a mortgage on his homestead. He is serving a term for attempting to kill a man named Mathews, with whom he quarreled over a land right.

GERMAN CRUISERS FIRE ON COAST TOWNS

London—A German naval squadron was defeated by a British squadron in the North sea today.

An official statement was issued by the admiralty shortly after noon stating that the German warships were in flight, being pursuer by the British men of war.

The squadrons consisted of battle cruisers, light cruisers and destroyers

The battle was fought so close to the shore that persons on land could hear the roar of theg uns and see the shells dropping into the sea.

Firing was heard about 4 o'clock.

The German ships had been able to penetrate the British patrol lines in the darkness and naval officers were not certain whether the Germans had come out to give battle or to bombard the English coast.

Previous to the naval engagement the German ships had shelled the English Coast at Lawestoft, killing two men, aw oman and a child.

The damage done to property, however, was slight.

12 KILLED IN RIOTS IN DUBLIN CITY

London—Serious antiBritish riots, in which twelve lives were lost, occurred in Dublin on Monday, it was announced in the House of Commons today by Augustine Birrell, secretary for Ireland.

Political rioters took possession of the postoffice, and being well armed, defied thep olice and soldiery to dislodge them.

Troops were rushed to the city from the Curragh barracks and took possession.

The military authorities have the situation well in hand, Mr. Birrell said.

Mr. Birrell declared that the rebels were in possession of four or five different parts of the city of Dublin. He also announced that four or five soldiers had been killed.

Flattery has the second greatest speed, the professor finds, traveling from 400 to 500 yards in the same time. Truth, however, he declares, is slowest of all, moving only about two and a half yards per second. The computations, he said, were based on the speed of the sound of an alarm clock, which is zero.

Old Elm Used by British and Indian Sharpshooters.

Maumee, O.—The famous Indian elm tree here, ravaged by time and the elements, is to be saved. Toledo tree experts are now nursing it.

The old tree stands directly opposite Fort Meigs, which was under siege by the British and Indians in 1812-13. From branches of the tree Indians had an excellent view of the fort. Stories handed down from the generation of that day say that many a bullet was fired from the tree by expert marksmen among the Indians and the British.

PLENTY OF WORK FOR PLAYERS

In preparation for the first regular game of the season, to be played here May 5th with Solvay, the High School baseball squad will engage in stiff practice throughout the week.

Expectations are that a winning team wil be secured from the squad of players who have indicated a desire to try for the nine. Several men are left over from last year's team and these, supported by some of the youngsters whoh ave earned reputations in the grammar school teams, will combine to make up a balanced nine. No individual stars loom up as yet, altho it is expected some of the infield men, most of them basketball stars, will shine before the end of the school term.

Manager Reynolds visited Skaneateles last weeks for the purpose of arranging a game with the high school team here. He was unable to close an agreement, but feels assured that the two nines will meet.

Another city team will compete with high school for the admiration and support of the Fans. This team, the Woodmen's, promises to furnish the fans with a good brand of baseball. The Woodmen conducted a benefit performance at the Happy Hour theatre yesterday which netted a neat sum. This money will help to defray the cost of new suits which have arrived here.

Another rival of the Woodmen, the Maccabee outfit, is already in process of organization. These two teams should furnish baseball fians a full season's enjoyment.

We say: Most of life's shadows are caused by standing in your own light.

We say: Fulton has been blessed with so many good things that we all should be thankful for them.

* * *

We say: FULTON is one of the most peaceful cities in the state of New York; its citizens love each other, because they know that by doing so they get good results.

FULTON is a city that has seen bad times and still is marching in the line of progressive cities. Why? Simply because there are enough broad-minded men in our city who are able to make the other fellow understand that by keeping his head straight and by trying to live the right way, he HAS to win out in the end; therefore we are still marching in that famous line.

* * *

Nature has given FULTON many things to be proud of; and it was for that reason that so many well-thinking men and women came to live here to be happy. Our homes are HOMES—our men and women and children are MEN, WOMEN and CHILDREN. We always stick together and are willing tod efend the rights of our city at every turn of the road and are willing to give and work for OUR city.

HYPOCRISY AND HYPOCRITES DESCRIBED BY MR. PEACOCK

The 2000 persons who entered the tabernacle last night were productive of an increased collection, as the sum reached a total of $177.82, which was in strong contrast to the sum of $4.32, realized at the afternoon meeting which was attended by about 200 persons. The attendance to date number 18,350 persons who have contributed $878.33.

Last night was conspicuous for the presence of about 700 members of the congregation of the First M. E. church. The line of march was from the church at Oneida and 3rd sts. to the tabernacle, each marcher wearing a small white badge.

Tonight the tabernacle will be given over to the members of the Baptist church, the members meeting at their church at 7:20 p. m.

The first of a series of shop meeting was addressed by the Evangelist yesterday at the noon hour, when the Hunter Arms employes listened to Mr. Peacock. Then ext noonday meeting will accur at the Chocolate Works on Friday. Today the Evangelist's itinerary will include a trip to Syracuse, to attend a luncheon given by the Billy Sunday Business Men's League, and a morning prayer service at the First M. E. church, this city ,at 9:30 o'clock.

Last night's sermon was in part as follows:

Math. 5th. 13-15. Jesus Christ speaks of His disciples as the salt of the earth, and as the light of the world. In both characters they have a mission to others. The church exists for the sake of the world. This is her vocation. The whole world is the field, and then she is to labor not for her own ends, but to benefit mankind. Some people seem to have the idea that thew orld exists for the church. This is contrary to the teaching of Jesus. In these verses Jesus was talking to his disciples about their influence over men. He says, ye are the salt of the earth, ye are the light of the world. Every good man in the community is a power for good. Every bad man in the community is a power for evil.

Jesus Christ says to the members of the church, ye are the salt of the earth, ye are the light of the world. Is this statement true? Are the members of the church the salt of the earth and the light of the world? Is she a power for good among men? In order to answer this question correctly and honestly, it will be necessary to ascertain what Jesus means by these statements. He first compares the influence of a good man to the action of salt upon flesh. The salt is used to preserve that on which it is sprinkled from corruption. It holds corruption in check. The world is in danger of sinking into corruption. Society is threatened with disintegration by the mutual opposition of conflicting classes. Domestic life is corroded by immorality and intemperance. Frivolous amusements often lead those engaging in them into great sins in the light of God. Because of these things a preserving and purifying agent is needed. Jesus informed his disciples that they were to be this preserving and purifying agent. And this is still the mission of Christ's people in the world. The world is worth preserving. In John 3: 16, we read, for God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have eternal life.

Purity is Supreme

Christianity teaches that politics, commerce, art, literature, are all worth keeping from people who profess to be disciples of Jesus to use every means in their power to preserve the world from corruption. They are the salt of the earth .Have you ever noticed how the wicked are restrained from out-breaking sin, and held in check by the pure lives of good men? Good men in a community have a wonderful influence and power over those who have a desire to do wrong. And if all the men who profess to be good would exert an influence on the side of right all the time, this world would be a different place.

The presence of good men and women in the world tends to keep the world sound and healthy, by silent influence of example. The old heathen world was rotting in sin when the Christians appeared and infused a new life of purity into society. No one can calculate the advantage to the whole world of the presence in it of pure minded, earnest, unselfish, good men and women. Salt may lose its savior. It may not have become corrupt.

For the sake of thew orld the spiritual vigor of the church must be preserved. It will not do for the church to come down to the level of the world. The world must be lifted up to the standard of Jesus. And the only way the world will ever be lifted up to the standard of Jesus, and saved from corruption, will be through the good influence of those who profess to be disciples of Jesus Christ. Then Jesus says His disciples are the light of thew orld. A city set on a hill cannot be hid. Neither do men light a lamp and put it under a bushel, but on the stand; and it shineth unto all that are in the house. Jesus does not say, ye carry the light of thew orld, but he says ye are the light of thew orld. Light is a very important thing. It vanishes darkness, shows our path, reveals our danger, cheers our hearts, and refreshes our health.

Truth is the Hope

Of course truth in the abstract, especially moral and spiritual truth, ought to prevail; but it never does when men's interests lie or seem to lie in the contrary direction. Such truth, to be mighty must be vitalized; it must glow in human hearts, burn on human tongues, shine in human lives. The king of truth knew this well; and hence He placed the hope of the future, the hope of dispelling the world's darkness, not in abstract truth, but in truth incarnate in the true disciple. Ye are the light of the world. Of course Jesus Christ is the light of the world.

In what way are the people in the church to be a light to the world? In the very same way the disciples of Jesus were to be a light to the world. By living the Christ life in every day walk and conversation. Some people permit their light to shine no matter what comes in the way. While some will give up Christian principle altogether when they find how seriously it brings them into antagonism with the world. The one is permitting his light to shine, while the other is hiding it under a bushel. Christians are supposed to be a light to the world in spiritual things. Christ created the desires within a few men to be a light to the world who accepted Him as the light of the world, and he expects them to Create this desire in others.

Wade Gayer Endorsed by Republican Committee as Kandt's Successor

Wade E. Gayer received the unanimous endorsement of the Republican City Committee, as H. W. Kandt's successor at a meeting held last night. The action of the committee was not the only indication of harmony prevailing in the meeting place, as it was the sense of the gentlemen that from the moment on, when aught transpires to cause a ripple on the surface of events it will be the bounden duty of the complainant to seek his colleagues for a conference, so that the wavelets may be stilled and not allowed to grow big and dangerous.

Reorganization of the committee was effected, with the following result:

Charles E. Stewart, chairman; Clinton H. Hulett, vice chairman; Harry C. Webb, secretary; W. Lawson Woodbury, treasurer.

The executive commmitteemen are: Calvin R. Dines, William H. Osborne, Frank H. Rumsey, H. Putnam Allen, Clayton G. Brown, John W. Stevenson and Grove Seymour.

It was the sense of the committeemen that Mr. H. Putnam Allen succeed himself as chairman, but the gentleman preferred, for business reason, that the responsibility rest upon other shoulders. Mr. Allen received the appreciation of the men for his fidelity to duty in the past, and he indicated that his worok in the future would be consistent with former times.

The following resolution was adopted unanimously by the committee:

Whereas, Wade E. Gayer, of this city is a candidate for the office of County Treasurer of the County of Oswego, and this committee realizing that the said Wade E. Gayer possesses the ability and integrity to properly administer said office in the interests of the taxpayers of the county of Oswego and with credit to himself and the Republican party, now therefore be it

Resolved: That the Republican City Committee of the City of Fulton, do hereby unanimously endorse the candidacy of the said Wade E. Gayer and earnestly ask the support of the electors of the City of Fulton and the County of Oswego in behalf of his candidacy.

SIR ROGER TAKEN TO LONDON FOR TRIAL

London—It is announced officially that Sir Rogers Casement was brought to London on Sunday for trial. The announcement follows:—

"Sir Roger Casement, who was arrested in connection with an abortive attempt to land arms in Ireland from a German vessel, was brough tto London on Sunday morning. He was met at Euston by officers from Scotland Yard and is now detained in military custody. It is understood that evidence of his proceedings in Germany since the outbreak of thew ar will be produced at his trial."

The arrest of Sir Roger Casement is dealt with by the Pall Mall Gazette in an editoral which is extremely significant at this moment, but which for obvious reasons cannot be dilated upon.

"Before Germany took the trouble to send arms to Ireland," says the newspaper, "she must have been satisfied of the existence of agents in that country who were prepared to receive and use them in her interests. That is to say that there must have been active communication between Irish traitors and their confederates in Berlin despite all existing precautions of censorship and supervision. When we find a force devoid of arms undergoing military training in Ireland and a cargo of arms from our enemies seeking a landing place in that country it becomes highly desirable that the connection, if any, between these two striking phenomena should be more fully explained."

THE PEOPLE'S LEVERAGE

When the cave man tugged and strained with all the might of his brawny sinews to roll a big rock before the opening of his primitive home, finally having to give it up, conquered, he then began to use his brain. With its aid he found that a stout stick with one end inserted under the rock gave him a leverage that increased his power.

A lever is a mighty handy thing, once it is discovered. It enables man to do many things before impossible.

But knowledge of its possibilities is by no means completed. The lever which is of real consequence to the men of today is trained ability. We can try all kinds of other levers, but for getting results they all are like tack-pullers where one needs a crowbar.

In the summing up the people of this city would much rather have their town talked about far and wide as a clean town— the cleanest in the country— rather than as a place unspeakably dirty.

They all firmly believe that anybody can make the city clean and beautiful, and yet they are willing to admit that it takes brains to get everybody working to that end—which means ultimately to increase the value of every property in Fulton.

The Chamber of Commerce is the lever that will increase the power of the people who want their city advertised by its appearance; by its ability to secure reform in the method of removal of refuse, etc. It will not be necessary in the week of May 8th—clean up week—in order to secure results to do more than advertise what is wanted of the people. They can be trusted to do their part toward removing every eyesore in the way of objectionable matter. The people will do some thinking and will not be afraid of being discovered in the act. They will not hesitate to improve every condition improvable, and when they have once found that they are also wielders of the lever it will not be long before this city will be found taking another long step in advance— the adoption of a decent system of garbage collection.

HYPOCRISY IN THE ROOSEVELT CAMPAIGN

Theodore Roosevelt has announced that he is not a candidate for president. Theodore Roosevelt founded the Ananias Club. As we predicted several weeks ago Theodore Roosevelt is a candidate for president, and is the only individual who has been mentioned—Wilson, Ford, Hughes, Burton, Borah, Root, Weeks, Roosevelt — who is personally working like a Trojan to secure the nomination.

Sunday night is the time of the week when news is scarce in the news agencies and Monday morning papers furnish most space of any edition of the week for the seeker after publicity. Theodore Roosevelt has utilized this feature of newspaper conditions for many years, and is utilizing it now.

You may look regularly Monday morning for the dateline — Oyster Bay, and you will not be disappointed. You will find in Monday morning's paper just as much of the inspired Roosevelt campaign material as the newspapers will accept from this leader who pretends that he is not a candidate for president. As the campaign progresses the colonel will deliver every Sunday a sermon in advocacy of his own greatness which ought "to get them" so that by the time the Republican convention comes around in June the colonel will be able to grab off another nomination.

There is no objection to the colonel as an aspirant, but there is serious objection to the colonel as a hypocrite. No intelligent reader of the newspapers will interpret his recent activities as anything else than a desperate move to bring about his nomination, by the Republican Party. As an open, honest aspirant, Colonel Roosevelt would enjoy the respect if not the support of those who disagree with him. In his present attitude he is playing a bunco game upon unsuspecting Republicans, is playing machine politics of the most abhorrent type, and is willing to bedevil the foreign relations of the United States in order to help his selfish ends.

Henry Watterson assails another bit of this hypocrisy practised by the Roosevelt campaign, which, striving to kill off Hughes uses the pacifist sentiment in Western States to name "Ford delegates," which are Ford delegates for one ballot and will stand revealed as Roosevelt delegates when the test comes in the convention. We are as prepared to believe that the colonel is ignorant of any such purposes as we are to believe that he was telling the truth when he said he is not a candidate.

Mr. Watterson in yesterday's Louisville Courier Journal presents his well founded suspicion in these herioc words:

"There is nothing surprising in the presidential candidacy of Henry Ford and in the way it has taken hold in certain places, when one has the key to it. The key is the candidacy of Theodore Roosevelt. Ford is a mask for Roosevelt. The Gary-Bacon-Root combine knows its business.

"Ford is a man of business as well as a man of peace. His business alliance is Wall Street. Though a man of business, he is a man of feeling. With Republican politics in a fluid state; with a riff-raff of 'favorite sons' to confuse the multitude and the down-and-outers all at sea, why should not the Fordites hold whilst the Teddies skid?

"Does anybody suppose that Ormsby McHarg works for nothing and that Frank Hitchcock is out for his health? A little money put where it can do the most good—see Michigan and Nebraska—goes a long way. The Gary-Bacon-Root combine has plenty of money. It has hardly yet begun to spend it. But, even as the ox knoweth his owner and the ass his master's crib, do malefactors of great wealth know when and where and how to skin their eye teeth and to come it over the hayseeds. Mark Hanna is dead. But Wall Street liveth."—Auburn Citizen.

OREGON'S INFANT INDUSTRY

One of the infant industries which is being nourished in this country is flax and the products of the article. Oregon has taken up this crop with considerable energy. One county has pledged to sow between 200 and 300 acres this year. A chamber of commerce in the county seat has subscribed $6,000 to provide a "retting," "scutching" and "hackling" plant. Governor Withycombe has arranged for 600 acres to be sown in Marion county and in Umpqua valley farmers are going to experiment with the crop, to see what they can do with it. The sowing of 900 acres is thus assured. It represents quite an outlay for an experiment.

It is predicted by H. B. Miller, dean of the School of Commerce of the University of Oregon, who has made an exhaustive survey of the world's supply, that the supply will be exhausted in seven months. The Belgium fields are not being cultivated, and the British Isles will not be able to grow enough to supply home demands. The low grade Russian supply is not available. The rest of the visible supply does not amount to much.

Among the flax men who have looked over Oregon is J. W. Allen of Belfast, who declares that Oregon is ideal for growing flax. At any rate, Oregon will give the crop an extensive trial this year. Perhaps it may become a "linen State."—Utica Observer.

INCREASED COST OF DYESTUFFS

The experience of a Utica textile manufacturer is a forcible demonstration of the rapidity and extent of the rise in thep rices of dyestuffs, because of the Euporean war's embargo on the shipment of them from Germany, which had been the chief, if not the exclusive, source of the supply of fast colors." Several weeks ago this manufacturer learned that there was a quantity of dyestuffs in a mill that had gone out of business. He went to the man who was closing up the former mill company's affairs, and after some dickering, purchased 800 pounds of dyestuffs at an average price of $1.50 per pound. Since then he has been gradually disposing of them at high prices. Last week he sold the last lot—ten pounds of fine quality blue dye—at $10 per pound. Before thew ar this same stuff was selling at as low at 20 cents a pound.

For many months Germany has been refusing to let any of her dyestuffs be shipped to the United States. She knows, of course, the difficulty which American fabric manufacturers have experienced because of not getting these dye materials. England, in control of the high seas, seems to have been willing to help our factories by winking at Germany's exports. But, bent as she is on cutting off all supplies for Germany, she could not consistently let American goods go back to pay for the dye stuffs. There has therefore been a continued and rapid increase in the prices of German dyes.

Germany's latest move is to change the situation by offering to send us at once 15,000 tons of dyestuffs, enough for half a year of our normal demand, and waive the claim for payment in needed goods. This seems to mean that Germany will get only gold for her dyestuffs, and gold is not what she needs. It is up to England to determine whether these dyestuffs shall come here. She can shut them out. The amount is largely in excess of what she has announced herself ready to let us get through her "block ade." Some critics say Germany is beginning her "dumping" process right here and now. They note that a new modification of our tariff laws to prohibit after-war "dumping" is sure to go through Congress. That the landing in America of enough dye stuffs for six months use, of German make and at low German prices, would surely cool the enthusiasm of native investors in dyestuffs plants, is to be assumed. On the other hand, it is contended that the people of this country will not, in times of peace, pay five or six times what Germany can make things for just to have the satisfaction of saying that we are supplying ourselves.—Utica Dispatch.

BARGAINS

If anyone be disposed to doubt that the Prussian government is a paternal government, and if anyone be disposed to doubt that a paternal government is sometimes more astute than the people it governs, the prohibition of bargain sales in Berlin will set both doubts forever at rest. German women love bargains as well as American women do, and they are just as easily beguiled into buying what they do not need. Therefore, to deliver them from temptation and to insure a wise economy, the authorities of Berlin have forbidden "white sales," and "clothing sales," and "New York sales," and "clearance sales," and "inventory sales," and all other decoy sales that are so likely to crowd shops and to empty pockets. No alluring advertisements, no mendacious placards, are permitted to disturb the austere serenity of the great department stores. It is legislation of the nursery-governess order, but amazingly sagacious and discreet.

For what the lure of the wild is to some men, the lure of the bargain is to all women. It breaks down their barriers of resistance. There is a story in the "Abraian Nights" about an enchanted mountain rising from the sea, which like a magnet drew all ships within its influence to dash themselves upon its rocky base. Just such a magnet is the bargain counter, drawing with irresistible force all shoppers—if they be women, and true women—to its side. They stand three deep, and make mad clutches over one another's shoulders, at crumpled shirt waists, and sweat-shop underwear, and misfits of every kind and quality. They did not come out to buy those things. They do not always know what it is they are trying to buy. A timid little lady, struggling feebly on the outer circle of a bargain seeking crowd in a Philadelphia department store, was asked by a curious observer what there was for sale on the counter she was striving to reach. "How can I tell you?" she whimpered. "They all push me about so, I have not been able to find out."

To say that shopkeepers take a base advantage of the weakness that they foster would be to underrate their sagacity. They know that goods, unsalable in regular stock, can always be disposed of as "bargains," and that all that is necessary to make a thing a bargain is to remove it from its proper place and toss it on a disheveled counter somewhere in the middle of the store, where it impedes everyone's progress. They know also that successful trade does not mean selling a shopper an article that she needs and that she is tolerably sure to purchase, but selling her an article that she does not need and that she must be tempted by some artifice to buy.

"Why did not Mrs. S. take that coat?" said a superintendent to a saleswoman who was hanging up the rejected garment.

"Because she did not want it, sir," was the innocent reply.

"Want it!" retorted the indignant "head."

"If you are going to sell people only what they want, you had better go to a post office and sell stamps." —Youth's Companion.

TALKS ON BANKING

SAVINGS BANK CENTENNIAL SERIES

No. 8.—HOW TO DRAW A CHECK

The first thing a depositor in a bank should learn is how to draw a check, for if a check is improperly drawn it may lead to confusion and might bring a loss to the bank and annoyance to the depositor. In the first place the figures should be plainly made, so that no question can arise as to the amount. If a figure is carelessly made, so that it confuses those who handle the check for $1.88 with a poor "8," and a clerk lists it as $1.08, it may take many hours' time to find the difference. and the entire day's work may have to be gone over The rule should be: never make a figure that may be mistaken and never pass one that is in doubt—correct it by crossing out the bad and making a good one alongside.

Second, the words and figures should agree. The law says that if the two are different, the written words govern, but make both carefully and get them alike.

Third. Begin the writing well to the left of the writing space and fill in the unused space with a wavy line. Begin the figures well up against the $ sign and make the character 00-000 after, but close up against the figures. Use a good black ink and write firmly, so that plenty of ink gets into the fibre of the paper.

Fourth. Always write your name exactly as you wrote it on the bank's signature card. "Mrs. William Smith" may be the same person as "Mary V. Smith" but the bank account doesn't stand that way.

Adopt one signature and stick to it. Do not flourish, nor make a fancy signature. Handwriting experts will tell you that a plain, distinctive signature, with no furbelows, is the most difficult to forge.

The law of forgery is that the bank is bound to know your signature, and pays a forged instrument at its peril. The risk is all theirs, but that is not to say you should not help eliminate the chance of forgery by taking care that your checks are properly drawn. If you are grossly negligent, you might have to stand the loss yourself. Better be safe than sorry. There are numerous protecting devices on the market, some better than others, and these may be used as added safeguards; but there is no rule of law that compels you to do so. You are safe if you follow the above suggestions, but safer if you use a protecting device, for then you cannot be charged with any negligence in making your checks forgery proof. Do not make it easy to work a fraud through your account. Do not give checks to strangers. Do not leave your check book lying around. Do not leave a signed check where it may be filed in and used. Your banker will bless you if you folow the foregoing suggestions.— American Bankers Association.

MUNICIPAL FLAGS IN UNITED STATES

Why and How They Have Been Adopted by Cities.

SOME DISTINCTIVE FEATURES

The Adoption of These Emblems Is One of the Expressions of a Growing Civic Spirit—Between Thirty and Forty Cities Fly Them.

The gradual adoption of municipal flags by American cities is one of the expressions of a growing civic spirit. The municipal flag has sprung into use through the need for appropriate and uniform decorations of streets and buildings on public ceremonial occasions. It has usually been adopted at that period in the city's history when municipal life has assumed something of a triumphal aspect. New and dormant energies as well as new ambitions are stimulated at such a time into active forces.

Between thirty and forty American cities of over 30,000 population are listed as possessing municipal flags. The usual method of obtaining a suitable design for a flag has been by open competition. The judgment of the municipal art commission is frequently sought before the design is finally accepted.

The occasion for the adoption of a municipal flag by the city of Wilkes-barre was the celebration of the centennial anniversary of the incorporation of the city as a borough in 1806. The adoption of a municipal flag in Kansas City was an outward manifestation of civic pride after the building of its new Union station. In Baltimore Mayor Preston signed the ordinance adopting a municipal flag in order that the city might have some emblem representative of its power and achievement on the occasion of the centennial celebration of the composition of the "Star Spangled Banner," which was held in Baltimore in 1914. The municipal flag of New York city was dedicated on June 24, 1915, at a public celebration in commemoration of the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of municipal government under the mayor and board of aldermen of the city of New York as successors in office of the burgomasters and schepens of the city of New Amsterdam.

The ordinance establishing a city flag for Baltimore provides that it shall be of the black and gold colors of Lord Baltimore, the founder of Maryland. These colors "were brought ashore with much solemnitie" by the first settlers of Maryland upon their landing 280 years ago and were continually used in the province of Maryland until the Revolutionary war. Upon these colors of the flag is superimposed a shield showing Battle monument, erected in memory of the defenders of the city of Baltimore against the British during the war of 1812.

The cities possessing municipal flags in most instances have their respective city seals or coats of arms emblazoned upon the colors. Philadelphia requires that the city arms which appear upon the city seal shall be placed upon the civic flag or standard and that they shall also appear upon the city ensign, the city pennant and the city streamer.

The seal upon Camden's city flag contains the coat of arms of Lord Camden.

The Harrisburg city flag bears upon its center a white keystone, the state emblem of Pennsylvania, the keystone having upon it the dome of the new state capitol rising from the clouds.

The seal of New York city appears upon the flag of that city.

The city seal appears also on the flags of Boston, New Rochelle, Richmond, Pittsburgh, Kansas City, Atlantic City, Schenectady, Reading, San Francisco, Toledo, Erie, Buffalo, Providence, Springfield, Mass.; York, Pa., and New Haven.—American City.

BE A BOOSTER.

Be a booster if you can, booster of your fellow man.
Boost your project, boost your state, boost your town at any rate.
Boost it as a place to live, boost it—every boost you give
Makes the town a better town. Boost it up. Don't knock it down.
Be a booster—for you can; boosting is the better plan.
Boosters always win acclaim; boost the knockers to their shame.
Boost them when they need your help. Make them yell instead of yelp.
Boost them till they have to boost; boost them up or off the roost.

NEW USE FOR TOWN MARSHAL

Kansas Town Solves a Municipal Problem by Means of Advertising.

Luray, Kan., has solved the paramount problem of the country town, says the Chicago Tribune. The resourcefulness of O. I. Stevenson, city clerk; members of the city council and a want ad. did it. Luray wanted a town marshal, but there was no one there who would fill the bill, and so City Clerk Stevenson put an ad. in a Kansas City paper. Forty men answered. One of them, George H. Armstrong of Newton, Kan., was selected for the place. He is an experienced police officer and is making good not only by way of keeping the peace intact, but by the satisfactory performance of many other and varied duties. He virtually is city manager.

The life of city marshal in Luray is no sinecure. Luray was confronted with the same difficulty that thrusts itself into the life of every other country town—the enforcement of town ordinances and finding a man to perform the many municipal tasks, no one of which is of sufficient volume to require all of his time, but which in the aggregate make up an important and responsible position. The former marshal was born on the town site, and he knew everybody, and everybody knew him. How could he arrest anybody for a violation of the town ordinances? Why, the idea!

The town never gets particularly good, nor does it get particularly bad. It moves along at the same old pace, regardless of city ordinances that affect the personal atmosphere of the old home town. Luray was up against that very proposition. Describing its solution, O. I. Stevenson, city clerk, said:

"Here we are—a small country town of 500, situated in the wheat belt of west central Kansas. Luray probably is no better nor no worse than the average country town of its size with the same natural surroundings. Of course, out here everybody knows everybody else, and all are neighbors.

"There is almost no social distinction. But, as is the case in every town, large or small, there are two elements. One is known as the 'roughnecks' and the other usually as the law and order element.

"In our little town we have always had some difficulty in enforcing our ordinances, owing to the fact that our marshal has been one of our own townsmen, and everybody knew him. As all were his neighbors, he wouldn't do anything unless they got pretty bad. We found that some of the people would go further in even little things if they had no officer except a neighbor whom they called by his first name because he would be slow in taking any action against them.

"Then we tried getting along without a marshal, but that didn't work at all. Finally we thought of advertising for a man. We put a little want ad. in the Sunday edition of the Kansas City Star, and I received forty replies. We selected a man who came here personally and applied for the position. We pay him $65 a month. He has had experience in police work and in the secret service department of railways.

"His duties are many and varied. We have a municipal water system, and he looks after that and collects the water rent. He acts as street commissioner, tax collector and peace officer. The job takes up so much of his time that he doesn't have opportunity to pitch horseshoes or go fishing.

"In other words, we plan that this one man shall do about all the actual work the town requires—except the team work on the streets. If he is versatile enough to do all these in a satisfactory manner we will have found the solution to the problem that has troubled the town council."

Efficient Civic Survey.

The civic survey made not long ago by the Washington (Pa.) board of trade through the boy scouts of that city resulted in securing more than 3,000 detailed reports on the sanitary condition throughout the city, says the American City.

A boy scout captain was assigned to each city ward. The captains divided the wards into sections and placed four boys in each section, with a squad leader in charge of them. The offer of circus tickets to the boys in each squad who returned the most complete and accurate reports formed some incentive to them to do good work. A civic service medal was given to the ward captain who conducted the most systematic survey in the city.

Prior to the day of inspection considerable publicity was given to the fact that such a survey would be made. Insanitary and unhealthful conditions were in each case reported to the board of health, but there was much cleaning up the day before because of the fear of being reported. The total cost of the survey to the board of trade was $10, and its results were most satisfactory.

HOW

To Plant and Nurture Seeds For Your Garden

SOWING PANSY SEEDS.—A five cent package of mixed pansy seed will be sufficient to plant. They should be started indoors in a box full of rich soil and be kept in a slightly shaded place. The dirt should be damp all the time. In fact, it is hard to give pansies too much water. After all danger of frost is past they can be transplanted out of doors in any place you desire them to bloom. The north side of a house is generally the best, because pansies require considerable moisture and shade. With a little care they can be made to bloom until the frost comes in the fall. It is possible in some climates to keep the plants alive over winter, but it is more desirable to start new ones in the spring.

The plants will soon be spoiled if not treated in time. The fungoid disease is caused by spores, which float in the air and settle on the plants. The usual remedies, such as spraying with tobacco water, emulsion of kerosene and insecticides, will prove of no avail.

Plants confined in rooms which are not often aired are the ones most likely to contract the disease.

Bush Nasturtiums.—Plant in ordinary garden soil. Dig deep and break up the lumps. Select a sunny place. In May plant the seeds one-half inch deep and three inches apart. Water freely all summer.

China Pinks.—Prepare a good bed of manure for seeds. Sow in the house and in early May in open sheltered bed, eight inches apart.

Phlox.—Sow in the house and transplant as soon as frost is out of the ground in a sunny part of the garden. Plant one-quarter inch deep in good soil.

Hyacinth Bean (a climber).—Sow in the house now and transplant in early May. Soak the beans in warm water over night. Plant one inch deep in sunny position. Water freely.

Verbena (good for borders).—Soak seeds a few hours in warm water and sow in seed boxes filled with light, rich soil. Cover one-fourth inch deep, press down firmly and water. When an inch high transplant in sunny place in a garden in May, about ten inches apart each way.

Zinnia.—Plant one-quarter inch deep in good soil and as soon as frost is out of ground set in sunny places. Use in a group or border.

How to Grow Strawberries For a Family of Eight.

A patch of strawberries two or three rods square will produce more fruit than a family of eight or ten can use. The work is just as easy and just as simple as growing tomatoes, cabbage or any other crop, says a specialist in the Farm and Home. Strawberry plants are set just the same as a tomato or cabbage plant, and after strawberry plants are set there is little to do but cultivate and give them an occasional hoeing, just the same as for vegetables.

Strawberry plants are the hardiest of all plants and succeed in all soils and under all climatic conditions. The chief essentials are strong, fruitful plants, good drainage and plenty of manure.

HOW TO PRUNE TREES ANNUALLY SO THEY FLOURISH.

Prune annually, but not heavily.

Do not cut out large limbs.

Frostbitten wounds are slow to heal.

Never leave stubs in cutting off limbs.

Wounds heal most rapidly in spring.

Keep trees free from suckers.

Torn wounds are generally fatal.

Summer pruning induces fruitfulness.

Heavy pruning is always followed by a heavy growth of suckers.

Winter pruning, when the tree is wholly dormant, increases the vigor of the tree.

In transplanting cut back, top and root. Burn all the wood to prevent spread of insects and disease.

DAUGHTER OF A QUAKERESS.

Another Suffragist Has Left England to Tour the United States In Behalf of Hospital Units, Cottage Homes For Babies and Toiling Mothers.

Hon. Mrs. Bertrand Russell has left her English work, schools for mothers, in the hands of the Duchess of Marlborough in order to make a two months' flying trip to the United States on behalf of the suffering women and children of Europe. Mrs. Russell is at present speaking in Atlantic seaboard cities about "Why English Women Need the Vote In Time of War."

She has been a lifelong suffrage worker and made her first speech in the Yellowstone National park when she was only sixteen. For, in spite of her present English position, Mrs. Russell is an American woman, the daughter of a famous Quakeress of Pennsylvania, Hannah Whitall Smith, one of the great suffrage pioneers of America and friend of Frances Willard and Lady Henry Somerset. Hannah Whitall Smith was well known to the last generation as a religious writer and social reformer. Mrs. Russell entered Bryn Mawr in its first class in 1885, the year it opened. After her graduation she worked for temperance under the training of her mother's two friends, the latter training coming after her marriage in England to Hon. Bertrand Russell, the philosopher.

Mrs. Russell began the schools for mothers, for which she is widely known, in 1907, after she had studied similar social experiments in Ghent. She and a group of Englishwomen have carried on this training of mothers before and after the birth of their children, in order to decrease the great infant mortality in the congested parts of London.

At the outbreak of the war the suffrage societies of the British isles turned themselves into relief agencies, the National Union of Women's Suffrage Societies being the society with which Mrs. Russell has worked. It has maintained hospital units, cottage homes for babies and help for toiling mothers, establishing labor bureaus through England and teaching efficiency to girls who have been called upon to fill new posts.

APOSTLE PAUL'S MESSAGE, "QUENCH NOT THE SPIRIT," CONVEYS ITS MEANING

Evangelist Peacock's sermon this afternoon was an I Thessalonians, 5: 15, "Quench not the Spirit."

Sometimes we make a sad mistake in interpreting the word of God Many of us like to make the word of God read to suit our own inward desires. When pointed rebukes are presented, we console ourselves by thinking these rebukes are for some other person. But this passage of scripture interprets its own meaning and no honest, sincere follower of Christ can read any other meaning, into it. We are told that there are three persons in the Godhead. The Father, Son and Holy Spirit, and these are one in substance equal in power and glory. All these have a different work to perform. When we speak of God, we think of the Creator. We think of our Heavenly Father. And when we speak of the Son, we think of Him who thought not of His own pleasure and enjoyment, but thought of the happiness of othess, and was willing to give Himself that they might have eternal joy and peace. But when we speak of the Holy Spirit, so many people are at sea, because they have never experienced thew ork of the Holy Spirit ,in their hearts. I sometimes think many of our churches have made such rapid progress, that they have reached the point where they feel that thye can get along without the help of God's Spirit. And judging them from the fruit they bring forth, one has every reason to believe that God's Spirit has no pars or lot in the work.

Sometimes church people need a little stirring up. When people get so cold and careless in the service of God that they have no interest in the work of God, and do just as little as they possibly can, in the service of Christ, it is time for God to stir them up. We sometimes get the idea into our heads that we can sleep on and take our rest just as long as the ministers keep preaching to the people out in the world. And some people seem to imagine when they accept Christ thew hole matter is settled and they can sit d wn and enjoy the blessings of Heaven, without doing anything. But Ido not believe God ever intended His people to manifest this spirit of indifference. God wants His people to be wide awake in His serivce. And when the church fails to do what God has commanded her to do, she can expect the condemnation of God upon her. When Jesus Christ came to this world, He had pity on the outcasts. He wept over the harlots; He welcomed the prodigals; He prayed for His murdereds; but there were people to whom He could only speak words of condemnation. They were people who pretended to be religious.

Hearts Were Bare

They were religious in their washing, religious in their dressing, religious in their looks ,but they had no religion in their hearts. Such individuals were condemned by Jesus, because they were not sincere. They were making an outward show of religion when inwardly they were all wrong with God. When we come to know Jesus Christ, we have great responsibilities resting upon us. And God holds us responsible not for what we have, but for what we might have. Not for what we are, but for what we might be . Christ has opened for us the kingdom of God and has clearly placed before us the way of everlasting life, and if we are beggars in the service of Christ when we ought to be princes, we cannot expect the benediction.

Paul follows the words of this text, with these word: Despise not prophesing. Now, nothing in this world will quench the spirit of God more quickly than the rejecting and despising His revelations and promptings. Now the majority of people are ready to say that they believe in people consecrating themselves wholly and entirely to God. And yet when a minister of God advocates such a doctrine and such a life, many of the people in the chuch are indignant and ready to defeand themselves. Many people are just as near t oGod as they want to get, because they don't want too much religion. They want to enjoy the blessings of God without feeling the responsibilities. This is a very foolish idea. The only happy people in the service of God today are those who have not tried to quench the spirit, but have prayed God to give them more of His spirit. It is the Spirit of God that urges us to get nearer to God, and to be more like Him. We profess to be Christ's soldiers and servants purchased by His blood and going onward into His presence, yet we do not make His service the great purpose of our lives.

We do not surrender everything to it. Is this not to despise the calling and quench the spirit? When society, gain, honor, and the most trivial pleasures have more charm for us than the presence and good pleasure of our Savior, Is this not quenching the Spirit of God? and keeping Him from doing His work?

My friends, are you where God would like you to be? Are you doing all God would have you to do, Are you permitting the Spirit of God to guide you in all things? If you are not, it is certainly time for you to make a change in life and let God have his way. It is time to go before God in prayer and stay there until you have received power from on high, to do Gods will. We are very much afraid of getting too good and of doing too much for God. But never will we be happy in the service of God until we have reached the point where we will permit the spirit of God to guide. When we reach this point, many of the difficulties will be removed, and men and women will be much happier in God's service. My friends, if we intend to make a success out of our Christian profession we must get in line with God, and the sooner we get in line with God. the better it will be for our own souls. We cannot do too much, neither can we get too much of His spirit.

My friends, we should be very careful not to quench God's Spirit. This is a serious matter and every right-thinking individual must realize that he is either quenching the spirit of God, or permitting the spirit of God to guide and direct.

Quench not the Spirit, and hold fast that which is good, abstain from every form of evil. And the God of peace Himself, sanctify you wholly and may your spirit and soul and body be preserved entire without blame at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

CHEAPER POWER THAN REGULAR GASOLINE

Dunkirk—A. S. Peshong of West Fifth Street declares he has found a chemical which makes gasoline twice as effective in the propulsion of an automobile, from the standpoint of miles covered per gallon, than the untreated gasoline. He says the treated gasoline has been given practical demonstration and has proven its worth. The cost of the chemical is small.

Mr. Peshong is experimenting with the chemical treatment of water in an effort to make a substitute for gasoline and says he is confident of early and complete success.

THE OSBORNE CASE

The court having made short work of another one of the indictments of Mr. Thomas M. Osborne, all that remains now to be considered of the "charges" against that unselfish, high purposed and intrepid citizen is an examination into his malfeasance in office which is alleged on the same authority and by the same methods as the now discarded allegations. The court, while dealing severely with the irregular and unsupported indictments brought by the Westchester Grand Jury under the tutelage of District Attorney Weeks, has been unusually lenient with Weeks himself. That amazing example of a public prosecutor has been allowed still more amazing liberties in delaying the judicially ordered delivery of Grand Jury minutes for inspection by the defense, in postponements of dates for trial and in various other dilatory processes.

We trust that there is now to be an end of this judicial farce, and that the attempt of one of the most corrupt and dangerous rings of grafting politicians and contractors to destroy a valuable citizen who had become dangerous to their operations, will be finally and completely exposed. This, of course, cannot be accomplished until whatever trial of the charges is to be had, is finished. When the trial is over and there is no longer a question of influencing verdicts or committing contempts of court, there should be a baring of conditions in Westchester County that will serve for all times as a protection to honest officials who do their duty at Sing Sing.

It is not Mr. Osborne's reputation and power for good that are at stake. These are well able, as has been already amply shown, to defend themselves. It is necessary to provide defenses for the character of worthy men who are less well known and are hence less impregnably intrenched in public confidence, who may at any time be assailed in the same manner by scoundrels whose evil schemes have been frustrated.

Sing Sing and its vicious ramifications in the business and politics of Westchester have been a scandal for more than two generations. There is at last fine opportunity to turn the light on this nest of rascality, and it should be seized and fully exploited. It will not come again under such favorite auspices.—Rochester Herald.

ACTIVITIES IN K. OF C. RANKS

Council Cooperates With Chamber of Commerce to Make Symphony Concert a Success.

Now that the Lenten period is closed, renewed activity marks the doings of the Knights of Columbus.

In order to show the appreciation of St. Joseph's Council for the Chamber of Commerce music festival by the Fulton Symphony Orchestra, it was decided at last night's meeting to postpone the regular meeting of next Tuesday evening until Friday, May 5th. This action will enable the members to enjoy the concert without sacrificing their attendance upon the Council doings.

The first event of a social nature to occur in the ranks of the Council will be the informal dance to be held in the club rooms, Wednesday evening, May 3rd. Good music for this occasion has been engaged by the committeemen, Messrs. John Sullivan, George B. Moore and Lee McCaffrey.

This week, Friday, the second degree will be conferred upon a large class of candidates, and a large delegation of Oswego Knights is expected to come here. A luncheon and smoker will follow the ceremonies, prepared by the following committeemen: Messrs. A. E. Krause, John Timothy, William Chapman and James Casey.

Work upon the new home in East First street is progressing and the Council is preparing to remove there about July 1st.

CITY BORROWS SUM OF $2600

Needed to Meet Demands of Public Safety Department —In Anticipation of Excise Taxes.

By introducing a resolution at a special meeting of the Common Council last night authorizing the City Chamberlain to borrow the sum of $2,600 during the next six weeks, provision was made for the upkeep of the Police Department until such time as excise moneys may be received and applied toward the payment of salaries and other expenses in the Police Department. The Fire Department can be operated until October 1st, the board was advised by the Police and Fire Commissioners; but the 1916 budget appropriation for the fire department will be exhausted on that date, it is figured. It is believed also that the supply of hose in the department will have to be replenished in the very near future.

The Police and Fire Commissioners, Mayor Lewis advised the members of the Common Council, are desirous of cooperating with the city officials for the proper maintenance of the departments, and for that reason a lengthy report covering every detail of the departments was submitted for the consideration of the aldermen. The resolution authorizing the Chamberlain to borrow the money for the Police Department was unanimously approved by the board. The resolution was so worded that the money required by the Police Department will be borrowed as needed to lessen the amount of interest.

The Police and Fire Commissioners in their report requested consideration of a plan whereby it is sought to change from the battery system to the storage battery system in the Fire Department. The change is recommended from the fact that blue vitriol, necessary for the maintenance of the present system has risen from $36 a barrel, the price before the war, to, $135 a barrel, with every indication of the price steadily advancing. Figures were presented to show that in two years the new system would pay for itself.

BOAR HUNT IN TONIGHT'S SHOW AT THE QUIRK

A real boar hunt is seen in the William Fox photoplay, "The Serpent" in which Theda Bara is starred. The picture is one of Russian life, and it depicts the customs of gentry and peasantry. Boar hunting is one of the chief sports of the Russian Empire. It is a dangerous pastime, for the boar, once cornered, fights with the fierceness of the bear and other large animals.

Parts of "The Serpent" were made in Russia by members of the Fox forces permanently located in Petrograd. Difficulties were experienced in getting the film to this country.

THE QUIRK

The great Kalem series photoplay, "The Social Pirates" that comes to the Quirk tomorrow, is classed as one of the very best productions of this class of pictures and should attract attention, especially as each episode is complete in itself each week. This fact alone makes it just what patrons desire. These stories depict the campaign of retribution by two attractive women against this class, they having registered a solemn oath to devote their lives to this purpose. The first episode is "The Little Monte Carlo."

Church Members Don't Pray Often Enough

Attendance at the tabernacle was augmented last night by a group of 400 members of the Baptist church who marched to the building in a body, the total attendance numbering 1900 persons. The collections were the largest of any week night meeting since the campaign opened—a total of $180.10 being contributed. The afternoon attendance yesterday was 200 and the collection $2.64.

Dr. Peacock's sermon this afternoon was in part as follows:

Acts 2:1—And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place.

As we read and study the acts of the Apostles, or the history of the early church, three facts stand out before us The right and normal condition of the church, that this should be its permanent condition, and that this is not it's condition today. We sometimes wonder, as we read about the day of Pentecost, if all these things are true, they seem so marvelous in our eyes And the question that naturally comes into the mind is, Why do we have such experiences in the church now? Has the Spirit of God lost His power? Is He no longer able to touch the hearts of men and women and by so doing lead them to a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ?

Let us for a little time try to seek out the reason or cause for this failure on the part of the church, and if there be a failure on the part of God's people. Should we not use every effort to remove this cause of failure? There must be a reason, because there is a reason or cause for everything under the sun. And I think if we look at this matter honestly and candidly and prayerfully, we will have no trouble in ascertaining the reason or reasons why we do not have such times in our churches today.

People Pray Less

I think one reason we do not have Pentecostal times in our churches today is because the people in the churches are not praying for this, as they did in the days of old. Have you heard men and women pleading with God for the outpouring of His Spirit? Are we so on fire with love for Christ and fallen humanity that we are willing to cry out to God day and night for the salvation of our people? You will find that such times do not come without prayer. Jacob, we are told, saw God face to face, but it was only after he had wrestled all night in prayer. Jonah sent God's message ringing through Nineveh until King and peasant sat in sackcloth and ashes, but only after he had prayed. Daniel faced lions and dangerous human foes, but you remember that his window was opened three times a day toward Jerusalem. And it is only when men pray that they have the power to stand against the wiles of the Devil, and do the work of God. And no church can expect such a time of blessing until the people in the church are willing to pray. Because no time of blessing was ever enjoyed in the church of God that was not preceded by prayer. This is the secret of power in the church and in the individual life, and my friends, until we pray as an individual we cannot expect the outpouring of God's Spirit upon our church and our town. I think this is one of the weak places in our churches. We do not pray enough in public and private. It is marvelous when we see how many professed followers of Jesus Christ refuse to pray, how many refuse to be in the place when prayer is being offered to God for His blessings, and how many do not really believe in meeting together and praying for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit. Is it any wonder the church of Jesus Christ is not doing her work? Is it any wonder men and women are staying away from the house of God, and by so doing shutting the door of heaven upon themselves? Is it any wonder immortal souls are going down to destruction and eternal death? No! Does the church today really want the baptism of the Holy Spirit? Are the ministers and people praying for Pentecostal outpouring? I do not think they are. I sincerely believe we have a wrong conception of Christ and His religion, because we are not enthusiastic enough in the services of God. When God looks down from heaven and sees the father at the family altar, and the mother at the bedside with the children at her knee, does he hear one great universal anthem of prayer from the whole church, united with one accord in faith and triumph for a revival of religion? One thing is certain: Until God does see such scenes, and hears such prayers, the church will never be revived.

Expect Too Little

Another reason why we do not have such times in our churches is because we do not expect them.

We seem to be surprised when souls are brought into the Kingdom of God, and often wonder why so many people give themselves to Christ. We think it strange to see people giving up the world for Christ. My friends, these things ought not to be. We have a right to expect great things from God. God has promised to bless our ecorts if we are faithful in discharging the duties devolving upon us. And in place of being surprised when men and women come into the church, we ought to feel badly when they do not come, and try to find out the reason why they stay away.

Now, many churches do not expect the outpouring of God's Spirit. In some churches the people would be very much put out if the pews were to be filled with strongers and outcasts and publicans and harlots and sinners. If the people for whom Christ died were to crowd into some of our churches, as no doubt they would if the church were fulfilling her mission, the people already there would feel so uncomfortable that they would soon look for a corner lot on which they could build a church they could call their own. The church does not expect the outpouring of God's Spirit. So often we hear people saying: "Oh, these were special occasions and God does not do now as He did in those days." Why does He not? Is it God's fault?

My friends, the reasons we do not have such an outpouring of the spirit and power of God is because we do not expect it and do not want it. It is the devil that tries to persuade men and women that God does not work now as He used to do. God is just as powerful today as He was on the day of Pentecost, and if we will just give His Spirit an opportunity, we will soon see whether God has lost His power or not. But before God can manifest His power there must be a change in the church, and men and women must come to the place where they expect great things from God and be willing to let the Spirit of God guide and direct them in their Christian lives. So long as we have a feeling that we cannot do anything we never will do anything. But the very moment we reach the point where we are ready to go to work, God's Spirit will do the rest.

Hits Sensationalism

Rev. Davis says: "The demand of the people is for a preacher that will draw, that will take, that will fill the church, not with sinners, but with sitters. Not with prayers, but with payers. And so the preacher is compelled to make frantic efforts to do what the people want." In spite of himself, he thus gets his message from the people instead of from his God. He preaches what he thinks the people will like instead of what God tells him they need. He takes up topics that will draw men to church instead of draw them to Christ. Preachers thus become man-made instead of God-made, and as a result lose their power as servants of God. The ministers of God must give the message as it comes from the throne of God, and woe unto the ambassador of God who fails to do this.

The majority of people want the word of God in all it's purity. Some people cannot stand God's Word, but the masses should not be denied it because of the few, and just as soon as the ministers of God in every denomination and in every pulpit preach the word of God, just that very moment will the Spirit of God come upon His church in great power and such as shall be saved will be brought into the church.

Not another reason why the church is not fulfilling her mission is because the church and the world don't have Pentecostal ideas of religion. We do not have enough of conscience of religion. We talk a great deal shout morality and ethics and enlightenment and culture. But when we speak of sin and rebellion against God, we are regarded as old fashioned and out of date. We are back numbers or we wouldn't talk about such things. We have come very near the place where we haven't an sin in the world. People can do as they please, and they never commit a sin. Sin is out of date. Just let everyone have his own way, but don't dare to say a word about it. Now, so long as we have this spirit in our churches and in the world, we will never have a revival of religion.

RABBIT AN INCENDIARY.

Fur Ablaze, It Sets Fire to Neighboring Chicken House.

Columbus, O. — Thirty-six rabbits and chickens were lost and two structures were destroyed by fire of freak origin here. Those who sustained losses are Harry Knox and William Richards.

Knox was the owner of eighteen Belgian hares. In the shed on his premises where he kept the rabbits he had an oil stove for heating. The stove was upset and an explosion followed. In a few seconds the structure was a mass of flames.

Awakened by the explosion, Knox opened his windows in time to see one of his rabbits leap over the fence to the adjoining yard. The little animals' fur was a mass of flames. It ran into another shed on Richards' property, where eighteen prize chickens were kept, and set it on fire. Before the fire department arrived both sheds and their stock were consumed.

MAXIMUM MANICURE CHARGE.

One Judge Says Not One of Them Is Worth More Than $1.25.

Kansas City, Mo.—The best manicure in the world—one with all the trimmings that go to make the finger nails artistic in design and color—is not worth more than $1.25, according to Judge J. E. Guinotte of the probate court.

Judge Guinotte made his ruling in passing on a claim for $2.20 filed against the estate of Herman Peltzer, a wealthy real estate dealer, for "manicure, talcum and file."

"The best manicure in the world," Judge Guinotte said, "is not worth more than $1.25, even though the fingers are soaked in rosewater, the nails polished until they shine and sparkle like diamonds, the fingers dusted with talcum powder and the nails shaped like almonds by a pretty manicurist."

With these remarks the judge cut down the claim to $1.25, which he allowed.

BRITISH FIND A NEAR BEER.

Tester Drinks Twenty Pints Without Becoming Exhilarated.

London.—The long sought nonalcoholic beer has been found.

The official liquor control board is so pleased with tests that it has resolved to push the sale of the beverage in the officially controlled public houses in the munitions areas. The board has invited the makers to send a supply to the house of commons to enable the members of parliament to try it. A member of the liquor control board said:

"It smells, looks and tastes like beer. The only difference is in the headache. Philip Snowden, a member of parliament, cites an instance of a workman who for the purpose of testing the new beverage drank twenty pint bottles and was not in the least intoxicated, although he admitted feeling rather full."

In Agreement.

"Do you think your constituents agree with your views?"

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum. "I made it a point to have my views in agreement with theirs before I said a word."—Washington Star.

Fishing That Is Not Sport.

One way of catching herring is by driving nails into a board so that they stick out several inches. The boards are then dragged through the shoals and the fish catch between the nails and are pulled by the boardful into the boats. In one year more than a million pounds of herring were caught at Prince Rupert and frozen by the cold storage plants to be sold for bait. Something like 125,000 pounds of cod fish are annually taken for the same purpose.—Christian Herald.

BIG STURGEON ON TROT LINE.

"Musical Fisherman" Makes Good Catch In California Stream.

Redding, Cal.—A 400 pound fish was caught in the Sacramento river by Eugene Barion, the "musical fisherman." Barion is called the "musical fisherman" because his 200 foot trot line stretched across the Sacramento at Middle creek is equipped with a chime of twelve Swiss bells, one for each line dangling from the main line with spoon attached.

Barion's catch was a sturgeon, a big fish that measured seven feet without the head. When the sturgeon grabbed the hook every one of the twelve bells rang a clatter that awakened him from his afternoon nap in his cabin ashore.

The "musical fisherman" was unable to land his big catch alone. He had to call in the assistance of two neighbors. Barion's catch netted him $63.

COWS DRANK BEER.

It Was Poured Into a Stream From a Brewery That Was Bankrupt.

Pottsville, Pa.—A suit for several thousand dollars' damage against Sheriff P. J. Murphy, who emptied more than a thousand barrels of beer belonging to the Schuylkill Helm Brewing company into a stream, is pending here.

The brewery management is bankrupt, and the sheriff, who was in charge, was informed that the beer was spoiled. The trustees of the brewery declare that the beer was sold and that the sheriff should have collected the money before it spoiled.

Cows that drank out of the stream that was temporarily flushed with the beer acted unaccountably frisky and mystified their owners until the facts became known.

LADY ASHBURTON.

ACT FOR CHARITY.

London Society Women Find Patriotic Outlet on Stage.

London.—The women of London society who rushed into the hospitals as soon as war was declared and into the munition factories later on are discovering a much more pleasant method by which they can devote themselves to the welfare of the soldiers. Instead of learning to scrub floors and wash dishes in the military hospitals and submit to the rigid discipline of the regular nurses, or taking their places in the munition factories in overalls and caps, side by side with the workmen's daughters, the women who formerly were the life and soul of gayety and brilliant hospitality are finding a more congenial outlet for their patriotic endeavors on the stage—not private theatricals, where only a carefully selected crowd of their own friends would be allowed to see them, but in charity matinees and evening performances to which anybody can go who wants to pay the price of the tickets. And, having studied with application and indefatigable energy, they seem not to be afraid to appear with well known professionals, challenging comparison and at the same time mingling with the regular footlight favorites, as if such a thing as a social ladder did not exist.

Miss Muriel Wilson is the leader of society's public theatricals. She has been so long distinguished in amateur performances for the entertainment of King George's special circle that she has had an experience in interpreting dramatic roles which might be envied by any gifted professional. Miss Maxine Elliott has long been one of her most intimate friends. Miss Elizabeth Asquith, young in years but accustomed to taking part in private theatricals since she was a child, now frequently appears in public with professionals. Mrs. George Keppel does not appear herself, but she is allowing her two daughters to enter the ranks of the society belles whose acting all the world is privileged to see.

Lady Ashburton, the former Miss Frances Belmont of New York and an original Florodora girl at the Gaiety, is not only returning to the stage to take part in charity theatricals, but she is teaching her stepdaughter, Miss Aurea Baring, how to act. The young lady finds this more to her liking than her sister's position as maid of honor to Queen Mary. Both Lady Ashburton and Miss Baring will be members of the company which has been organized by Lord Rosslyn to appear at the Theater Royal, Winchester.

The Countess of Essex (nee Miss Adele Grant of New York) recently had an extremely successful charity matinee at the Gaiety theater, professionals and society amateurs being indiscriminately mixed up. Lady Diana Manners, the Duchess of Rutland's lovely daughter, took part, and Countess Pauline Pappenheim (Miss Wheeler of Philadelphia) looked radiant and youthful in one of the roles, in spite of the fact that her Bavarian husband is a prisoner of war in England, happening to be in the country when King George and his cousin, the German emperor, exchanged declarations of hostilities in August, 1914.

BOY, 13, IS YOUNGEST ORGANIST IN KANSAS

Keep Close Watch on Him Because of His Liking For All Outdoor Sports.

Centralia, Kan.—Centralia people declare the town has the youngest church organist in the state and probably the only boy organist. Edward Everett is only thirteen years old, and when in his knee pants suit he walks up into the choir gallery on Sunday mornings strangers might think he was going to pump the church organ or maybe sing in a children's chorus, but would never suspect he was the church organist for a real grownup choir, including music supervisors and teachers.

And when he gets on the bench at the organ you cannot see even the top of his head, so the music gives one the impression of coming from the organ without any assistance. When the services are over and Edward walks out strangers are astonished. He shirks none of the regular program of the services, but plays voluntaries and anthems as well as the hymns, and chooses difficult, high class music.

Edward is by no means a sissy, and for that reason every precaution is being taken to make sure of his appearance at the service. He is very fond of baseball and all other sports. This town has had considerable difficulty in keeping its women organists.

REMEMBERS OLD PRISONER

After an Elapse of Forty Years Chief Recalls First Arrest.

Bridgeport, Conn.—More than forty years ago, when Eugene Birmingham the present chief of police, joined this city's force, his first arrest was Michael Frawley, one of a gang of youths who came here from Derby and created a disturbance.

Recently Frawley, now an old man was again brought before him, this time for theft. Birmingham is noted for his ability to remember faces and names, and the moment he saw Frawley he recognized him as his first prisoner. Frawley is wanted in New Haven for stealing and will be taken there at the conclusion of his sentence here.

The Dardanelles.

The present name of Dardanelles was given to the ancient Hellespont from the two castles that protect the narrowest part of the strait and that themselves preserve the name of the famous city of Dardanus in the ancient Troad. The name of "Dardanelles" is briefly referred to as having been derived from the name of the city of Dardanus, but the Encyclopedia Britannica states that it is the twin castles for which the strait is actually named.—New York Times.

HER SPRING FROCK.

Here Is a Hint For the Spring Bridesmaid's Attire.

This delightful frock may be put up in silk net, voile or organdie. Over a ruffled petticoat foundation is a panniered drape, the pointed ends of which have shadow lace appliques. The simple bodice is chiefly of this lace, as are the girdle and shoulder straps. The girlishness of this design is fetching to a degree.

NEW WINDOW TREATMENT.

Suggestions For Renewing Your Curtains After Housecleaning.

New window treatment gives opportunity to make the most of cretonne—that most charming drapery stuff for summer rooms. There are long side curtains from rod to sill, made of flowered cretonne lined with tinted sateen in the usual manner. These hang from a brass rod, which, instead of going straight across the window, bulges up in a curve at the center, where the valance is shirred over it. This valance is very full and is in two portions, each section six inches deep at the center of the window and ten inches deep at the outer side, where it meets the side curtain. Cords are run through the lower edges of the section and left unfastened, to be pulled up when the valance is adjusted.

When curtains and valance have been shifted to the pole and the pole set in place over the window, the outer lower corners of the valance are tacked to the side curtains under rosettes of the cretonne. The edges at the center, where the valance is divided and is only six inches deep, are tacked together. Next the cords are drawn up toward the center, tied and tucked out of sight. This draws up the sloping edges of the valance in puckered effect, and the drawn up valance brings forward the side curtain at the point of the rosette. The whole effect is dainty and graceful and suggestive of a French boudoir. Shades of the cretonne instead of ordinary window shades will complete a charming window treatment.

For the Chinese room or any other room where black and white is desirable for background effects, there is a new window curtain material of woven black and white checks in very open effect, like coarse net. Graduated black stripes in clusters cross the fabric, and smart looking curtains are arranged so that the black striping comes directly across valance and side curtains about six inches from the top of the window.

To Be Well Groomed.

The woman who is particular about her home is not always the best dressed, and it often happens that a woman whose home is untidy looks stunning in her street clothes. The points in dress that most women overlook are veilings, footwear, gloves, hats and handkerchiefs.

Be sure that your glove is properly proportioned, and when you decide on a well fitting style buy no other. Dust a little powder into your glove before you wear it, and smooth all the seams straight. Have the lines on the backs properly over the center of the hands and the fingers in the tips of the glove.

Keep your hats in their boxes until you wish to use them, and return them at once when you take them off. Always brush them, especially if they are made of black velvet or a dark material that shows the dust. Never carry a soiled or even crumpled handkerchief. It is only a little thing, but it is the little things that help toward complete beauty.

Fillet of Bass, General Joffre.

Remove the fillets from a good sized bass, place in a well buttered saucepan and add some minced shallots and minced fresh mushrooms; poach in white wine. When done place them on a plate and thicken the sauce with some kneaded good butter, so that it will remain light. Season with salt, pepper and minced chives. Garnish with small bouquets of shrimps.

ELDERLY "RED CIRCLE" ACTOR OLD ONLY IN YEARS

Daniel Gilfether Can Beat Many a Younger Man in Athletic Prowess.

Daniel Gilfether, the venerable actor who plays "Circle Jim Borden," in the Pathe and Balboa serial, "The Red Circle," has carried a life insurance policy for over a quarter of a century. Lately he received from the insurance company an inquiry as to his health, and if he were still able to work. Mr. Gilfether replied as follows: "Take a look at the first two installments of 'The Red Circle' and you'll get your answer. In them you'll see me not only riding a bucking horse, but doing a hundred yard foot race in about twelve seconds. If you are still unconvinced, see me in the Pathe 'Who Pays?' series. I carry a woman up a flight of stairs, and am the chief factor in as lively a fight as you ever saw." Despite his sixty-four years the major is as lively as a cricket and always on the job.

"IRON CLAW" ACTORS SHOW NERVE.

Will Plunge In an Auto From Bridge Into the Water.

Edward Jose, who is producing "The Iron Claw," the Pathe serial, is lying awake nights scheming the best ways to get some of the spectacular effects demanded by the scenario. Each episode presents new problems that are handled with the utmost difficulty. The one for this week requires him to drive a motor car containing five persons from a draw bridge headlong into the water. Furthermore, he can't use dummies. The five unfortunates who must make the plunge include Creighton Hale and Sheldon Lewis. The death-defying dip will be pulled off at Toms River, N. J.

"NEW YORK" CONTAINS SOME FINE NIGHT PHOTOGRAPHY SCENES

Pathe—A. H. Woods Picture, Shows Broadway by Night.

Some very interesting and unusual scenes of Broadway by night, are shown in Pathe's "New York," adapted from A. H. Woods' play of the same name. The cameraman was stationed on the roof of an office building and was able to film a long stretch of the "great white way." The remarkable changing electric signs which make the street unlike any other in the world are clearly shown, and the processions of trolley cars and automobile headlights make endless lines of light which shoot up and down like the tail of a comet. No better examples of night photography in motion pictures have ever been made.

PATHE PRODUCER RUNS UP AGAINST THE BLUE LAWS

Geo. Fitzmaurice, who produced Pathe's "Big Jim Garrity," had his company down in Georgia for several weeks. The weather was so bad they were kept indoors for days at a stretch. "Fitz" finally lost all track of the passage of time. When Sunday came he braved the elements and went out into the back yard of the country hotel and practiced shooting at a mark. Within ten minutes he had been arrested, arraigned before the magistrate at his home and fined $25 and costs for "hunting on the Sabbath."

Robert Edeson, who stars in Kipling's "Light That Failed," which is being produced for Pathe, says the title is a good one, for the company was held up recently for three days owing to poor light when they were doing exteriors.

CONGRATULATES SLAYER.

Missouri Father Shakes Hands With Man Who Shot Son.

Jefferson City, Mo.—When a jury in the Cole county circuit court acquitted Oscar Camden, twenty years old, who shot and killed W. J. Crandall and wounded four others on Jan. 29, the first person to shake hands with Camden and congratulate him was W. D Crandall, father of the youth who was slain.

Camden was jointly charged with Harry Barron, nineteen, with killing Crandall. Camden's defense was that Crandall and others were following him with the intention of doing him bodily injury and that he fired the shotgun in self defense.

New Coat Model with Removable Collar.

For spring or summer this suit in cool green linen is admirable. The coat has double collars, one being of white linen.

A lovely shade of cool springtime green linen is used for this model, the coat being trimmed with square collars and revers. One of the collars is removable and is perforated at the front for a square outline if that is preferred to the shawl effect. The sleeves are of regulation coat design, cut in two pieces and finished with turn-back cuffs. In medium size the coat requires 2¼ yards 54-inch or 3⅝ yards 36-inch material. As most of the smart linens rarely exceed 40 inches in width, it will be necessary to cut the frock and the sleeve on an open width of material. If serge or cloth is used for the coat, fold the material as shown in the cutting guide.

The very important thing is to arrange the various parts of the pattern as indicated, placing each piece over a lengthwise thread where this is required and on the fold when necessary.

The belt is laid on a crosswise fold of material, if a stripe is used, for this is a favorite idea with French dressmakers. The coat hangs quite full below the waist. The removable collar frequently is made of heavy white linen. Sheer organdy, however, is quite as smart looking and probably will be preferred on very warm days.

Many smart, serviceable coats are developed in checked worsted, while others are made of white gabardine. The latter are plainly tailored and trimmed with large pearl buttons.

The new silks of the season offer ample opportunity for that elegant simplicity so earnestly sought and when understandingly handled are effective beyond description.

PINK IS POPULAR.

A Run on Pinks Shows Many Different Shades For Spring Wear.

Pink is the color of the day in woman's dress.

Pink is not an especially aesthetic color, but it is a becoming color. It brings out the best in its wearer's looks. It has been said that a French woman always knows enough to run her lingerie with pink ribbons, for she, wise woman, knows that there is charming softness about pink that is found in no other color.

Geranium, petunia, orchid red and other shades with much of the rosiness that makes pink becoming are among the newest colors. And then there are the rose shades we have worn all winter and much of the shade that generally goes by the name pink.

Pink in the form of flowers is much used on spring hats.

One thing that shows the popularity of pink is the rows and rows of bottles of liquid or powder to color water in which pink things are washed. Pink liquid or powder is it, and it is added to the rinsing water.

Kipling's Corncob.

"Did Kipling ever steal one of my corncob pipes?" said the late Mark Twain once.

"Never, and if he says so he's wrong. He tried to steal one and failed; then he tried to steal another, but I prevented the theft and gave it to him, probably the only pipe that Kipling ever got honestly."

Frangipan Cream Pie.

Cut three circular pieces of paste nine inches in diameter, place on baking sheet, prick with fork and bake. Put together with Frangipan cream, for which mix two-thirds cupful powdered sugar and one-third cupful flour, add yolks of three eggs and one whole egg, slightly beaten; one-fourth teaspoonful salt and one cupful scalded milk and cook over hot water fifteen minutes. Add two tablespoonfuls butter, two tablespoonfuls macaroons (dried and rolled), two-thirds teaspoonful vanilla and two-thirds teaspoonful lemon extract.

A Skin Tonic.

Salt is finer for the skin than any other known tonic if properly used. The face should never be washed in salt water when it is not properly clean, for salt is in the nature of an astringent and will contract the pores. It is excellent for enlarged pores, and the solution will act as a veritable stimulant to the whole skin.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

A rich looking outfit is this, the skirt being in satin striped taffeta and the skirt of white faille. Black silk braid trims the convertible collar and cuffs of the coat, but the belt is of black suede. The skirt is side plaited with panel front and back. In medium size the costume requires 4 yds. 40-inch silk and 4 yards 40-inch faille.

Pictorial Review Coat No. 6515. Sizes, 34 to 46 inches bust. Price 15 cents. Skirt No. 6308. Sizes, 22 to 34 inches waist. Price 15 cents.

Pictorial Review Patterns may be procured at the M. Katz & Co. Department store, Fulton.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

THE SALAD BOWL.

RICE AND VEGETABLE SALAD.—Materials: Two cupfuls of cold boiled rice, a cupful of celery cut in small pieces, a cupful of beets cut in small pieces, oil, vinegar, salt, pepper and lettuce.

Directions: Combine the rice, celery and beets. Mix with a French dressing.

Celery and Oyster Salad.—Materials: A pint of oysters, celery, lettuce, olive oil, vinegar, salt and pepper.

Directions: Cook the oysters in their own liquor until they puff up, strain and cool. Combine with an equal volume of celery cut into small pieces and mix with French dressing. Serve on lettuce leaves.

Pineapple Salad.—A can of sliced pineapple, two tablespoonfuls of seeded raisins, two cupfuls of shredded lettuce, half a cupful of French dressing. Line bowl or plate with lettuce, put the slice of pineapple on lettuce and three raisins in each center. Serve with French dressing.

Lettuce and Orange Salad.—A quick method of arranging the orange is to cut half inch slices across the orange. Cut these in quarters and remove as much membrane as possible. Arrange in rings again on the crisp lettuce leaves. Serve with French dressing.

A more delicate way of fixing the orange is to remove the membrane from each section. Arrange these on lettuce leaves.

Waldorf Salad.—Two cupfuls of diced apples, a cupful of hickory nut meats, a cupful of celery, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, half a cupful of sweet cream. Celery can be omitted if not handy. Mayonnaise dressing can be used instead of the sweet cream.

TO CHANGE MONEY

Counterfeiters' Activity Has Aroused Treasury Department.

MAY REDUCE BANKNOTES.

Assistant Chief W. H. Moran of Secret Service Says Increase of Spurious Money Is Due to Fact That Criminals Learned Photo-engraving.

Denver.—That very important and radical changes are to be made in the paper used and the printing of currency by the government is predicted by W. H. Moran, assistant chief of the United States secret service. The unusual activity of counterfeiters during the last several months has moved the treasury department to new efforts, and a system is being devised that it is believed will reduce counterfeiting to a minimum.

"The silk threads in our certificates," says Mr. Moran, "are entirely misleading to the general public. The average person holds the idea that the government has a secret process of manufacturing the paper on which banknotes are printed, whereas it is merely a distinctive process. A note may not appear just right, but when it shows the silk threads the public takes it for granted that it is good."

The existence of more than 200 different varieties of banknotes is pointed out by Mr. Moran as a condition that makes the raising of these certificates an easy matter by counterfeiters. The public cannot be expected to carry all these forms of notes in mind, he says, and as a result one, two, five and ten dollar certificates are being raised to notes of higher denomination quite generally.

Mr. Moran expects to see a new paper adopted by the government soon that will make counterfeiting more difficult and at the same time enable the public more readily to protect itself. He also expects that the 200 or more different types of banknotes will be reduced to possibly one of each denomination, eliminating a big part of the chance of their being "raised."

The increased activity of counterfeiters is attributed to improvements constantly being made in photo-engraving processes.

The art has advanced, says Mr. Moran, to the point where duplication is a science that many crooks have mastered. A case cited is that of James S. Vertress, arrested for the wholesale distribution of ten and twenty dollar gold certificates in Denver and vicinity in 1913.

Vertress was captured in Pennsylvania through the efforts of Assistant Chief Moran. Vertress attended a photographers' school and took a course in engraving before establishing a counterfeiting plant in an isolated mountain district in Kentucky.

A general warning is sounded by the government officer against men who are impersonating federal officers.

Many crooks are going about the country, he says, representing themselves to be agents of the department of justice, the revenue or the secret service departments. They defraud boarding houses, hotels and the people generally and in that way not only rob many victims, but bring discredit upon the agents of the government.

"Every government agent has proper identification papers," says Mr. Moran, "and where there is a doubt these papers should be demanded."

SHE SANG AWAY PAIN.

Little Girl Chanted Popular Tunes While Burns Were Dressed.

Kansas City.—"It's a long way to Tipperary; it's a long way to go."

The voice of Laura Johnson, seven years of age, floated from the operating room at the Emergency hospital and echoed through the building.

Nurses and doctors left their work, attracted by the unusual singing. One pushed open the door. On a white table lay the child. A nurse was bending over her. From the child's knees to her feet were burns.

During the painful proceedings the singing did not stop for more than a minute. Only once did the girl stop, when the pain caused her to bite her lip to keep back the tears. Then she began to sing "The Rosary."

The child was burned when she pulled a kettle of boiling soup off the stove. The child's mother, Mrs. Albert Johnson, carried her daughter to the hospital for treatment.

$200 FOR BUSHEL OF CORN.

It Took a Prize and Was Purchased by a Farmer's Paper.

Des Moines, Ia.—The Iowa Farmer of Des Moines paid $200 for a bushel of seed corn. It was purchased of Wayne W. Polk of Sidney, Fremont county, and is prize corn.

Polk won the highest award at the Panama exposition at San Francisco and also won first on ten ear sample, first on thirty ear sample and the prize for the champion bushel at the last state corn show held at Ames. The farm paper expects to use the corn in a subscription campaign.

$40,000 Left Out of Will.

Aurora, Ind.—It has been found that real estate belonging to the Jane Ann Gibson estate, estimated to be valued at $40,000, had never been mentioned in her will, and no disposition had been made of it. The estate, which had been settled, has been reopened, and Ambrose E. Nowlin, president of the Dearborn First National bank, has been appointed administrator.

ALLOWS PITTSBURGH PARKS FOR "SPOONING"

Superintendent of Police Extends Invitation to Boys and Girls and Married Persons Too.

Pittsburgh.—"I want to extend an invitation to all of Pittsburgh's lovers, and married persons as well, to use the city parks for 'spooning' if they so desire, and, further, any policeman who attempts to interfere will be 'put on the books,' on the ground that he is not humane," announced Superintendent of Police Matthews recently.

"Yes, sir, you can say for me that 'spooning' goes in the parks," continued Superintendent Matthews. "It is in the spring of the year especially that young hearts turn to love affairs, and love leads to marriage and happy homes, so why not let the boys and girls 'spoon'?"

EXCHANGES HER DOG FOR RAILROAD FARES

Woman Without Enough Money Trades Canine For Two Railway Tickets.

Wichita, Kan.—In the earlier days bartering was the method of exchange. The Indians used wampum, beads and other trinkets to secure things that they desired. All the records of bartering were placed in the discard recently at the Union station, when a woman exchanged a collie dog for two tickets to Fort Worth, Tex.

Mrs. Martha Fenton, an elderly woman, accompanied by her daughter and a collie dog, entered the office of Z. E. Brooks, city passenger agent, and informed him that they wanted to go to Fort Worth, Tex. He told them what it would cost, and they were dismayed. They informed him that it was urgent that they go, but that they did not have sufficient funds to defray their expenses. They were willing, the woman said, to trade the collie dog for the tickets. Mr. Brooks studied the matter for a moment, attempting to think of what use he could put a collie dog. Nothing came to his mind, and he said that he would find a purchaser. Mr. Wright, who was at the office at the time, stated that he would take it. The tickets were purchased, and with a parting pat and sorrowful look they bid goodby to their dog as Mr. Wright led him away.

HER SUICIDE EFFORTS STUCK.

New Orleans Girl Didn't Count on a Tarred Ferryboat Deck.

New Orleans.—Miss Annie Hendren, grieving over her mother's recent death, tried to drown herself in the Mississippi. She went aboard a ferryboat and dashed for the edge to take the plunge. But just there the tragedy became a comedy.

The deck had been freshly tarred, and Miss Hendren's feet stuck. She struggled, knocked over a pail of tar, sat down abruptly and stuck some more.

Gallant Captain David W. Garner had seen the girl rush and started for the rescue. A yard from her his own feet got stuck. He fell forward, and his hands stuck.

Rescuers crept cautiously forward while the captain and the would be suicide wrestled, struggled, heaved and finally tore themselves loose. The girl fled from the sticky deck toward safety, not the river.

REVOLT FIRST KNOWN IN N. Y.

Sympathizers in the Metropolis Knew of Casement's Action Ahead of the Rest of the World.

New York— Gaelic sympathizers and pro-German propagandists in New York city had information that a revolt had occurred in Dublin, Ireland, twenty-four hours before an official inkling of what had occurred filtered through the British censorship. Last Sunday night one of the men in the confidence of at least one leader of the "Free Ireland" movement informed one of his friends here that the revolt had taken place. He then declared that the Irish Volunteer were in supreme control o fDublin.

"Did you know that Germany has a new ally?" he asked one of his friends when they met in the cafe of the Waled pride,the Appam, across the Atlan-

"No," was the reply. "Who is it; Spain?"

"It's Ireland."

Then he told his friend of the situation in Dublin—a situation which was to startle the world when the news of it became known, late on Monday night and yesterday. He told of the treason of Sir Roger Casement and declared that the news of the rising had been received by Irish leaders here that (Sunday) nnight. He asserted that the Irish Volunteers had taken Dublin and were in control of the wireless telegraph stations there and those near to it.

He compared the exploits of the Irish Volunteer leaders t othose of Lieutenant Berg in taking the captured prize, the ppam, across the Atlantic to a neutral port. He declared that when the daring of these Irishmen is known to thew orld they will rival those of any Irishmen in history. Success, he declared, came to them simply because their plot was carried out so openly and "under the nose of the British in Ireland and the United States."

Munitions Sent to Volunteers

He said that at least one shipload of munitions of war was sent from this port to the Irish Volunteers, and that the vessel left here with the knowledge of the British consular authorities, who supposed that the war munitions were for England. He intimated that the vessel on board which they were sent from New York city was a British ship. From the time of her leaving this port Irish in New York city have been anx iously waiting news of the revolt.

"The uprising was general throughout Dublin," he said. "The Irish Volunteers are in complete control of the city."

More than a score of Irish here had this information last Sunday night, he declared. "There is general rejoicing in the success of the movement," he told his friend.

It was known to these men last Sunday night how far thep lot had gone before British authorities i nIreland knew of the presence there of Sir Roger Casement.

GREWSOME FIGHT ON CARSO FRONT

London—The Morning Post's correspondent on the Italian front writes:—

The hills of Carso might well be called hills of death. In no theatre of the war has there been seen such a Macabre and tragic battle front as the Carso. The main characteristic of this army, whose achievement is sometimes wrongly considered slow or too careful, is that it has never given up an inch of ground conquered on a front of more than 600 kilometres.

Each shell as it bursts scatters the rocks in a thousand splinters, deadly as bullets. This is one reason why the Italian losses are so heavy. Many corps have been living for months under these terrible conditions. It made me shudder to see many soldiers, exhausted by fatigue, asleep leaning against a trench parapet, with mangled remains unspeakably horrible sticking out in many places.

The Carso is the centre o fa furious struggle between the two armies, each endeavoring to wear the other down. The Austrians have concentrated about a millon men in front of the sector of Gorizia and on the Carso. The next offensive will be one of the greatest battles of the war. The territorial advantages gained in such a battle will seem small at least to those not knowing theg round, nevertheless the day of final struggle will determine victory or defeat. The Italians are waiting impatiently, sure of victory.

ROMANCE OF INK AND TYPE.

Young Woman's Contributions to Paper Result in Secret Wedding.

Nutley, N. J.—Announcement was made recently of the marriage of Miss Eleanor Bartlett Dale, daughter of Henry B. Dale, who was once a member of the firm of H. B. Claflin & Co. and Charles E. McCarthy of Newark. Mr. McCarthy, who is on the editorial staff of the Newark Evening News, was introduced to Miss Dale, who was interested in social work, when she began contributing to the paper last November.

Miss Dale, who lived at 14 Elm place, was married to Mr. McCarthy in the rectory of St. Bridget's Catholic church, Newark, by the Rev. Samuel B. Hodges on March 23. News of the ceremony came as a surprise to Miss Dale's friends, who had understood that she was engaged to a young man from Nutley.

The exact formula on every can

Even an expert cannot tell by looking at varnish whether it is adulterated. That is why it is so important that you should always buy varnish with a guarantee formula.

DEVOE
THE GUARANTEED
VERNOSITE THE LONG LIFE SPAR VARNISH
PALE INTERIOR VARNISH
MARBLE FLOOR FINISH

For outside work and all surfaces exposed to water, use Vernosite. It will not turn white from rain or sleet and the sun will not blister it.

For inside woodwork where extremely transparent varnish is required, use Pale Interior. It preserves the natural beauty of the wood, is hard to mar and won't scratch white.

For all floors use Marble Floor Finish. It waterproofs the wood, and enables it to withstand the severest wear and tear without marring.

We strongly recommend these three varnishes, because the guarantee formulas on the cans prove that they have been properly aged and that they are absolutely free from rosin and other adulterants.

Never take chances with varnish. Get Devoe and be sure.

YARMOUTH HIT BY GERMAN SHELL

London—The third Zeppelin attack on the English east coast in three days occurred late last night, when the German dirigible appeared over Kent. An official statement issued at two o'clock this morning follows:

"Zeppelins were reported over the east coast of Kent between ten and eleven o'clock on Wednesday night. No reports of their penetrating far inland have been received thus far, and as it is misty over east Kent, it is probable that they turned back before midnight. It is reported that one bomb was dropped, which fell into the sea."

It became known here yesterday that the German cruiser squadron which attacked the east coast early on Tuesday morning consisted of at least twenty vessels and that Yarmouth as well as Lowestoft was bombarded. A supplementary official statement issued during the day follows:

"The bombardment of Lowestoft and Yarmouth yesterday morning began at ten minutes past four o'clock and lasted about half an hour. Despite the heavy guns employed by the enemy ships the damage was relatively slight. A convalescent home, a swimming bath, the pier and forty dwelling housesw ere extensively damaged. Some two hundred dwelling houses were slightly damaged.

"Two men, one woman and one child were killed. Three persons were seriously wounded and nine slightly wounded.

"Fire was opened on Great Yarmouth at the same time. Here the damage was one large building seriously damaged by fire and another building slightly damaged by shell fire."

Unofficial advices say twenty-five casualties in dead and wounded resulted from the attack and the consequent running fight with the British light cruiser squadron and destroyers. All the British ships have returned safely, two of the light cruisers bearing signs that they had been hit by shells, but not in vital places. A few among the crews of the British war ships were wounded , but not seriously.

"SATISFIED," SAYS MR. GERARD

Berlin—I saw Mr. Gerard, the American Ambassador, today and asked him:—"Are you satisfied with the situation?"

He replied:—"I amalways satisfied."

Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the Imperial Chancellor, is expected back from the Kaiser's headquarters on Saturday with the answer to the note. Meanwhile the impression is growing that Germany will accede to the American demands.

Ten more Americans left Berlin today.

The feeling here tonight is less tense, as it is understood the greatest financiers in Germany are supporting Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg in his appeal to the Kaiser to abandon the submarine policy in favor of a program which will bring the greatest disappointment to Great Britain.

There is a feeling in diplomatic circles here that Germany is about to yield and abandon frightfulness at sea, then request America to join with Holland and other neutrals in a joint protest against the illegal methods adopted by Great Britain to increase the severity of the blockade.

Herr Theodor Wolff, editor-in-chief of the Berliner Tageblatt, again devotes an articles in his newspaprer to the support of the idea that a breach of relations between Germany and the United States must be avoided if possible upon any acceptable basis. Herr Wolff criticises President Wilson's accusation that submarines are sinking neutral ships in a pre-considered manner and in pursuance of methods laid down for them, but he declares it would be a mistake to answer sharp words with sharp words.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

"Fulton First, Last and All the Time"

He, who has the audacity, to smear the sacred word "MOTHER," is a coward, and a cur. No matter to what class the Mother belonged or belongs; no matter what her surroundings may have been or are, the word is sacred and should be respected by all. If you wish to go to hell quic, then insult the name "Mother."

* * *

In thep oorest districts, in the jails, in the rich man's house, in the cafes, in the churches, in the schools, everywhere, we hear some time or another that word that means so much to all of us: "Mother." And then there is another word closely connected with this word and that is "Home." Who has the courage to attack these two?

* * *

The spirit of cooperation is the spirit of REAL men and women and children. As soon as we cooperate with each other we have won the battle of life.

* * *

The watchword of modern times is: "Cooperation." Stick to it and you will find out that "all is well."

* * *

The spirit of the twentieth century is to do bigger and better things; there is no earthly use in yelling your head off about some minor thing, because you will lose time and in these days you can hardly afford to lose a minute. As soon as you give some of your time for the sake of talking about the other fellow, you will fail in your own business.

* * *

If you really want to do good, why not go straight to the fellow and talk to him and try to make him better. That is a good deal better than to say to someone: "Is not it too bad that So and So should go to the dogs?" Act and you will get results; refrain from knocking the members of humanity, because they are your BROTHERS AND SISTERS.

* * *

FULTON is as good a city as can be found in the United States of America. Be proud of your HOME TOWN and DEFEND it whenever and wherever possible.

FULTON has more good men and women and children than many other cities; and still we would not like to say anything against another town, because that town will have its good things also and it is not up to us to JUDGE.

* * *

Three cheers for the men and women and children in OUR city; every one of them is trying to do some good in this world.

* * *

The Chamber of Commerce is the only organization in the city of FULTON that will defend the city and its rights to the very limit.

Are you aware of the fact that one rare treat will be given you on May 2d, 1916, when the second concert of the FULTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA will take place with soloists of National reputation. Has that happened ever before in your town? Can't you see that we are getting more important every day?

* * *

FULTON is the BANNER BEARER CITY of good things; day and night we are trying to do the right things for the population and we have met with fine success so far, and the good work is going on.

* * *

MOTHER, thy name is written with GOLDEN letters in the book of life and we shall DEFEND that name until the last drop of blood in our body.

* * *

The Chamber of Commerce is standing for:
1st. A better FULTON.
2d. A bigger FULTON.
3d. A cleaner FULTON.
4th. A united Citizenship.
5 th. A beautiful FULTON.

And we ask you to fight for these things with us; result: "SUCCESS."

* * *

The Chamber of Commerce has for the last four months shown that anything and everything is possible. We claim to have made FULTON a little better; we claim that the citizens are more United than ever before; we claim that we are on the right road.

THAT SECOND CONCERT

Next Tuesday evening Fultonians will for the second time enthusiastically greet their little band of home musicians. The Symphony Orchestra members have unselfishly dedicated hours of work in the interest of building our little city, and who shall say how far into the future the arm of this tremendous influence shall not reach. Great and holy influences have been wrought thruout the ages by the power of music. Is it not possible then that the cultivation and growth of this new little plant, the Fulton Symphony Orchestra, makes possible the furthering of even greater ideals of the community.

Like ships that pass in the night, the real things, the true things of life ,are the things no man has seen, If we watch the faces of a group of people listening to good music, who can doubt that its message has been less than lofty, sweet and ennobling. We are told that man is "transformed by the renewing of his mind." If music may serve us, and our neighbor as well, let us get busy, oh, very busy, and encourage with might and main the effort of Fulton's Symphony Orchestra.

As a perfect bond, uniting all of Fulton's people, regardless of class, creed or sex, the Symphony Orchestra is the greatest agency our little city has ever known. Let us boost it; let us help it; let us advertise it; let's be proud of it—and buy our ticket now.

NOTHING TO HINDER THEM GOING TO WAR

There is a puzzle we cannot solve.

The number of fiery patriots who are convinced that Americans should shed their blood in the cause of the allies is considerable. There were enough of them to fill Carnegie Hall the other evening, and in addition there are enough editors to make up an imposing general staff.

And herein lies the puzzle: The sea lanes are open to travel. Anybody can go to England or France. Recruits are always welcome. If these fiery patriots are so anxious to shed American blood in the cause of the allies, why don't they go across and do a little shedding on their own account?

Why tarry at home when Humanity is so vociferously calling for help?—N. Y. American.

Opinions

UNPROFITABLE SKIRTS

The short skirt is expensive for the Canadian dames, because it prevents them from smuggling shoes across the border. The ladies of Windsor, in Canada, have been accustomed to cross the ferry to Detroit to buy the latest style of footwear and wear them home without paying duty One hundred of them who went over to Detroit last Friday and bought new shoes of American make were stopped at the Windsor ferry dock and compelled to pay 37 1-2 cents on every dollar of the cost of the shoes to the Canadian government, and fancy shoes are expensive. It was easy for the "spotters" to see the new shoes. The Windsor ladies are going to lengthen their skirts.—Watertown Times.

SOUND CITIZENSHIP

In our opinion this flurry with Germany has demonstrated two things, both of which should be gratifying to American citizens. The first is the general agreement to carry partisanship no farther than the water's edge and the second is the patriotic stand for this country of the great mass of natives of Germany or sons of Germans who are citizens of this republic. Few in number are the partisans who question whether the President is right or wrong, wise or unwise in his dealings with Germany. There is reason to believe that if we get into trouble with Germany, our first volunteer regiment will be composed of men from German families. A political party which stands by the President of opposite political faith in an international emergency or crisis honors itself. A nation which finds its adopted sons and their sons loyal to it even in opposition to the Fatherland they love, should have kindly feelings for those men.—Watertown Standard.

FARMERS AND THE TARIFF

It is not likely that American farmers will be misled by the Democratic contention that the low rates of the Underwood tariff will not do them any harm. At present the farmers of the United States are feeding the greatest armies the world has ever known, while the war has brought European farming practically to a standstill.

During the first year of the war our exportations of breadstuffs to Europe increased 213 per cent.; of horses, 2,490 per cent.; of mules, 2,795 per cent.; of hay, 233 per cent.; of meat and dairy products, 75 per cent.; and of sugar, 748 per cent. The cash gain in the value of these six classes of exports to France for the first year of the war, as compared with the year before, amounted to $620,951,000.

With the end of the war large proportions of the armies now fighting will return to farming and it is reasonable to expect a falling off of hundreds of millions in our agricultural exports. American farmers will then feel the unfavorable effect of the Democratic tariff law unless it shall have been radically revised.—Utica Dispatch.

IS SIR ROGERS CASEMENT CRAZY?

Traitor or madman, Sir Roger Casement, who in attempting to land German war material for rebels in Ireland was captured by the British patrol, is a melancholy figure. Sir A. Conan Doyle pronounced him mad after his visit to the German Foreign Office in November, 1914, where he went, as he said later, to induce the Imperial Government "to make clear its peaceful intentions toward Ireland" and thus "keep Irishmen from volunteering for a war that had no claim upon their patriotism or their honor." Casement was naturally accepted as a deserter and so employed. To any one who knew him, said Sir A. Conan Doyle, it was inconceivable that "he should in the full possession of his senses act as a triator to the country which had employed and honored him." Demented by tropical fervers, was the diagnosis of this generous Englishman.

That view will not find ready acceptance among a people who are giving their lives to save the empire; but it is a view the Government may find it convenient to entertain, lest Sir Roger Casement be added to the roll of Irish martyrs. He can be tried for treason on an array of evidence that is overwhelming. It could be shown that he had a strong prepossession in favor of Germany before the war. "This was due," Sir A .Conan Doyle has said, "to his belief that Germany was destined to challenge the Monroe Doctrine, which Sir Roger bitterly resented as being the ultimate cause of all that Putumayo barbarism which he had to investigate."

It is quite likely that in the discharge of his consular duties in tropical Africa and South America Sir Roger had learned the German point of view as to many things and had become indoctrinated, ending by preferring the society of Germans.

In fact, all that Casement did after his splendid work for humanity in the Congo and Putumayo, for which the British Government knighted, decorated and pensioned him, was lamentably perverse and irrational. And now he wears the stigma of treason and his life is forfeit.—N. Y. Sun.

ONCE MORE THE "YELLOW PERIL"

Seeing yellow is the specialty of "the yellows." The action of Viscount Chinda in entering a protest against a provision of the pending immigration bill, which impugns, at least by inference, the good faith of Japan, has been seized upon as an excuse foor raising the cry that the Japanese government is showing unfriendly aggressiveness toward the United States just at this time, when we have both Mexican and German complications on our hands. Of course, "yellows"could not be expected to stote the case as it is—that it is the House of Representatives which has undertaken to upset the altogether satisfactory status of the immigration situation and that the "psychological moment" is the making of Congress, not of Japan.

It is gratifying to learn from Washington that the provision of the bill to which the government of Japan especially objects will be stricken out by the Senate. It never should have been placed in the House bill.—N. Y. Herald.

Your Handwriting Shows What You Are

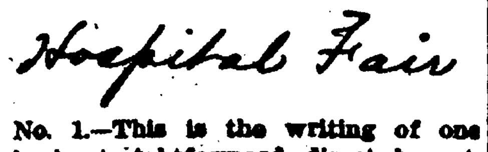
By WILLIAM LESLIE FRENCH

5.—Business Ability, Etc., Continued.

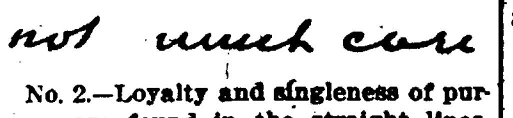
THE saying that "honesty is the best policy, but he who follows that policy is not an honest man," holds good, especially when the handwriting of people is considered. When we compare the pen signs of those who have shown by their records their real sincerity or the opposite we are able to classify those whom we do not know by comparison. And the fact is that by actual experience it holds good.

NO. 1.



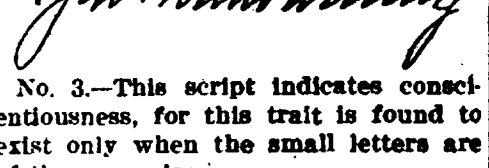
No. 1.—This is the writing of one who is straightforward, direct, honest, whose sincerity would be unquestioned. The base line is even, no change in the direction of the slope, no variations in the height of words and letters. With these traits there is also the uniform pressure showing self restraint and that fixedness of purpose which would not permit of any reliable action. You find many writers who show these signs, even though the slant may be different.

NO. 2.



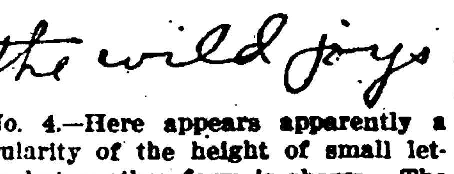
No. 2.—Loyalty and singleness of purpose are found in the straight lines, calm pressure, the small letters, such as "a" and "o," open at the top.

NO. 3.



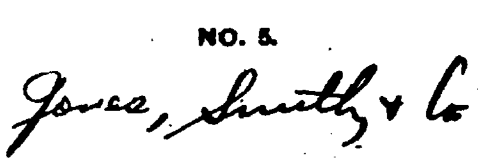
No. 3.—This script indicates conscientiousness, for this trait is found to exist only when the small letters are of the same size.

NO. 4.



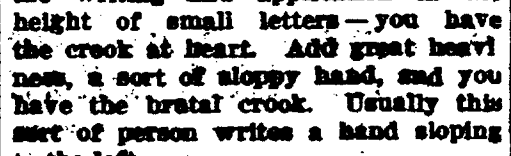
No. 4.—Here appears apparently a regularity of the height of small letters, but another form is shown. The writing wavers at the bottom, which denotes the tendency to lie. On account of this sign this person would not be very reliable, would evade the question and make excuses. In countless specimens this curve at the bottom of the line is found. It may be counteracted, however, by the various forms denoting will power to which reference has been made.

NO. 5.



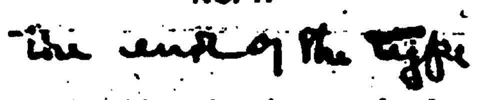
No. 5.—This writing is evidently not written by one who has a strong will. The uneven pressure, also the abbreviated finals and cramping together of the small letters—the signs of selfishness—and sharpening of "m" and "n" at the top—cunning—would place such a person in the class of one who would succumb to temptation were it presented—the possible crook in the making. You will find these signs appearing everywhere.

NO. 6.



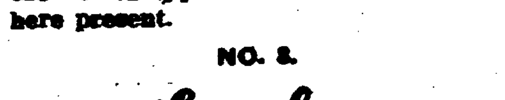
No. 6.—Again, when the writing shows all of these signs with so much mental energy and acuteness as appear in this specimen—the rapidity of the writing and application in the height of small letters—you have the crook at heart. Add great heavi ness, a sort of sloppy hand, and you have the brutal crook. Usually this sort of person writes a hand sloping to the left.

NO. 7.



No. 7.—This writer is one who does not try to resist. The will power varies. See the "t" crossings—somewhat slovenly and a brutal bar across the "t" in type. All other forms are here present.

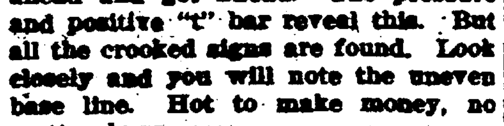
NO. 8.



No. 8.—Here is the type of writing showing that determination to go ahead and get ahead. The pressure and positive "t" bar reveal this. But all the crooked signs are found. Look closely and you will note the uneven base line. Hot to make money, no matter how.

It is worth noting that the script of many people who have every indication of being straight will betray crookedness, by the very force and ambition revealed.

NO. 9.



No. 9.—No one would think of em ploying a person who sprawls all over the paper as this writer. The entire specimen spells carelessness, disorder and lack of industry. He lazies around and would be utterly lacking in the qualities which make for system. Where you find irregular signs, orig inal, poor punctuation and uneven pressure, the "t" crossings being weak, then you can look for people who would be unsuccessful in business.

TRAIN SPEED AND WORKING HOURS

In referring to a statement which recently appeared in these columns asserting that if the demand for an eight-hour wage day and "time and a half" for overtime were granted, the railroads would increase the speed of freight trains so much that there would be no substantial increase in overtime pay, and that merchants and manufacturers try to buy in as small quantities as possible and make quick turnovers in their stock, but with slow freight shipments they were unable to do this, and railroads, to increase their train earnings per mile, are loading their locomotives with every car they can possibly pull, an official of the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh Railway said:

"Conductors and locomotive engineers know as well as anybody that the slow freights, on which the high train-loading is chiefly made, do not usually carry the kind of freight or merchandise which merchants buy for immediate requirements. Of the slow freight trains only local or way freights carry such tonnage, and these make slow time between division points chiefly because of frequent stops. They perform a service which cannot economically be rendered in any other way.

"Dealers in coal, ore, stone, grain, lumber and a hundred kindred commodities do not order in as small quantities as possible. Such articles move at rates which compel the carriers to transport them at the lowest possible cost, or, in other words, in large train loads and at slow speed. If such trains are to be reduced in length so that they may be reasonably sure of getting over the division in eight hours, the number of trains and of train crews will be automatically increased. The effect upon the payrolls will be much the same as though large overtime bills were incurred.

"What would be the attitude of the Interstate Commerce Commission in rate cases if the carriers met the demands of the men and cut their freight trains in two? In at least two important rate cases the commission inquired diligently into the possibility of further raising the average loading of freight trains. In its first adverse decision of the Eastern rate case in 1914 the Commission made much of the testimony of railroad executives to the effect that further progress in that direction was probable.

"To take advice of the brotherhoods would be to undo much of what the railroads have accomplished toward reducing the unit cost of transportation in the past twenty years and to shut the doors to further economies by the same means. Would the Commission in fixing rates, promptly allow for the consequences of such a step if the railroads took it? Or would it read them a lecture upon improvident management?

"For brotherhoods to say that it is impossible for merchants to buy in small quantities and make quick turnovers argues a lack of candor. They know that the co called "expedited service," an example of which are the 60-hour freights between New York and Chicago, exists just to meet the demand. If they wish to court the favor of the merchants in or out of the large centers of production they will have to do it otherwise than upon the carriers methods of operation which will ultimately raise freight rates far above their present level."

FINNEGAN IS WANTED ALL OVER THE STATES

At the Quirk theatre on next Tuesday night, May 2nd, with the second concert by Fulton Symphony Orchestra will be the great musical festival which will give the music-loving patrons of this city an opportunity of hearing two great singers, John Finnegan, the famous Irish tenor from St. Patrick's cathedral, New York city, and Mary Carson of the Century and Boston Grand Opera companies. These two great artists are so well known that the simple announcement should be enough to sell every seat at the advance sale.

John Finnegan is in demand in all parts of the country, as he is equal to John McCormack, except that he has not been on tour in this country until the present season. He has been selected as soloist with Victor Herbert's famous orchestra, which plays engagements at Syracuse on May 30. Mary Carson, prima donna soprano, is not only known in the opera field but also is a great favorite on the Edison records, which has produced her entire repetoire of songs. George Roberts, now on tour with these artists, will play the accompaniments.

It is safe to predict that the largest house in the history of any concert ever given in this city will fill the Quirk theatre on next Tuesday evening.

The Newark, N. J., Evening News speaks of Mr. Finnegan's voice as follows:

"Of special merit was the manner in which the choristers, with the assistance of John Finnegan, who took the tenor solo, sang Kremser's "Hymn to the Madonna." Mr. Finnegan, who is soloist in St. Patrick's Cathedral, Manhattan, possesses a voice of bell-like timbre that was admirably suited to the ecclesiastical character of the anthem, and this as much as anything contributed to the satisfaction with which this number was received."

NEW YORK STATE ANSWERS 'READY'

LEGISLATURE VOTES UNANIMOUSLY TO ASSIST THE PRESIDENT IN UPHOLDING THE NATIONAL HONOR.

PARTY DIVISIONS FORGOTTEN

When the Brown Resolution Went Through in the Last Hours of the Session—Impressive Scenes in Both Houses.

Albany.—The temper of New York State on the subject of preparedness was shown clearly on the closing day of the session of the Legislature when both houses without a dissenting vote and with enthusiasm that was impressive adopted the Brown resolution declaring that the Legislature was ready to meet at a moment's notice to back up the President in maintaining the honor of the country.

While the idea originated with the Republicans it received just as hearty support from the Democratic minority as it did from the majority. There was not even the suggestion of any division along party lines.

Party lines were forgotten and every member of the Legislature cast his vote as a patriotic American citizen.

The situation was dramatic in the highest degree.

The Legislature had practically completed its labors and was ready to adjourn. The hour of noon had passed. The boys' band, which for many years has played the session out, was in its place in the Assembly gallery and the fall of the gavels in both houses marking the close of the 1916 session was looked upon almost as a matter of minutes.

Then, without any preliminary warning, the Senate took a recess and the Republican senators went into conference in the finance committee room behind closed doors.

Shortly afterwards a committee of five: Majority Leader Brown, and Senators Stivers, Argetsinger, Wicks and Mills came out and visited the executive chamber where they were closeted with Governor Whitman and it was rumored that the international crisis disclosed by President Wilson's address before Congress was the cause of the action of the Republican senators.

The responsibility resting upon the members of the Legislature in so critical a time was discussed and the feeling was expressed that, in view of the fact that the critical condition of our international relations might necessitate very prompt action by the authorities of every state in the Union, the Legislature of New York, instead of adjourning sine die, should stand in recess and be ready to resume sessions at a moment's notice to meet any contingency that might arise.

Upon the return of the committee which conferred with the Governor and after a free and full discussion of the question, a committee of one was appointed to draft a resolution and Senator Brown was named as such committee.

As soon as the resolution had been prepared and approved by the conference the Senate was reconvened.

By that time the purpose of the recess was known to every Senator and with the fall of the gavel calling the Senate to order absolute and impressive silence prevailed throughout the chamber while the resolution was read.

It was adopted by unanimous consent without comment and rushed over to the Assembly.

In the lower house, the reading of the resolution was greeted with cheers and it was adopted by a unanimous vote, all the members rising.

Nothing approaching in solemnity and impressiveness the scene attending the adoption of the resolution has been seen in the New York Legislature since the passage of the bill appropriating a million dollars by the Legislature of 1898 to put into the field New York State's quota of troops for the Spanish-American war then just beginning.

The full text of the resolution follows:

"Whereas, a crisis in the relations of the United States and foreign nations was disclosed by the address of the President of the United States yesterday before the joint session of congress; and

"Whereas, the condition of the relations of the nation with foreign governments may at any moment make necessary action on the part of the state in upholding the nation's honor

"Resolved, that the legislature pledges to the President and congress its unqualified support in any action necessary to maintain that honor and will support the chief executive of this state in any exercise of authority for that purpose to the full extent of the resources of the state.

"Resolved, that the legislature is ready to be convened at any moment to carry out the full purpose of this resolution."

A SPRING DECALOGUE.

Dr. S. J. Crumbine, secretary of the Kansas board of health, has just issued a new decalogue, spring of 1916 model. Here it is:

First.—Thou shouldst cease thy hibernation and come out in the open, for it is now spring.

Second.—Thou shouldst remember the springtime is a good time to clear away the rubbish and waste.

Third.—Thou shalt not permit any fly breeding places on thy premises.

Fourth.—Remember cleanup week and keep it wholly.

Fifth.—Remember thy friends the rake and the hoe, for though they produce weariness of the flesh they also produce strength of arm and good red blood.

Sixth.—Thou shalt dress thyself according to the weather and not according to the almanac.

Seventh.—Thou shalt eat greens and drink an abundance of water to thin the blood, thereby saving thy money usually spent for blood purifiers.

Eighth.—Fret not thyself because of the smudge your neighbor is making in burning his trash.

Ninth.—Thou shalt swat the fly, bat the rat and "raus mit" the mouse.

Tenth.—As the people are so shall the community be. Keep clean.

A WOMAN CIVIC WORKER.

Miss Blanche Geary Labors to Better Living Conditions of Working Girls.

The woman who is doing the most for housing conditions of women and girls in industry in America today is not an American. She is an Englishwoman, Miss Blanche Geary, who gave up a musical career in London because she felt that teaching music to a sort of after dinner society set of pupils wasn't a big enough field for one's whole and best effort. The problem of properly housing the members of society in less fortunate circumstances forced to live in undesirable tenements seemed to her a better service. After four years' volunteer training and experience in managing certain model tenement buildings in London, she heard from an American woman of a homes company in New York and decided to come to America and see what opportunities lay in that field here. It took her some time to convince the company that a woman could take charge of that kind of work, but she succeeded. When she began there were exactly 150 tenants, and in eight years under her management, which included the repairing, hiring of employees, choosing of tenants and the collection of rents, the number had increased to 2,864.

It was in this work that the national board of the Young Women's Christian association found her and came to her for advice on new buildings which they were about to erect. When the national board was ready to add an economic and buildings specialist to its staff Miss Geary was offered that position, and because she saw in it an opportunity for doing for girls throughout the whole country what she had wanted her firm to do in New York city Miss Geary accepted. She is now the consulting specialist for the 976 associations on all matters pertaining to her particular work.

She is called on to help select sites for buildings, to go over all blue print plans, making such changes as she deems advisable for the work to be done, to advise on building materials, cafeteria equipment and management and everything pertaining to the economic status of the association. Her office at headquarters looks like that of the busiest business man. She has the regulation architect's cabinets for materials and plans, and from the blue prints always spread out on her large work table one might call her office an architect's laboratory.

Miss Geary says the association wants to demonstrate the ideal family life, as far as it can be made possible, with large numbers under one roof; it wants to develop a spirit of independence and self government and to grant to the utmost possible extent the freedom which stops short of license—that is, freedom plus standards.

A Safety Forum.

The Portland (Ore.) chamber of commerce has organized the first safety forum to be established in the United States. It is a combination of delegates from the safety commission, employers and employees, and started with a membership of 147. The first meeting was attended by members of firms, foremen and workmen in many of the factories of the city, the department stores and from transportation companies.

The forum will hold quarterly meetings and will discuss and plan safety measures that may be practical and which may conserve life, limbs and property everywhere. Between meetings strong committees will be at work in all occupations where danger exists.

It is considered proper that the first forum in the United States should be organized in Portland, the home of B. F. Boynton, who is universally recognized as the father of safety first. Mr. Boynton was the first to begin a campaign of education along these lines, and from his effort has come the worldwide movement.—Town Development Magazine.

Days You'll Never Forget

GERMANS ACTIVE.

Miniature Zeppelin Dropping Bombs on England One of Former Sea Raiders' Amusements—Party Finds Everything Spick and Span.

Norfolk, Va.—Many people would be surprised to learn that in neutral America a German Zeppelin is flying around dropping bombs on English soil, or at least English cliffs, and being in return bombarded by anti-air craft guns.

Time hangs heavy on the hands of the crew of the interned cruiser Eitel Friedrich, which is tied up at the navy yard here. Since the sailors took to escaping last summer the restrictions have been rigidly enforced, and any one sailing past the big boat before and since would be struck by the change in the appearance of the brass and wood work, which is now immaculately polished and scraped in an effort to kill time. German sailors can do many wonderful things, but even they are hard put to it to invent occupations for hundreds of active men, and Commander Thierichens asked the representative of a society in New York last autumn to send Christmas presents of games and puzzles and indoor sports rather than handkerchiefs and cakes and clothing. And lately a new diversion has been attempted.

From the clinkers of the furnace room the cliffs of Dover have been constructed at one end of the big dining saloon. They have been built in accurate imitation of the real ones and colored white with salt. On top is a lighthouse with air guns mounted at the base. At the farther end of the room rises a miniature Zeppelin numbered 1820, which flies around the room by electricity several times. It hovers for a moment over the lighthouse, drops several miniature bombs and makes its escape while the guns go off automatically and bombard the enemy craft with missiles.

After hearing of these performances a correspondent and some friends visited the German encampment. Landing at the navy yard, they passed the huge drydocks in which ships of tremendous tonnage looked like pygmies, and soon their attention was called to a sturdy, high bow ship, flying the fisheries flag. Her sides looked of enormous strength, being rounded away from a sharp bow in an unusual way. This was the famous Roosevelt, Peary's arctic ship, now in government employment to protect the seal fisheries.

One of the most interesting sights at Norfolk is the model village built by the German sailors.

At first sight the village resembled an arid waste of slag heaps, with piles of condemned material scattered all over, cinders, beaten earth and rubbish everywhere—not a tree, not a spear of grass, the acme of desolation. As they advanced they saw a pygmy village built in close formation—curious little houses in miniature yards, carved and painted in fantastic ways. This is the village the interned sailors are building out of waste material.

Before visiting it they went aboard the Eitel Friedrich, which is tied up at the dock and on which the sailors of both cruisers are now living.

As they were leaving the boat Captain Thierfelder of the Kronprinz Wilhelm joined them and escorted them to the village. Everything was found in spick and span shape, and resemblances of home scenes were many.

Twins Seek to Divorce Twins.

Wauseon, O.—On Oct. 20, 1909, Arnold and Harold Meintzer, twins, married Elda and Elva Conklin, also twins. Petitions for divorce were filed simultaneously in the Fulton common pleas court recently by the Meintzer brothers, who claim their wives deserted them on the same day, March 4, 1913.

VALE OF KASHMIR.

A Beautiful Spot With a Record of Natural Calamities.

Beautiful and unfortunate is the wonderful vale of Kashmir, lying high among the Himalayas, ringed with gigantic peaks, "clothed in evergreen fir and deodar, the light green bed of Jehlam strung across its dun breast like a jade necklace, blushing with the ghostly pink of peach and plum blossoms."

Kashmir has a persistent record of natural calamity. Jehlam overflows its banks at intervals and sends destroying floods that wipe out whole districts. The giant peaks around the valley stir now and again in their sleep of ages and shake the flats with mighty earthquakes. Famine and cholera kill more than the river and the trembling mountains.

Fire frequently sweeps the fields and cities. As one looks up at the hills on either side from the bed of Jehlam it is seen that one slope is covered with cool, dark forest, while the other grows nothing but long grass. A spark in this grass starts the blaze. Among the Himalayas the air is biting cold and the Kashmiri carries a little charcoal brazier under his robe to warm his body. These peripatetic furnaces start many a flame.

With a history dotted with such calamitous landmarks the people of Kashmir have acquired a pessimistic expression and disposition. They are superstitious, too, ascribing all manner of miraculous attributes and fairy inhabitants to the mountain springs.—Argonaut.

Magic of a Century.

An examination of American cities a century ago presents many curiosities. In 1800 not New York, but Philadelphia, was our largest city—a pre-eminence it held until 1830. After Philadelphia, New York, Baltimore and Boston, Charleston, S. C., was the largest American city. But I defy any one to give the name of the sixth largest American town in 1800. It was Northern Liberties. How many Americans today ever heard of this metropolis? An antiquarian research discloses that it is now part of Philadelphia. After Northern Liberties, our biggest city was Southwark, Pa.; then came Salem, Mass. Such were the places a hundred years ago which entered in the competition for primacy.—World's Work.

HOPE OF LABOR.

In this labor movement we gather as the representatives and by direction of our organized fellow workers, and it is upon the labor movement that the toilers and the lovers of human freedom have set their hearts and hopes. They realize that the trade union movement of America is the historically developed potential force which bears the brunt and scars of battle and which makes sacrifices for right and justice for all, for all time. There is not a wrong against which we fail to protest or seek to remedy; there is not a right to which any of our fellows are entitled which it is not our duty, mission and work and struggle to attain. So long as there shall remain a wrong unrighted or a right denied there will be ample work for the labor movement to do.—Samuel Gompers.

LABOR'S PEACE CONGRESS.

President Gompers of A. F. of L. Issues Call to World's Workers.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, has issued an address to world labor in pursuance of the resolution adopted in the convention of the federation in November, 1914. He said in part:

The workers can refuse to be victims of the blunderers, the evil plans, the ambitions, of those responsible for this war. In their struggle against oppression have been born yearnings for human freedom, for better opportunities, for justice in life and work. During the centuries they have made progress—sometimes slow, it is true, but always progress. It has been a long fight from slavery to the present degree of freedom.

There is great opportunity in the immediate future for democracy and freedom. A century ago the feudal system died in the Napoleonic wars that convulsed Europe, and the third estate established their right to freedom and participation in the affairs of government and society.

Slowly but surely the workers have been making demands for recognition of their rights as human beings and as members of society and have established many of them.

Since the outbreak of war their economic importance, their political and military power have been tacitly and often officially recognized. Statesmen have recognized that organizations of wage earners are an integral part of organized society—part of the vitals of the nation.

In appreciation of their dignity and value it is the duty of the wage earners to make demands upon the world assembled in the next world congress that nothing touching the lives of the workers shall be determined without taking counsel with them. Such a demand made by the personal representatives of the world's wage earners assembled in the same time and at the same place as the world peace conference would have a tremendous effect upon the spirit of that congress.

Such a demand would set high standards of democracy and would give prominence to principles of human welfare that could not be ignored.

The labor movement is the great humanizing, democratizing influence in the affairs of nations, and it must have a place wherever the welfare of wage earners is concerned. The problem is to have the fullest and the best representation in the labor congress, and through it a voice and influence in the world congress.

BONUS FOR WORKERS.

General Electric Company to Distribute Millions to Employees.

The General Electric company of Schenectady, N. Y., and the plants of the company in other cities, have announced that all employees in the service of the company for five years or more would receive a bonus of 5 per cent of a year's salary, payable in two installments. It is estimated the company will distribute between $3,000,000 and $5,000,000 in this way. According to the bulletin, the first installment will be payable on or before Aug. 1 and will be 5 per cent of the individual earnings for the six months ending June 30; the second on Feb. 1, 1917, on earnings for the six months ending Dec. 31. The announcement is made by E. W. Rice, Jr., president. By the two payment plan many who would not participate in the first distribution will share in the second, having completed the five years' service between June 30 and Dec. 31.

HOW

To Keep the Windmill In Good Running Order

A GREAT many people seem to have the idea that a windmill is some sort of a perpetual motion machine which needs little if any care. As a matter of fact a windmill is a machine, and as such needs a reasonable amount of care, particularly in the way of lubrication.

The windmill should be gone over from time to time with a wrench and the bolts tightened up and kept in shape so that there will be no possibility of the windmill or tower twisting in the heavy breezes.

The oil holes in the windmill sometimes become gummed up and need to be cleaned out. A good grade of oil will help this. When the oil holes become gummed up oil may be put in from above, and yet the bearings may run dry for a long time.

Nothing so damages the looks of a farm and gives such a "down and out" appearance as a disreputable windmill. The windmill kept up in good shape and painted gives a trim, neat effect to the place. The steel windmill tower when first put up with a new coat of paint presents a very pleasing appearance, and with ordinary care the metal itself will last a lifetime. If paint is not used from time to time it will soon become rusty and gradually work toward the junk heap.

It is well when getting a windmill to get one with a step attachment so that it will be easy to get up to the platform of the tower.

Keeping the windmill up in shape and keeping the bearings well oiled will make the windmill run in lighter breezes in the summer when it is needed the most.

FOR AUTOISTS.

How to Spare Your Tires When You Feel Like Speeding.

Rough streets tempt one to drive in car tracks. It is more comfortable for the passengers and may be economy to protect the car from bumps and vibration. The tires won't be injured noticeably by doing this occasionally—it is continued practice that shortens the mileage. Quite often the pavement along inside edges of rails is rough and may result in cuts to the rubber and bruises to the fabric. Driving over street car track switches at the pointed frogs may cut the tires seriously. Rails on hills are to be avoided as much as possible, as they usually have sharp, thin splinters on the edges, which are liable to cut or puncture the tires. Be careful when driving on wet rails. Quick twisting of the front wheels may result in accident from rear of car skidding sidewise when leaving rails. Edges of the rails wear away the tread rubber and cause a sharp bending action of the fabric, which will usually develop breaks inside. It is just a matter of time until the rubber cover loosens underneath and the fabric weakens from moisture and decay. Later an unusual bump or shock may result in a blowout while running on a perfectly smooth street or road. It is careless, indeed, to spoil a tire in this manner when possible to secure so much more mileage from it if used correctly, or if reversed on the wheel—namely, the worn side turned toward the car. A competent workman can make satisfactory repairs if only the tread rubber be worn and the tire has not been neglected too long.

Urge Larger Compensation.

The executive committee of the Michigan State Federation of Labor has decided to submit to the referendum eleven amendments to the workmen's compensation law. These include increasing rates from 50 to 66 2-3 per cent; providing for earlier and longer medical attendance; providing for dependents; compensation for disfigurements and injuries not specified in the present law and increased compensation for permanent disabilities.

A Compensation Decision.

W. B. Scott of the Pennsylvania workmen's compensation board has decided that any wages paid by an employer to an employee for the first two weeks after the latter's injury are not to be included in the compensation the employee receives. The law provides that compensation starts two weeks after injury.

SMITH—BRENNAN

Mr. Fred Smith, of Watertown, claimed as his bride yesterday morning, Miss Virginia Brennan, of West 4th street, this city. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Charles Olmstead at the home of the bride. The young people left immediately after the ceremony for New York and upon returning they will make their home in Watertown, with the exception of the time spent in the pursuit of the groom's vocation as an attache of the bridge department of the N. Y. C.

THE QUIRK TODAY

There is a great photodrama scheduled for presentation at the Quirk Theatre today. It is called "The Woman in 47," and has Alice Brady, the celebrated screen star, in the principal part. Coming as the next release on the Equitable program, it is a striking feature in a long list of striking features.

There is not a dull inch in the full five reels of film, and there is no slackening of attention permitted as the development of the story unfolds itself.

"Jealousy," a one reel United film,

"Go Ye Therefore, and Make Disciples of All Nations"

Dr. Peacock chose for his text last night, Matthew 28; 19-20: "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all nations, baptising them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; Teaching them to observe all thingsw hatsoever I have commanded you; and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

Jesus Christ had a passion for souls. He was very much interested in the spiritual welfare of men and women. And He was anxious to have His disciples manifest the same spirit toward them. They had been saved through Jesus Christ, and He desired them to go out into the whole world, and help to bring others into the Kingdom of God. The disciples were obedient to this command. They tarried in Jerusalem until they had received power from on high, and then went out to preach the unsearchable riches of the Gospel of Jesus Christ to a lost world. You all know the result. Thousands of people were brought into the Kingdom of God. Jesus wonderfully blessed their efforts for they had a passion for souls.

Friends, if youh ave a desire to be useful in the service of God, you must have a passion for souls. You must be baptised with the Holy Spirit. Some times we wonder why the Apostles of Jesus were able to accomplish such a work on the day of Pentecost. We wonder how they happened to have such wonderful power over the vast multitude assembled on that occosion, but the cause is not far to seek. They were filled with the Holy Spirit. Every thought, every word, every movement, every prayer, was guided by the Spirit of God. It isn't any mystery to me that they were able to do such a wonderful work. Men could do the same thing today if they were only willing to let the Lord use them in His service. The trouble with the majority of people is this: they think they know more about how the work of the Lord should be conducted than God himself. They have their ideas, and if the rest of the people are not willing to follow their plans they refuse to work. This is a contemptible spirit. It is a great hindrance to the work of the Lord. And the people who have such a spirit will never win many to a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ. Men must reach the place where they are willing to sacrifice self, and all selfish interests, before the Lord can use them.

Of One Mind and Spirit

If the disciples had questioned and quibbled and wrangled among themselves on the day of Pentecost about who would do the preaching, and who would do the praying, and who would do the personal work, and discussed the method by which the revival should be conducted, they would have failed utterly. The blessing would not have come. They were all of one mind, and of one spirit and God gave them the blessing. They believed the words of Jesus. They took Him at His word. They received the blessing.

Have you ever stopped to think that we could have penteeostal times in our churches all the time, if we were willing to meet the conditions? God's Spirit is just as powerful today as He was on the day of Pentecost. I cannot find any place in the word of God where we are told that the Spirit has lost His power. We have lost our power because we have not received the baptism of the Holy Spirit. A man might be the strongest man intellectually the church has ever known, he might be the most eloquent man the church has, he might be the best sermonizer in the world, he might be a mighty orator, but without the Holy Spirit he will be as sounding brass or claging cymbal in the service of the Master. Greek and Hebrew roots will never make a soul winner without the love of Jesus Christ in the heart.

God Uses Different Types

Some people are praying for an old fashioned revival, some are trying to bring about a new style of evangelism. Now, I think it foolishness to waste our time thinking about an old fashioned revival. It is foolishness to pray for the new evangelism. The thing we should do is to pray for the power of the Holy Ghost, and permit God to conduct the revival in His own way.

If you know anything about the great evangelistic campaigns we have had in this country and in other countries you know that God has used men of different types to accomplish His purpose. God can bring the revival if He can just find the men who are willing to do His biding. Finney was altogether different from Moody. Wesley and Whitefield were altogether different from either Finney or Moody. Yet all of these men were used by the Lord in accomplishing His purpose.

Take as an example two men who are doing a mighty work in the evangelistic field today, Billy Sunday and Gypsy Smith. Ith as been my privilege to hear both. I know the opinions of many people in regard to these men. Men are comparing them. One will say, I would not work with Sunday, he is so vulgar. I do not like his methods. Another will say: Gypsy Smith is my style of an evangelist. I think he is a God-called and a Christ-sent man. He is doing the work of the Lord. I want to say to you in all kindness, never lift up your hand against God's annointed The man who refuses to work with Sunday needs to have his religion fixed up. To my mind, he is the greatest living evangelist in the world. So many people think we should convert men and women along social ethical lines. This is all well enough, but if we leave out of our ministry the notes of blood redemption and spiritual regeneration, our ministry will miss the mark and our preaching will be a failure.

Jesus Christ Is Lord

When Peter preached on the day of Pentecost, he did not stand up there and read a nicely written essay, he did not tell the people that they should be converted along social and ethical lines. He did not preach in front of the people and wonder if they would like it. He preached to the people, and the difference between the preaching that does nothing and the preaching that brings men and women to the foot of the cross and makes them cry out: "What must I do to be saved?" is the difference between preaching before people and preaching to people. And my friends, the only kind of preaching that will win men and women to Christ is the preaching that makes men and women realize they are sinners and that they need a Savior.

If men would preach more about Jesus Christ as the Lord of the univrse and not so much about Buddha and Confucius, Browning and Tennyson more people would be brought into the Kingdom. The man with a passion for souls will preach Jesus Christ and Him crucified, and will not be afraid to denounce sin. They have become so refined and cultured that they cannot present the doctrine of hell to the people. They make no effort to denounce the prevailing sins of the day They just put in their time, draw their salaries and permit the people to keep on in their wicked ways Now the man who has a passion for souls will denounce every known form of sin, and will warn people to flee from the wrath to come, and offer them salvation through Jesus Christ.

So far as I can understand the apostle Paul was the only one of the apostles to catch the meaning of Jesus in this passage of scripture. He was the only one to get outside of his own little parish and try to win the world for Christ. He said after he was converted, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" Jesus revealed to him the great work He had for him to do in this world and he was willing to go and do it. He went everywhere preaching the gospel. He was not satisfied to stay in one place and preach the gospel to one set of people. He went from one town to another, and proclaimed Jesus as the Saviour. He denounced every known form of sin and if you have a desire to know how Paul preached to the people read Romans 1, beginning at the 21st verse and read to the close. We must preach Christ as Lord, and there will come to our people a sense of sin, a consciousness of inability, of failure, of breakdown, and then they will seek Christ as the Savior. Paul had a passion for souls. He loved his fellow man, and this is what men must do before they can win others for Christ.

I think it is about time for the ministers of God to wake up and do something for the lost world. I do not want you to think I am not in sympathy with the church and the ministers. I am. I think the church is the greatest organization or institution in this world. The church has done more for humanity than any other organization on the face of this earth. I think the ministers have done more for the good of humanity than any body of men in the world. But I want to say to you that the ministers and the churches are not doing one-third of what they could do if they would only wake up and let the Lord use them.

Did you ever stop to think God would hold your responsible for the unsaved in your community until you have done your best to save them? Why are we so careless and indifferent? Think of the great hosts of people on the road to hell. Think of the great work you could do for God If you would go out among the outcasts, it would so stir your hearts that you would be on fire for the salvation of the lost Think of what Jesus has done for you. Think of what He expects you to do for Him.

Every man can be a soul winner. Every one should be a soul winner. And if you are unable to speak to others you have a right to question your own salvation. The man who never glorifies God by leading others to Christ is a blank, an eye sore, a mischief and is unworthy the name Christian. No man has any business in the church who does not have a burning desire to see people saved. No church should be allowed to exist that has not added to its membership by confession of faith. If a church is existing only by letters of transfer, it is time the doors are closed. I hope and pray you folks will be evangelistic, and will have a passion for souls. I hope you will permit God to use you. This is the greatest age the world has ever passed through. You have the greatest opportunities the people of God ever have had. Make good use of your God-given talents, and Christ will give you the victory.

Oh, for a passion for souls,
Oh, for a pity that yearns.
Oh, for a love that loves unto death,
Oh, for a fire that burns.
Oh, for a prayer that prevails, that pours out itself for the lost,
Victorious prayer is the conquerors name.
The Lord of Pentecost.

GLYCERINE AND BARK PREVENT APPENDICITIS

The simple mixture of buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., known as Adler-i-ka, astonishes Fulton people. Becouse Adler-i-ka acts on BOTH lower and upper bowel, ONE SPOONFUL relieves almost ANY CASE of constipation, sour stomach or gas. It removes such surprising foul matter that a few doses often relieve or prevent appendicitis. A short treatment helps chronic stomach trouble. The INSTANT, easy action of Adler-i-ka is astonishing. # EUROPE THANKS US

Deeply Appreciates Our War Relief Work, Says Bacon.

U. S. RENDERS GREATEST AID.

America's War Gifts Total $25,000,000 Cash and Millions More In Supplies. Allied Countries Get Bulk, but $5,000,000 Has Gone to Help Germans.

New York.—At no time since the outbreak of the European war has there been a satisfactory compilation of the total relief extended by the people of the United States to the sufferers from that great conflict.

Herewith is a summary of these efforts, giving the results of an exhaustive inquiry, which reveals for the first time the extent and effectiveness of the work done by the Americans.

Twenty-five millions represents in cash what the people of the United States have contributed.

A quarter of a billion, it is estimated, is the grand total spent in relief work abroad since the war began, and the United States, through its cash contributions and the vast stores of food, clothing and supplies furnished, is regarded as having responded nobly to the calls made upon our people.

Here in New York city there are nearly seventy-five organizations engaged in war relief work. In Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and other large cities the work is receiving a great deal of attention, but the results are reflected to a large extent through the reports of the various organizations having headquarters in New York, which has been from the start of the war a sort of clearing house for American relief.

Because of her pathetic experience at the outbreak of the war, Belgium attracted the early efforts of American relief organizations. The need for help was so great, the invaded country was so completely overwhelmed, that the nations of Europe came to Belgium's rescue on a vast scale. The people of the United States, prompt to respond to this call, have contributed thus far nearly $8,000,000 for the Belgians. The total contributions for Belgian relief are placed at $115,000,000.

While the bulk of the relief work done in this country goes to aid the allies, yet a great deal is being done to help the unfortunates in the Germanic countries. Not so much is heard about this branch of American relief work, but it is nevertheless being prosecuted with vigor.

There is, in the case of the German-Austrian relief work, no central agency in this country through which the results are reported. For this reason it is not possible to give with exactness the amount of aid being funished by the American people to the Teutonic nations. Prominent Germans who are interesting themselves in the matter estimate that $5,000,000 will cover the aid thus far sent from this country to Teutonic sufferers.

Among the most active of the conspicuous Americans engaged in the war relief work is the Hon. Robert Bacon, former ambassador to France. While Mr. Bacon has given especial attention to the American Ambulance hospital in Paris, of which organization he is chairman of the board of governors, he also has followed with keen interest other phases of the relief work in which the people of the United States are interested.

"The deepest appreciation is felt by the people abroad," Mr. Bacon said, "for what the United States has done, both through individuals and organizations. This I know. Especially do they appreciate the way in which this work is being done. They feel that the people of the United States have been most generous. Not only do I know this from friends in France and England, but also I am assured that this same feeling prevails in the other countries in which our people have shown interest.

"What the men and women of this country have done cannot be measured in money. The sympathy they have shown, the friendly spirit, the desire to aid in every possible way, have elicited warmest praise from the people of those countries toward which American efforts have been directed."

GOLF TOGS.

Style Tips About Your Looks on the Links.

The girl who plays golf is in her element these days, for at the first touch of spring she gets out her golf bag—if she hasn't been using it all winter on the southern links—dons a pair of low heeled shoes, a close fitting hat, a short skirt and a comforable sweater and hies herself to the links for a glorious day of golf.

When we say that the girl who plays golf dons low heeled shoes, a short skirt and the rest of the sporting paraphernalia it must not be thought that her costume is in any way unattractive or that any sort of clothes will do for this game. The day has passed when this was the case. Time was when the golfing girl was not a thing of beauty nor yet a joy forever, but fortunately that time is of the past, not the present.

Today the girl who plays golf presents a trim, immaculate figure. She is clad in well cut clothes designed on comfortable but at the same time becoming lines. Her golf skirt is sometimes of linen, sometimes of tweed, but whatever the material used it fits her figure beautifully and swings gracefully at every stroke. Her blouse, though a plain one, is wonderfully made, often sewed by hand and ornamented with the finest of fine stitches. While it is usually mannish in cut, it loses nothing in beauty by this fact, for a bright tie at the throat or fancy buttons add a feminine note.

The hat of the golfing girl is a sensible but pretty affair. It is snug fitting, so that in the midst of the game the player need not be disturbed by breezes dislodging her headgear. Usually it is fairly large so that the eyes may be shaded from sunshine and the complexion guarded from tan. A panama with a single ribbon band is a popular golfing hat, though there are numerous other types of headgear which meet with the athletic girl's approval.

The most fascinating part of the whole costume worn by the girl who plays golf is the vivid covered silk sweater worn over her sport blouse.

Historic Knowledge.

Imagine the civilised world waking up tomorrow morning with every trace of historic knowledge and all memory of what has occurred in the past wiped completely out of mind and placed beyond recovery. The world would fall into confusion. There would be no guidance for statesmen or for scientists.

Every new problem would have to be solved by the long and painful method of trial and error. There would be no stimulus of pride, emulation and confidence springing from the recollection of man's past achievements. A nation without history would be like a man without memory.—New York Journal.

How to Save Wear on Auto Brakes.

In the Woman's Home Companion an automobile expert says:

"Remember that gradual application of power, whether from engine or from brakes, saves wear. When you stop push out the clutch a hundred yards off, cut down the throttle and coast to your stopping place, with the brakes applied gently. Don't come down steep hills using brakes alone. Continued use heats and wears them. Slow up at the top, slip into second gear and cut off the ignition current. The engine acts as a brake or a drag. Gravity, pulling the car down, turns the engine rapidly, and it resists. On extremely steep, rough hills use first gear."

The Money In Stock.

A Chicago packer said once that the public seemed to think the beef packers make money as easily as did the country boy who witnessed the killing of a calf by a motorcar.

"No use talking," he drawled to a passerby, "thar certainly is money in cattle."

"In the stock raising business, do you mean?" asked the stranger.

"No, not exactly. A motorcar ran over that calf a few minutes ago, and the driver got out and handed me $5."

"Five dollars? That's not much for a good sized calf."

"Yes, but, mister, the calf wasn't mine."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Nearer to Port.

Are you richer today than you were yesterday? No? Then you are a little poorer. Are you better today than you were yesterday? No? Then you are a little worse. Are you nearer to your port today than you were yesterday? Yes; you must be a little nearer to some port or other, for since your ship was first launched upon the sea of life you have never been still for a single moment. The sea is too deep; you could not find anchorage if you would. There can be no pause until you come into port.—Henry van Dyke.

Misfits.

You can say "The tongue is an unruly member," but what the Apostle James (iii, 8) wrote is, "But the tongue can no man tame; it is an unruly evil."

Peter (first iv, 8) said, "Charity shall cover the multitude of sins," not "Charity covereth a multitude of sins."

Butler said in "Hudibras" (part 3), "He that complies against his will is of his own opinion still." As generally misquoted, "A man convinced against his will will hold the same opinion still."

A Conquest In Ten Days

By ALAN HINSDALE

"Alec, I'm engaged."

"The deuce you are!"

"Yes, I became engaged the day before yesterday."

"And the reaction has set in?"

"What reaction?"

"Why, I was engaged once myself. For awhile I was in heaven. Then I began to think of what I'd done, and I was in the other place."

"That's me exactly."

"Can't you get out of it?"

"How?"

"I made the girl mad, and she shook me."

"Good plan. I'll try it on."

Alec Broadhead didn't see his friend, Andy Pelham, for a week. When they met again Pelham wore a shamefaced look.

"Well?" queried Alec.

"I tried your plan and succeeded admirably, but I couldn't stand the racket. I went back to her and told her that if she wouldn't forgive me I'd jump in the river."

"More fool you."

"Oh, you'd have done the same thing if you'd have been really in love."

"Not on your life."

Not long after Andy had been married Alec received a note from him saying that he must spend some time away from home on business and would Alec look out for his wife evenings during his absence. She would be lonely between 8 and 10 p. m. Alec replied that he supposed he would have to accommodate him.

When Mr. Broadhead called on Mrs. Pelham he found her sitting in a cosy room beside a light with a pink shade doing some fancy work. She was a pretty woman and received him with a pleasant smile. It occurred to him that perhaps his friend in marrying had not been such a fool after all. He passed a very pleasant evening and at 10 o'clock bade the lady adieu and went to his club.

Mrs. Pelham had told him to come every evening he chose during her husband's absence, but on no account to feel compelled to come. He had intended to remain away the second evening and after dining at his club tried to compose himself to spending the evening there. The effort was a failure. At ten minutes after 8 he rang the Pelham doorbell. There sat the lady beside the pink light plying her needle, and the scene was even more attractive than the evening before.

"How good of you," said the hostess, "to deprive yourself of all your bachelor pleasures to come to this dull house to oblige your friend! You men stand by one another splendidly. Women won't sacrifice themselves for a chum as men do."

"Um!" was the laconic reply.

It is quite likely that Alec Broadhead could have visited Mrs. Pelham possibly for years without disgracing himself by falling in love with his friend's wife had she behaved with the circumspection required of a married woman. But she did not. Alec by a great effort succeeded in cutting out the third evening, remaining away from her. When he called on the fourth she pouted. It isn't much to say she pouted, but it expressed a great deal to Alec. At any rate it influenced him when he left her at 11 o'clock, she giving him her hand at parting to hold it just a little bit longer than was advisable under the circumstances.

He called the very next evening and found her on a lounge covered with a silken quilt, evidently indisposed.

"I'm so glad you have come," she said, pressing the hand he gave her and looking up at him tenderly. "I'm not feeling well and would not like to be alone."

Alec's countenance was full of sympathy, and his eyes reflected the tenderness with which she had favored him. He smoothed her pillow half a dozen times during the evening, took her hand for the purpose of feeling her pulse and otherwise played the attentive nurse. Though it would seem that, invalided, she should have retired early, Alec did not leave her till the clock struck 12.

Ten days—or, rather, ten evenings—of this sort of thing may seem a short time for a man's sense of honor to his friend to be undermined, but it was enough for the purpose in this case. Alec was one evening bending down over the lady in the languishing fashion of a lover when the door was suddenly thrown open, and Andy Pelham, followed by a lady, stepped into the room.

"Well, I like that!" he said to Alec. "I leave my chum to keep my wife from being lonely, and what does he do"—

"Now, Andy," said the lady who had entered with him, "this has gone far enough. Mr. Broadhead, I'm Mrs. Pelham. This young lady is my friend Miss"—

"Madge Meriweather," interrupted Andy, "the worst flirt in America. We've put up a job on you, old man. I told these ladies how you felt about women, and she bet she could bring you down within ten days. I haven't been away at all, but upstairs every evening that you've been here spooning with Madge."

The expression on Alec's face was a study. There were shame, relief and the dawn of happiness."

"All I have to say," he finally remarked, "is that Miss Meriweather has won the bet."

This was Miss Meriweather's last conquest. She married Alec Broadhead.

Pretty and Unpretentious.

The vest and collar may be of contrasting material, if desired, silk crepe being appropriate for such use.

Some of the prettiest of the summer frocks, if not the most complicated or pretentious, are the simple models in striped taffeta. This design requires to make, 5¼ yards 36-inch silk and is made without a lining. The three-piece skirt is slightly gathered at the top and is in regulation length. The home dressmaker will find pleasure in developing the model, because of its simplicity. First, turn under the front edge of front at notches for an under-facing: center-front indicated by large "O" perforations. Turn under the front edges of inserted section and side-front on slot perforations. Lap the folded edge of inserted section on front to small "o" perforations, notches even and lap the folded edge of side-front on the inserted section to line of small "o" perforations stitch ½ inch from folded edges. Form tucks in side-front, creasing on line of slot perforations near armhole; stitch 1 inch from fold. Place single "T" on corresponding small "o" perforation at lower edge of side-front and tack. Close under-arm and shoulder seams as notched. Gather lower edge of waist between double "TT" perforations and 2 inches above. Adjust stay under gathers in waist, center-backs even, small "o" perforation at lower edge at under-arm seam, and bring front edge to center-front.

Now, sew the collar to neck edge as notched: large "O" perforation in collar indicating center-front. If desired with open neck, omit turn-over collar and roll front and collar as illustrated.

Close the sleeve seam as notched. Close seam of elbow cuff as notched. Sew turn-over to cuff as notched, small "o" perforation in turn-over at seam of cuff. Sew cuff to sleeve, indicating small "o" perforations even, single large "O" perforation in cuff at seam of sleeve. Sew sleeve in armhole as notched, small "o" perforation at shoulder seam, easing in any fulness.

Turn under edge of right front gore of skirt on slot perforations, lap on left front gore, center-fronts even, (large "O" perforations indicate center-front): stitch 1 inch from folded edge leaving edges free above single large "O" perforation for a placket. Join gores as notched. Gather upper edge of back gore between double "TT" perforations. Adjust skirt to position.

OYSTERS FRIED IN BATTER.—Make a batter of three eggs, three tablespoonfuls of milk and one of flour and juice of oysters. Put butter into chafing dish and when it is hot drop oysters one at a time into the batter, then into the hot butter and fry them until a rich brown.

Stuffed Heart.—Materials: One heart, half a cupful of soft crumbs, a tablespoonful of butter, half a teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth teaspoonful pepper, a small onion, half a teaspoonful of powdered thyme, a thick slice of bacon, flour.

Directions: Wash the heart, remove the veins and squeeze out any blood clots that may be in it. Fry the bacon and remove the crisp slice and cut it in small pieces. Make a stuffing of the butter (melted), the bread, chopped onion and seasoning and add the bacon pieces. Stuff the heart and tie it up. Dredge it with salt, pepper and flour and brown it on all sides in the bacon fat. Put it into the larger saucepan or into the fireless cooker utensil, half cover it with water, let it boil five minutes, then let simmer four or five hours till tender, or put it into the fireless cooker for ten hours or more. Reheat and put again into the fireless until tender. Thicken as much of the liquor as desired with two tablespoonfuls of flour mixed to a paste with two tablespoonfuls of water for each cupful of liquor. Slice the heart and serve with gravy over it.

Braised Tongue.— Skin a fresh beef tongue that has been boiled for two hours. Put it in a casserole and pour over it the following gravy: Melt three tablespoonfuls of butter in a saucepan and brown in it three tablespoonfuls of flour. Add a pint of strained canned tomato juice and a pint of the liquid in which the tongue was cooked. Cook until smooth and add half an onion and half a carrot cut in small pieces. Cover the casserole and simmer for two hours.

Eggs a la Quebec.—Cut an onion into fine dice, fry lightly in a tablespoonful of butter, then dash in a teaspoonful of vinegar. Butter a shallow dish and strew the onion in it. Break five eggs into it, being careful not to break the yolks. Bake in a hot oven until the whites are set. Dust on salt and white pepper and sprinkle with coarse breadcrumbs fried brown in butter. Garnish with parsley and serve in sauce dish. Good served with baked potatoes.

Filipine Embroidery.

Long have we praised and bought the hand made French lingerie, and long have the women of fashion depended on French hand work. It is only recently that the Madeira eyelet and solid embroidery have made inroads on the very secure position which the French work so long monopolized. Now all this is to be changed, for the Filipino work is as wonderful in execution as either of the other two ever pretended to be. Besides, the material is finer and the prices lower. The labor is cheaper, whether Chinese, Japanese or Filipinos do the embroidery, and, best of all, there is no duty on these garments. There is hardly a doubt but that there will be a great demand for the Filipino embroidery.

Spring Lounging Robes.

The new tea gowns, negligees and lounging robes are very pretty and made of fine fabrics. Fancy or corded cottons are much used for these garments. Cotton crapes with heavy cotton embroidery are largely used, especially in blue, lavender, rose or tan, with the embroidery in white. Instead of embroidery, they may be trimmed with ribbon or lace. The voluminous effects in dresses are also used in negligees. Sheer and light weight fabrics are most favored.

Cottage Pudding.

One cupful of sugar, one cupful of sweet milk, two egg yolks, two tablespoonfuls of butter, two cupfuls of flour and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Cream sugar and egg yolks. Add milk and melted butter, flour and baking powder sifted together. Bake in square tin. Use white of eggs for meringue.

Baked Potato, Surprise.

Take a medium sized baked potato, scoop it out and mash the contents with a celery cream sauce; fill the potato, sprinkle with cheese and breadcrumbs and put back in the oven to brown.

CUTS OF MEAT.

It Is Necessary to Know Muscle Structure.

DIFFERENT PARTS NAMED.

Some Expert Help For Young Housewives Who Have Not Yet Learned How to Cook Cheap Meats In the Most Nourishing, Tempting Way.

It would seem that the last word had been said on cheaper cuts of meat. But the increase in the high cost of living makes the meat problem still as tough (no pun) as ever.

What are the much maligned and equally much praised cuts called "cheaper?" To know this we must know the architecture of the animal in question. First, the most tender pieces are the less exposed parts of the animal. Whatever portions are subjected to muscular exercise (thus the loin) are tougher because the muscles have been used more. This does not mean that there is not as much nourishment in tough muscles as in tender ones. The cheaper cuts have tougher fibers, and the whole problem is to prepare and soften the fibers and thus put them on a par with more tender parts. The muscles of the abdomen are also tender, but give a very coarse meat.

The structure of the muscle fiber must be studied in order to apply the best methods of cooking. Each fiber is like a thin section of orange, being surrounded with a firm tissue and containing juice within. If we cut the fiber across the juice will escape. If we heat the fiber in a high temperature we will harden it still more and prevent the escape of juices. If we cut it and soak it in water the juices again will escape. But if we pour scalding water or liquid on the fiber it will have much the same effect as heating it rapidly to a high point.

Now, the ideal in handling all cheaper cuts is first to harden the fiber either by pouring on boiling water or by heating it to a high degree in order to avoid the escape of the juices, and second, to cook it slowly so that the fiber will eventually be very soft, the juices dissolved and the flavor as much as possible retained. None of these meats should be covered at first with cold liquid or cooked slowly before the outside fiber is seared.

What are some of these cuts by name? Perhaps this partial list will give suggestions which your butcher can help you carry out:

Cheaper cuts of beef:

Rump.—Roasts, braising, a la mode, stewing.

Chuck Ribs (1 and 2).—Roast, steak.

Chuck Ribs (last 3).—Stewing, braising.

"Plate."—Soup, stew, rolled pieces.

Brisket.—Corned and pot roast.

"Skirt" Steak.—Rolled, stew.

Plank Steak. — Rolled, stew, a la mode, soup.

Cross Ribs.—Pot roast.

Short Ribs.—Soup, stew, sliced cold.

Cheaper cuts of mutton:

Breast.—Stew, braising, soup.

Neck. — Soup, stew, meat for croquettes, etc.

Veal:

Breast.—Soup, stew, made dishes, veal loaf.

A slow oven, which is also used in cooking other foods, can be used, or, above all, the "fireless cooker," which cooks without heat. Here, too, the fireproof or earthenware dishes can be used to best advantage, for then the food may be cooked and served in the same dish.

A Long Sleep.

A Swedish girl holds the record for long sleeping. She came home from her work soon after her fourteenth birthday, complaining of toothache, and went to bed. Soon afterward she fell asleep and slept without waking from 1875 to 1907, a period of thirty-two years.

Her only nourishment during this period was two cupfuls of milk a day. She fully awoke at the age of forty-six and immediately asked for her mother, who was dead. She did not recognize her brothers, whom she had known as little boys. She remembered nothing during her trance. Yet her recovery was absolute. She became well and hearty in every way.

Wearing Your Rubbers.

How to elude your wife when she insists that you positively must wear your rubbers when you go out:

First.—Tell her you positively will not do it. This will produce in her an attitude of resignation, and she will almost forgive you for not wearing them for giving her a chance to act the role of a martyr.

Second—Say that you never wore rubbers before you were married. She will then tell you that you were always sick, too, and will work herself into a jovial glow by thinking what good care she is taking of you.

Third.—Wear the rubbers to keep peace in the family.—Judge.

Really Antique.

An excellent plaster of paris cast may be seen in one of the Egyptian galleries of the British museum of the famous sycamore statuette known as the "Sheikh-el-Beled," or "Village Sheikh." The original dates from 3900 B. C. and is still in perfect condition, although it is the oldest known specimen of woodcarving. It represents an overseer of the workmen engaged in building the pyramids close to Sakkarao, where it was discovered.—London News.

A Troublesome Creditor.

The poet Clement Marot, being in very straitened circumstances, went to the king and said, "I have come to lay before your majesty a complaint against one of my creditors whose claims I have satisfied over and over again, and yet he persists in dunning and harassing me every day."

"Who is the scoundrel?" the king inquired.

"My stomach, sire. Though I have satisfied its wants time without number, it never ceases to torment, and I am utterly incapable of meeting its demands."

The king was pleased with the joke and allowed the poet a pension on the spot.

Middy Blouse For Milady Junior.

The middy blouse shown here may be worn with almost any frock, but it is unusually effective in striped galatea with a linen skirt.

Striped galatea makes up this middy blouse most effectively, the trimmings being of plain white linen.

The skirt is also of linen, in white or natural color. The middy is to be slipped on over the head and laces in front and at the underarm seam. The blouse is cut in sizes up to sixteen years and may be worn by small women for athletic purposes. In medium size the costume requires 2⅝ yards 27-inch galatea and 4 yards 36-inch linen for the skirt. Six yards of braid are needed for the trimming.

Today's home dressmaking lesson is confined to the cutting of the blouse. Some parts are cut from an open width of material, doubled (not folded), while others are cut from a fold of the galatea. The underfacing and sleeve are cut from an open width. The front, back and collar are laid directly on the lengthwise fold of the goods. The pocket is placed over a lengthwise thread.

The sleeves may be long or short, the latter being preferred for warmer weather. It is easy to cut off the lower part of the sleeve on small "o" perforations to shorten it.

With the coming of spring a stylish middy of linen allows the tired sweater to take a vacation. The rage of the moment is to select shades of pastel, if stripes and checks are not favored with contrasting colors at every point of vantage.

L. W. EMERICK AT BIG BARBECUE

As an Officer in Hunters' Fraternity He Attended Interesting Meeting on Long Island.

The Hunters' Fraternity of America, whose directorate includes Mr. L. W. Emerick, president of the First National Bank of this city, gave a barbecue at the studio of the Mirror Film company, at Glendale, L. I., on Tuesday evening.

Mr. Emerick is of course one of the sixty members of the Fraternity, whose guests upon this occasion numberei about 150, many of them being actors and actresses employed by the film producing company, and guests of Mr. A. A. Anderson, who is president of the Hunters' Fraternity. The members, most of whom wore hunting togs, were carried to the Long Island studios in autos where the interesting features of the afternoon occurred.

The grounds belonging to the film company were made to resemble a Rocky Mountain scene and there the hunters walked and sat around big campfires swapping stories of how they had shot goats much larger than the one (in sheep's clothing) which was to be served up to the guests the same evening.

One large building of the studio plant was converted into a hunting lodge and there the supper was served. The room was decorted with skins of wild animals and relics of the chase. In this same room a vaudeville show was given and motion pictures were snapped of every action of the Fraternity members and guests, the work being performed by the Mirror Company's artists. President Anderson was responsible for the idea of securing film pictures of the Rocky Mountain scene and that of the lodge, both of which will be reproduced in movie houses using the Mirror films.

Mayor Mitchel, Nat Goodwin, Irving Bachellor and Clifford B. Harmon were the chief speakers. Theodore Roosevelt having sent a telegram of regret on the ground that he was "too hoarse to talk."

BUFFALO'S TAX RATE EXCEEDS ALLOWANCE

Buffalo—Facing the task of paring down the highest tax rate in the history of the city, the Council will resume its task of considering the estimates. When the Council adjourned yesterday afternoon, its work on the estimates resulted in the establishment of a tentative tax rate of $30.15, about $4 higher than that of 19.15 and in excess of the tax rate allowed by the State constitution. At least $27,766.98 will have to be deducted from the amount to be raised by taxation in order to bring the tax rate within the constitutional limit, which is $29.65.

EUGENE STOLE A RIDE AND WAS BUMPED

Eugene Loveless, 7, was painfully injured this morning in jumping from a train near the E-Z Opener bag factory. After being treated by Dr. Keller he was taken to his home, 207 Beech st. The youngster boarded the train at the Broadway station but was unable to alight until the E-Z Opener plant was reached, then a jump while the train was traveling at al ively rate of speed. He was hurled down a steep embankment and in the fall is believed to have received a broken arm. In addition to a number of bruises about his body, he also received a bad cut on the head.

An excited witness of the accident telephoned to the police that a boy had been struck and killed by a train and Chief Dyer hurried to the scene. The ambulance was also summoned.

City Ranks Fourth in Point of Death Rate in 68 Cities

A resolution was adopted at a meeting of the Board of Health last night requesting the citizens of Fulton to cooperate in placing their premises in sanitary and neat condition, and to conform with Governor Whitman's designation of the week of May 1st as cleanup week for New York State.

Committees recommended and appointed were as follows: Claims and Grievance—Carvey, Keller and Miller; Ordinance — Clark, Morton, and Haviland; Supplies—Morton, Miller and Keller; Sanitation—Miller, Clark and Carvey; Dump inspection—Miller, Haviland and Clark.

Dr. Hall's report shows there were during the month 42 cases of communicable diseases; two cases of measles, 28 of mumps, one of pulmonary tuberculosis, seven of whooping cough, one suspicious sore throat and three of typhoid fever.

One case of typhoid fever developed elsewhere. At the present time, aside from the cases of typhoid and those of tuberculosis, there are seven cases of mumps, four cases of whooping cough and two diphtheria carriers. These are under surveillance.

The report continues: "The mortality for the month of March was very low, there being 11 deaths including one still-birth. In the official bulletin of the State Board of Health, our city is grouped with those cities of the State having a population of between 10,000 and 20,000 persons. In this Bulletin, the death rate per 1,000 population for this group of cities is given as 19.1. the death rate of our city is given at 10.4 per thousand population. The death rate of the entire State is given as 15.8 per thousand population for March. Only three cities of the 68 mentioned in the Bulletin had a lower death rate than Fulton.

"Clean-up time is near at hand and complaints are coming in relating to insanitary conditions many of which are based on noxious odors from privies. Insanitary privies should not be tolerated within the city limits and there is no valid excuse for outside closets where sewer connections can be made. In other parts of the city where sewer connection is not possible privies should be tolerated only when they are maintained in a sanitary condition and one of the requirements should be screening to prevent the access of flies. Manure heaps should be removed and matter of this nature should be deposited in proper recepetacles and screened. Mosquito breeding places should be filled and suitable measures taken to prevent mosquitoes from breeding.

"The health officer will welcome the aid of any and all persons who will help in the clean up campaign and suggests that this board deputize him to appoint sanitary inspectors to assist in this work.

"The enforcement of the recently enacted milk regulations has been undertaken and all of the milk dealers, so far as known, have paid their license fees. The work of grading the milk will now be undertaken and where the bacterial count and scores warrant permission to sell high grades of milk will be given. At a later date this subject will be more fully covered. Recently the City Attorney, City Engineer and Health Officer met for consultation as to the proper steps to be taken to improve the conditions threatening our water supply. Further report on this subject will be presented later.

"It has occurred to some of the members of this body that the work connected therewith may be better handled by the appointment of committees. This is a good suggestion and it is hoped you will act thereon."

MARTIAL LAW ALL OVER EMERALD ISLE

London—All of Ireland is now under martial law. Premier Asquith announced today in the House of Commons that martial law had been extended from Dublin and Dublin county to include the entire island.

The announcement of the Premier indicated that the rebellion was spreading and that the most drastic measures were necessary.

It is believed that more troops will be sent from England to Ireland forthwith.

The general belief that the rebellion had grown beyond Dublin county was borne out by the following statement made by Premier Asquith in Commons late in the afternoon:

"The situation in Ireland is still serious. Ther evolutionary movement is spreading, especially in the west. The British troops in Ireland are being reinforced adequately to deal with the movement."

DUTCH PREPARING FOR WAR AGAINST BRITISH?

Berlin—The Overseas New agency today gave out an item quoting the Dutch newspaper De Tribuna as stating that the recent war preparations in Holland were caused by the sinking of a Dutch warship by British naval forces.

SHE SANG AWAY PAIN.

Little Girl Chanted Popular Tunes While Burns Were Dressed.

Kansas City.—"It's a long way to Tipperary; it's a long way to go."

The voice of Laura Johnson, seven years of age, floated from the operating room at the Emergency hospital and echoed through the building.

Nurses and doctors left their work, attracted by the unusual singing. One pushed open the door. On a white table lay the child. A nurse was bending over her. From the child's knees to her feet were burns.

During the painful proceedings the singing did not stop for more than a minute. Only once did the girl stop, when the pain caused her to bite her lip to keep back the tears. Then she began to sing "The Rosary."

The child was burned when she pulled a kettle of boiling soup off the stove. The child's mother, Mrs. Albert Johnson, carried her daughter to the hospital for treatment.

$200 FOR BUSHEL OF CORN.

It Took a Prize and Was Purchased by a Farmer's Paper.

Des Moines, Ia.—The Iowa Farmer of Des Moines paid $200 for a bushel of seed corn. It was purchased of Wayne W. Polk of Sidney, Fremont county, and is prize corn.

Polk won the highest award at the Panama exposition at San Francisco and also won first on ten ear sample, first on thirty ear sample and the prize for the champion bushel at the last state corn show held at Ames. The farm paper expects to use the corn in a subscription campaign.

TO CHANGE MONEY

Counterfeiters' Activity Has Aroused Treasury Department.

MAY REDUCE BANKNOTES.

Assistant Chief W. H. Moran of Secret Service Says Increase of Spurious Money is Due to Fact That Criminals Learned Photo-engraving.

Denver.—That very important and radical changes are to be made in the paper used and the printing of currency by the government is predicted by W. H. Moran, assistant chief of the United States secret service. The unusual activity of counterfeiters during the last several months has moved the treasury department to new efforts, and a system is being devised that it is believed will reduce counterfeiting to a minimum.

"The silk threads in our certificates," says Mr. Moran, "are entirely misleading to the general public. The average person holds the idea that the government has a secret process of manufacturing the paper on which banknotes are printed, whereas it is merely a distinctive process. A note may not appear just right, but when it shows the silk threads the public takes it for granted that it is good."

The existence of more than 200 different varieties of banknotes is pointed out by Mr. Moran as a condition that makes the raising of these certificates an easy matter by counterfeiters. The public cannot be expected to carry all these forms of notes in mind, he says, and as a result one, two, five and ten dollar certificates are being raised to notes of higher denomination quite generally.

Mr. Moran expects to see a new paper adopted by the government soon that will make counterfeiting more difficult and at the same time enable the public more readily to protect itself. He also expects that the 200 or more different types of banknotes will be reduced to possibly one of each denomination, eliminating a big part of the chance of their being "raised."

The increased activity of counterfeiters is attributed to improvements constantly being made in photo-engraving processes.

The art has advanced, says Mr. Moran, to the point where duplication is a science that many crooks have mastered. A case cited is that of James S. Vertress, arrested for the wholesale distribution of ten and twenty dollar gold certificates in Denver and vicinity in 1913.

Vertress was captured in Pennsylvania through the efforts of Assistant Chief Moran. Vertress attended a photographers' school and took a course in engraving before establishing a counterfeiting plant in an isolated mountain district in Kentucky.

A general warning is sounded by the government officer against men who are impersonating federal officers:

Many crooks are going about the country, he says, representing themselves to be agents of the department of justice, the revenue or the secret service departments. They defraud boarding houses, hotels and the people generally and in that way not only rob many victims, but bring discredit upon the agents of the government.

NEARLY 600 BUSINESS WOMEN ENTERTAINED; PRATT SPEAKS TUESDAY

Evangelist Peacock told his audience of about 2,500 persons, last night, that he had never talked to a group of men whose enthusiasm reached the pitch held by the members of the Billy Sunday Business Men's League. He told the men yesterday upon the occasion of his visit in company with Mr. George L. Pratt that, "Old Syracuse won't go to the devil while she's got such a crowd of men there."

Messrs. Pratt and Peacock were successful in their quest yesterday, as they secured the consent of the Business Men's League of Syracuse to come here next Tuesday evening. During the same evening Mr. Pratt will make one of his famous addresses.

Last night a Phoenix delegation of about 200 persons entered the tabernacle, to worship in conjunction with the 400 Presbyterians of this city who had marched to the building in a body.

Another pleasing feature of last night's meeting was the presence of about 600 women of business, 275 of whom had partaken of a supper at the State Street church, served by the women of the different churches. The courtesy extended the business women will be repeated next Thursday, and soon, very soon the churches of Baldwinsville and Oswego will make a visitation at the tabernacle.

The attendance and receipts so far recorded at the tabernacle are:

| | Attendance | Receipts |
|---|---|---|
| Thursday afternoon | 150 | 3.06 |
| Thursday Evening | 2,500 | 261.94 |
| Total | 2,650 | 265.00 |
| Previously reported | 20,450 | 1,061.07 |
| Total | 23,100 | 1,326.07 |

This afternoon's sermon was in part as follows:

Psalm 84:2—My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the Courts of the Lord: my heart and my fresh crieth out for the living God.

God alone can satisfy man's nature. The testimony of every age is that man's soul crieth out for the Living God. Apart from God life is feverish, restless and unsatisfied. The things of the world cannot take the place of God. They can never bring peace and satisfaction to the coul. Experience teaches that man's spiritual nature longs for something the world cannot give. Since the beginning of time the people of the world have tried to find rest, peace and satisfaction apart from God and have failed. Many are trying this experiment at present, but some day they will be compelled to say as many others have been compelled to say, apart from God all is vanity, and vexation of spirit. The heart and flesh are crying out for the living God. Man's spiritual nature can never be satisfied in any other way, or by any other person. There are many things in this world to tempt men away from God. The lust of the eye and the pride of life have a tendency to draw man away from God and the teaching of God's Holy Book. But the lust of the eye and the pride of life cannot satisfy the longing desire within man to know God. These things may for a time quiet the crying of the soul, and lull the soul to sleep, but a time will come when all the worldly pleasures and attractions cannot satisfy the desire within man to know God. These things often lead us away from God, but they never satisfy the soul. Sometimes people get so far away from God it seems almost an impossibility to get back.

God alone is able to save the soul from eternal death. God alone is able to satisfy the spiritual wants of men and women. The Psalmist says in this psalm: "My heart and my uesh crieth out for the living God." Man cannot satisfy his soul from within. Man cannot feed upon himself. The resources of man's nature are great and varied. He has intellectual powers that are capable of endless development. There are vast spheres for the exercise of his mind, and problems innumerable for him to solve. In the short time we spend in this world, man does not have sufficient time to explore much of the world's knowledge. He is simply baffled with the inscrutable mysteries of the world. Thew isdom he seeks allures and eludes. The horizon recedes with every advance. The wisdom that satisfies is far off and exceeding deep; however much a man may labor to seek it out, yet shall he not find it. And, even if he could possess all knowledge and solve all mysteries, there would still be a thirst in the soul for man is more than brains. A man might be able to acquire all the knowledge possible for any one man to acquire, but this would not bring peace to the innerman. The spiritual nature of man can be satisfed in only one way, and this way is from God the Father through Jesus Christ the Savior.

No true man can be satisfied with merely temporal blessings. The Word of God says: Man cannot live by bread alone. He will desire something more than temporal blessings. Jesus Christ tells of a man who lived for business andp rospered exceedingly. He probably was wiser than his fellow in worldly wisdom, but God's estimate of him is not very flattering. God said he was a fool. Why did God call this man a fool? Because he tried to satisfy the longing of his soul with temporal things. The soul cannot be satisfied with earthly things.

Money can buy dainties, but it cannot give an appetite; it can command doctors but it cannot buy health; it can attract flatterers, but it cannot secure friends; it can provide a large funeral, but it cannot make mourners. The deepest needs of the soul cannot be touched by anything that wealth can buy. The soul cannot be satisfied by the gratification of man's baser passions. Indulgence deepens the desires, and intensifies the thirst. The desire for pleasure feed upon itself; and, as the desire increases, the capacity to gratify diminishes. Sensations become stale, and the fires of lust consume the soul. The feast the world provides pleases at first, but it soon loses it's sweetness. No satisfaction, no peace comes to the soul of man thru these things. God alone satisfies because we are the offspring of God.

We do not really belong to this

IRISH REGIMENTS REPULSE GERMAN DRIVE IN FLANDERS

London—Special mention is made of the gallantry of the Irish regiments on the Flanders front in a British official bulletin issued last night concerning a violent German attack, which may be the beginning of a new drive toward Calais. The bulletin is the longest ever given out from British headquarters and contains nearly five hundred words.

Although the principal fighting was around Hulluch and Loos, more than a score of other points on the front were involved. The Germans with the help of asphyxiating gas and a curtain of fire from their big guns gained a footing in one section of the British trenches, but were driven out in a counter attack made by Irish regiments.

The communication closes with an recount of the aeroplane activity, including a description of a fight between a German "two-seater" and a British "one-seater," resulting in the death of both German aviators and the destruction of the machine, which fell from a height of 14,000 feet.

---

Berlin, via London—The Frankfurter Zeitung's Berlin despatch takes a more hopeful view of the German-American situation. After referring to the conferences already held and to be held, it adds:—

"It is naturally impossible to say what will come from these. But outward circumstances confirm the opinion that hope need not yet be surrendered that a way to reach an understanding and avoidance of a conflict between Germany and the United States can be found.

"The views of political circles vary slightly regarding the significance of such a conflict in connection with the world war in which we are involved, and the group of politicians and publicists, who now, as formerly, are endeavoring with all arguments to prove that the conflict is American, and that, as a consequence, the submarine warfare carried on by us without all scruplus would mean an advantageous development for us, is, after all, very small."

JUSTICE HUGHES WILL GET THE NOMINATION, IF STAMPEDE SHOULD OCCUR

New York—Republican organization leaders have practically agreed among themselves that the nominee of the Chicago Convention will be Justice Charles E. Hughes if he will take it. They are not really "for" him, but fear sentiment in the party will force his nomination.

They have talked the situation over very earnestly since the Massachusetts primary on Tuesday. They assert with more positiveness than they usually exhibit concerning anything that Theodore Roosevelt stands not the slightest chance of being the nominee of their party.

In the case of many of them it would quite naturally be stated that the "wish is father to the thought" in the case of Mr. Roosevelt There is no doubt that most of the leaders want to see Mr. Roosevelt sidetracked. Many of them want also to see a collapse of the Hughes boom.

A swift change has come over the situation during the last few days. More than seven hundred delegates have been chosen. The leaders have canvassed the lists. They say they speak "by the cards." They will not attempt to say who among the favorite sons stands highest after Justice Hughes is eliminated, if that should be his fate. They will merely say that the list most likely to furnish the winner contains the names of Theodore E. Burton, Elihu Root and Samuel W. McCall.

They declare further that there has been a good deal of an undercurrent in the direction of Senator James W. Wadsworth, junior Senator from New York. Just where this current runs swiftest they do not say, but they declare that if the Convention should find itself bereft or "rid" of both Theodore Roosevelt and Justice Hughes, it may decide to turn to a dark horse. Such a horse, they assert, is Senator Wadsworth.

All this "Old Guard" prognostication is based on the assumption that the "Old Guard" will control the delegates at Chicago on everything but the Hughes issue. The "Old Guard" believes it will do so. Its belief rests upon its acquaintance with a majority of the delegates. The so-called "bosses" admit, however, the Convention might possibly "get-away" from them.

I talked yesterday with one of the men who had much to do with the management of the Taft forces at Chicago in 1912, and he said that the men who will guide the destinies of the party in June, 1916, know "absolutely that Theodore Roosevelt cannot be nominated." He said he could make that assertion now with just as much assurance as he could in 1912. He declared, further, that the Massachusetts primary election settled whatever doubts there could have been on the subject.

SOME YEARS HENCE

What will the philosophic historian of the future say about the aldermen of this city, when the true perspective shall emerge from behind the new billboard at the foot of Rochester street?

In that dispassionate and enlightened estimate he will first of all have to reckon with the elementary fact of organized society that customs are more powerful, after all, than the laws of the present moment. He will take account of the present disrespect for the appearance of a street in a city that wants to be dressed up and that has undergone a reconstruction era, with its struggles to have things look decent.

Nearly two years have passed over this city since some of the leading citizens protested to this newspaper against the erection of more billboards within the corporate limits. At that time public sentiment was not aroused to the need of civic pride, but even then the concensus of opinion was that no more of the eyesores should be allowed to exist.

Doubtless there are many more persons now denouncing, not the builders of the board, but the authorities who voted permission to have it set up in one of the most prominent sections in the city. The trouble arises in practice from the difficulty of being sure whether the case in hand requires good citizens to overlook the action of the aldermen or override it.

At the very least, the historian of the future will have to say that experience demonstrates the fatal error of looking to an irresponsible body of men to set up a standard of civic betterment that outranks in authority the sentiment of nine-tenths of the people. He will emphasize the lesson that the aldermen have gone farther than the dominant public opinion of this day will follow and support. He will clearly recognize, perhaps, that in Fulton we have one danger from what some of us call popular government and another from the absence of what we deserve to have, which through their very unreliability, can only bring the aldermen into contempt. He will offer in support of his plea the painful impression produced by looking at the billboard erected in the year of our Lord, 1916.

One respected citizen, well along in years, swears he will live to see the end a branch of city government that raps the fingers of the people who would have Fulton look neat and orderly. It may be they have been reading about Methuselah.

INFORM THE EDITOR

One of the most difficult of the editor's jobs is to get facts about births, marriages and deaths. People seem to think he ought to know these things by intuition. If not that, the birth, marriage or death is of such importance in the immediate family that it is presumed the editor will be informed by some wireless or just grow into the information.

Then, when the paper comes out and no mention is made of the event, the editor is blamed for not running a good newspaper, or not not getting all the news. Remember there are a good many people in this country. If the editor knew each of them by name, besides their family history and the chief events in the lives of every individual, he wouldn't be editor. He would be a demigog, resting his feet on a cloud and sipping ambrosia instead of inhabiting a broken-down office chair and wondering where the money for the next white paper bill is coming from.

The life of the average newspaper man is a gay one. Gathering news is a second nature to him, like picking his teeth with the office pen and cussing the office towel. Just the same, there is a limit to his omniscience. Last week we thought of a million, eight hundred and forty-nine thousand three hundred and sixty-four things of importance, besides a couple of hundred thousand small items unworthy of mention. And it was a slow week. We are anxious for news for the paper, and it won't put you out much to drop by the office or telephone us what's happening in your house.

Then, if the item doesn't get in the paper, you have a right to come down and kick the stuffing out of the office exchange. —Annapolis (Md.) Capital.

INDUSTRY'S EFFICIENCY

In a letter written a few weeks ago to the Scientific American President Wilson said:

It will be a signal service to our country to arouse it to a knowledge of the great possibilities that are open to it in the markets of the world. The door of opportunity swings wide before us. Thru it we may, if we will, enter into rich fields of endeavor and success. In order to do this we must show an effectiveness in industrial practice which measures up to our best standards. We must avail ourselves of all that science can tell us in aid of industry and must use all that education can contribute to train the artisan in the principles and practice of his work.

Writing to American Industries for April, Col. George Pope says:

When the great European upheaval is ended, vast economic, commercial and financial changes are bound to ensue. In this international adjustment, the stability of American industry can be maintained and promoted only by the intelligent and concurrent action of all our citizens, independent of age, sex or political affiliations. The problem involves equally the worker, the investor, merchant, manufacturer, farmer and every one directly or indirectly concerned in our national industrial welfare.

It is high time that employer, employe and capitalist should compare notes on our industrial and commercial outlook. Joint action is absolutely necessary if we are to preserve the sovereignty of our business and the welfare of the millions of our citizens who are its beneficiaries. The best thought, the wisest counsel, must unite and determine broad plans for industrial security.

Every worker in the United States—from the humblest toiler to the highest corporation executive—should realize, as never before, the imperative necessity for united offensive and defensive action, if our productive industry and profitable commerce are to endure. Every employer in the United States should inform his workers and associates of the positive necessity for cooperative effort to conserve our industrial resources. It is even more important for the worker to realize the situation than the employer. His livlihood is primarily at stake.

The similarity of thought in these two lines of comment—one from the statesman in the White House—the other from a representative man of business, is so marked that the resemblance instantly commands attention.

What President Wilson says, and what Col. Pope says, is in each case a plea for industrial efficiency—for the marshaling of all the resources of working capability which America has, for stronger cooperation, between the different factors of efficacy, in our shops, our marts, our business establishments of all kinds, than we have had hitherto— for availing ourselves of existent opportunities, and, by that very utilization, warding off any possible contingencies of disaster.

No sign of the present time is more palpably discernible than that the United States has entered into the initiatory stages of a nationwide crusade for industrial progress. That means conservation and development of our resources, of mines, forests, agriculture — everything in fact which supplies the raw materials of industry—and of the brawn, brain and muscle by which industry marches to its goal.—Buffalo Times.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, The great and Supreme Ruler of the universe has in His infinite wisdom removed from our midst one of our worthy and esteemed sisters, Frances Taylor; and, whereas, the long and intimate relations held with her make it befitting that we as a society record our appreciation of her; therefore,

Resolved, That the sudden removal of a life from our midst leaves a vacancy and a shadow that will be deeply realized by all the members and friends of this organization, and will prove a serious loss to the community and public;

Resolved, That with deep sympathy with the bereaved relatives of the deceased we express our hope that even so great a loss to us all may be overruled for good by Him who doeth all things well;

Resolved, Thatac opy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of this organization, a copy printed in the local papers, and a copy forwarded to the bereaved family

GERMAN NEWSPAPERS SET GOOD EXAMPLE.

We are bound to say one thing about the German press. The serious and dignified tone in which the German newspapers have invariably discussed the progress and the problems of the war is an example which the American press might follow with benefit to itself and to the public.

We do not see in any German newspaper opprobrious epithets applied to the American people. We do not see any cartoons ridiculing or picturing the President of the United States as a ruffian and murderer.

In fact, we have not seen in any German newspaper a single word or a single picture which was intended to express hatred, or contempt, or bitterness against America.

In the face of the bitter, and ugly, and vulgar, and unmanly billingsgate, abuse and pictorial ridicule and hatred heaped by so many of our newspapers upon the German people and the German Government, we are bound to say, in common fairness, that the dignity and self-control of the German press are highly to its credit.—N. Y. American.

"NOBODY FOR HUGHES"— BUT

Colonel George Harvey, editor of the North American Review, inspired with the essence of political intuition, in one leap has boarded the Hughes band wagon and with a motion of his good right arm has possessed himself of the padded stick belonging to the big bass drum. "Come along," he says; "this is the winning carryall. There is nothing like it in all the world. The vehicle of the St. Louis Convention is a hearse. Nobody is for Hughes but the people."

Nobody is for Hughes—but the people! It is an alluring slogan. Even Hughes isn't for Hughes. The office is pursuing him even as the long eared hound chases the flying fox He might be a popular candidate with the politicians if he had a few of the grievances which almost everybody else collected in 1912. But he is a pauper when the question of grievances or enmities is concerned. What right has any man to be considered for the nomination on the Republican ticket unless he ran on the third ticket in 1912 or took part in the theft, robbery, burglary, spoilation, embezzlement—never mind, any term will do—which was perpetrated in broad daylight in full view of the Colliseum stage four years ago? Why, Judge Hughes hasn't even the qualification of having been thrown out of a convention! He hasn't lectured for peace and he hasn't made stump speeches for war! He hasn't a battle axe or a publicity bureau!

It is true that there is a strong feeling for the nomination of Justice Hughes on the part of a very large number of citizens, but they are mere voters. What do they know about qualifications for the Presidency? Justice Hughes doesn't even know how to cater to a pro-Ally mass meeting or a pro-German schuetzenfest. Was there ever such an exasperating man?

We shall see what we shall see. If as Coonel Harvey says, the people are united in the demand, Justice Hughes may run away fast as he can, but nothing can prevent his nomination and election.—N. Y. Herald.

PRIMARY RESULTS

The results of the Republican primaries in Massachusetts, New Jersey and Ohio yesterday made it plain that there will be no stampeding of the Chicago convention for Colonel Roosevelt, but a majority approximately 15,000 was cast against them. In 14 of the 16 Congressional districts unpledged delegates were elected. A Hughes candidate in the eighth was defeated. According to incomplete returns Roosevelt delegates were elected in the ninth and fourteenth districts. The Roosevelt forces were surprised as well as disappointed by their failure, but they refuse to accept the result as a test of Roosevelt sentiment in the State. The verdict of the Massachusetts Republicans, however, was strongly in favor of a convention at Chicago composed of delegates unhampered by pledges and instructions. New Jersey Republicans also elected unpledged delegates. In Ohio, as expected, Senator Burton was an easy winner in the primaries.

To date 687 delegates to the Chicago convention have been elected. Of this number 286 are instructed and and 401 uninstructed.—Utica Dispatch

OBSTACLES.

Do not let obstacles conquer you. Any one who rides a bicycle or runs a motorcar knows that the way to go straight and avoid obstacles is to look past them down the road. By looking at the obstacles one steers right into them in spite of oneself. So in life, when obstacles are ahead, one should look past them, keep the eye on the right road, and so run past and forward.

A Revival of Foulards.

The revival of foulards, which is rumored for nearly every summer season, seems now about to prove a certainty. Not only have charming patterns in the old fashioned material of this name been imported, but there are also new and similar textiles that equal it in charm. Among the most pleasing of these new foulards are the so called "Chippendale prints," says Vogue. These have designs that are very unusual, and the combinations of color are most effective. The new "mikado" prints are something on the order of the Japanese silks.

"If a Man Be Overtaken In a Fault, Ye Which Are Spiritual Restore Such An One"

At the tabernacle last night Evangelist Peacock took his text from Galatians 6:1, "Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual restore such an one in the spirit of meekness, considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted." The evangelist said that the text implied the duty of helping o fallen brother, the spirit in which his help should be given; and the reason for manifesting this spirit. This is the true test of Christianity. This is the spirit of Jesus Christ, always ready to help the weak and fallen. Too many people glory in the downfall of a neighbor. Instead of pushing a fallen brother down we should give him a helping hand. Let the man or woman in this tabernacle who is free from sin hurl the first stone at the guilty. Mr. Peacock fired another broadside at those who had quarrels with anyone, and closed by urging those present to bury their old grudges, throw away their hammers, and line up for God.

More Charity

This is a good test for our Christianity. We should be willing to forgive others because God has forgiven us, Paul says, Brethren, even if a man be overtaken in any trespass, ye who are spiritual, restore such a one in the spirit of meekness or gentleness. This is the spirit of Jesus. Jesus was always willing to help the fallen. His sympathies were with the weaker brother. This is not always the spirit manifested by those who profess to be His followers. Sometimes we glory in the downfall of others. In place of trying to help them up we want to kick them down. Is this the proper spirit? Is this the spirit the Christian should manifest? Is this what Paul commanded the Galatian Christians to do? Is this the spirit Jesus manifested when they brought accusation against the sinful woman? Did not Jesus say, Let him that is free from sin, cast the first stone and when He looked around all the accusers had disappeared. He said to the woman "Where are the men and women who were accusing you and saying all manner of evil against you?" Why did they not stone her? Simply because none of them were entirely free from sin. They knew that Jesus knew they were sinners, and they knew they would be acting a lie if they had stoned the woman, after Jesus put the matter to them in the way He did.

Some people seem to take delight in trying to push other people down. They do everything in their power to put obstacles in the way of the weak and erring. They go from one place to another telling the shortcomings of their friends and neighbors The stumbling brother is pushed on into a fall and the fallen man, who might have been helped to his feet, is left to lie there, the object of unpitying reproach. The lapse of his neighbors is to the vain, glorious man a cause of satisfaction rather than of sorrow. The others weakness serves foor a foil to his strength. Instead of stooping down tor estore such a one, he holds stiffly aloof in the eminence of consciousvirtue; and bears himself more proudly in the lustre added to his piety by his fellow's disgrace. God, I thank thee, he seems to say that I am not like these other people. When God knows nine times out of ten he is ten times worse than the man he is condemning.

Practice the Golden Rule

Paul rebukes such heartless pride. He says, This is not the spirit of Jesus. He says, I fail to see any brotherly love in that kind of work. Why that is the way the devil treats a man. The devil leads a man on and on and after while he simply kicks him out and turns squarely against him. But that is not the spirit of Jesus. Jesus came into the world, not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance. And the Christian way to treat a man is to show a spirit of brotherly love. Practice the golden rule. Do unto others as you would have others do unto you. Do not say to men and women or about man and woman things you would not like to hove them say to you or about you. Now according to teaching of Paul in this passage of scripture the weak and erring have a claim upon our sympathy.

Now I take from this passage of scripture three things that should be taken into consideration by every one professing to be a follower of Jesus Christ. 1. The duty of helping the weak. 2. The spirit in which we should help the weak. 3. The reason for manifesting this spirit. It is the duty of the Christian to help the weak. Probably some may not be willing to accept this kind of teaching but this does not weaken the statement of Paul. We as Christian are supposed to manifest toward others the same spirit that Christ manifested toward us. And unless we have this spirit we do not belong to Jesus. The nearer a man lives to God the more sympathy he has for the man who makes mistakes once and a while. The more he longs to see the sinful and ungodly turned from theirw ays of sin and brought into the kingdom. Paul says, If a man be overtaken in any trespass. Such a thing is liable to come to any person. We are all in danger of sinning against one another. We are in danger of being overtaken in some kind of a trespass. He doesn't mention any kind of sin. He says, If a man be overtaken in any trespass. We all fail. If there are any perfect people in this audience I would like to see them. I do not know any perfect people. I do not know any people that come near what God expects them to be. Now I want you to understand I am not speaking disparagingly about the human race or about the Christian people but if you will just stop long enough to take into consideration what it means to live a perfect life, and then think of the mistakes you make once in awhile, you will be compelled to acknowleodge that you have punctured your perfection several times. Let us remember says Rev. Findlay that it is a man who has erred, of like passions with ourselves and his trespass will excite pity for him, and apprehension for ourselves. Now if we are men and women who have the love of Jesus Christ in our hearts, and walk in the spirit of God, and love peace, then we will have sympathy for those who err and are weak along some lines.

Look to Thyself

But Paul gives us to understand that if we are vain and self seeking men, the irritable, the resentful spirit will manifest iself when our neighbors trespass. We will be angry and will say all manner of evil things about them. Such people are more apt to aggravate them than restore. They are more apt to try to push the weak man down when he tries to rise, than to help him to his feet. This is not the Christian spirit. The Christian spirit is to restore the fallen brother. We should strive to bring him to a right state of mind. He should be restored. Some people if a man makes a mistake kick him out. How would you like God to do the same thing with you? You are a rebel in the sight of God, you are a sinner. You have done many things you ought not to do. You come to God and you ask God to forgive you to the extent you are willing to forgive the otherp erson. Now you are not willing to forgive your brother. How can you expect God to forgive you. Let us notice the spirit in which this act is to be performed. Brethren, even if a man be overtaken in any trespass, ye who are spiritual, restore such a one in the spirit of meekness or gentleness. This is where the strength of a man spiritually is tested. Paul urges the spiritual to make it their business to set right the weaker brother. To bring him back to the fold of Christ. Paul says they are to be restored in the spirit of gentleness. This spirit of gentleness. This spirit of gentleness some one has said, is one of the finest and rarest marks of the spiritual man. The moroseness sometimes associaed with religious zeal, the disposition to judge hardly the failings of weaker men is anything but according to Christ. It is written of Him, a bruised reed shall He not break, and the smaking flax shall He not quench. Gentleness becomes thed isciples of Jesus Christ. Gentleness in every sense of the word.

Gentleness becomes sinful men in dealing with fellow sinners Looking to thyself, lest thou also be tempted. Some one has made this remark. It is a noticeable thing that men morally weak in any given direction are apt to be the severest thing that judges of those who err in the same respect, just as people who have risen out of poverty are often the harshest foward the poor. They wish to forget their own past, and hate to be reminded of a condition from which they have suffered. This should not be the spirit. We should be very careful in denouncing others. Look to yourself cries the Apostle. You have considered your brother's mistakes. Now take a look at yourself. When you look at your own inward corruption what do you think of yourself? Have you never done anything wrong? Are you entirely free from sin? What is your record in the sight of God? Remember Jesus said, Judge not that ye be not judged. For with what judgment ye judge, ye also shall be judged, and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured unto you. And why behold thou the mote that is in they brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye? Or how wilt thou say to thy brother, Let me cast out the mote out of thine eye, and lo, the beam is in thine own eye? Thou hypocrite, cast out first the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye. We are all in danger. We have all sinned. And if we would live ourselves for God wew ould let our neighbors alone and clean up ourselves for God we would have about all we can do. We all have our peculiar temptations. And if we are so self righteous as to think we are perfect, and are unwilling to help others, and they go down under the burden, when we might have helped them, the reproach will be ours. Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault or trespass, ye who are spiritual, restore such a one in the spirit of gentleness; looking to thyself, lest thou also be tempted. It takes a much larger spirit to live up to the teachings of this text than it does to find fault. It takes a much bigger man to do what Paul has commanded us to do, than it does to try to ruin the character of any person. If we are spiritual we will do what Paul has commanded. If we are not we will not be satisfied. We will still want our own way, which is thed evil's day.

HELD UP WEDDING

Couple Ate Ham and Eggs Waiting For Marrying Justice.

LOST A NIGHT AUTO RACE.

Greenwich (Conn.) Justice Refused Pleas For Him to Get Up, and So Couple Got Something to Eat and Waited In City Hall Till Morning.

New York.—Traveling a good part of the night by automobile only to arrive too late to be married and breaking the monotony of the long wait till morning by eating ham and eggs ordered from a lunch wagon, Mr. and Mrs. Earl R. Fisher arrived in this city, having been joined in matrimony early in the morning by Justice of the Peace Albert F. Mead at Greenwich, Conn.

Mr. Fisher is from Providence, R. I., and Mrs. Fisher is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Livernois of Worcester, Mass. She was educated in a convent school at Nicolet, Canada. They met in Providence recently at a dance. Mr. Fisher is connected with a fireproofing company.

When seen at their hotel the young people said the courtship in its serious phase had started only two months before their marriage.

"Three days after deciding to enter the matrimonial sea we came to New York," Mrs. Fisher said, "and our original plan was to be married in Jersey City. But we were told that a twenty-four hour interval between the license and the marriage was required in Jersey, so we telephoned Captain Talbert, the chief of police at Greenwich, and he said to come right ahead.

"We set out shortly after dinner and after driving through the rain arrived in Greenwich about 2 o'clock. Captain Talbert received us at the town hall, but at that late hour the justice of the peace, who was necessary to the ceremony, refused to be wakened. So we waited in the town hall."

"About 4 o'clock," said Mr. Fisher, "we all decided we were quite hungry and went out and had 'ham and' at a lunch wagon, this being the only thing in sight resembling a restaurant.

"When the day got under way the justice of the peace appeared and we were married. We started back to New York and had a real breakfast."

Miss Crystal Sheperd, a moving picture actress, and Ray Howard of New York were the witnesses. The eloping was done in Mr. Howard's limousine.

"There was no particular objection to our getting married," said the bride, "but we feared Earl might soon have to go to China in connection with his work, and we weren't taking any chances."

Gardner, Kan. — When James H. Newston, a banker of Williamstown, Utah, punctured a tire on his motorcar he was forced to remain two days in Edgerton, near here. While walking along the road Newston found a button of a woman's coat. He wrote this note and hung it and the button on a fencepost:

The owner of this button has found a place in my heart.

Laura Ellsworth, a schoolteacher, the owner of the button, found it and the note. She took the button and left this message:

Tomorrow this button will be worn over my heart.

Newston found the second note. He was introduced to Miss Ellsworth. He proposed, was accepted and married. He is now on his way to San Francisco on his honeymoon, driving overland in his car.

OLD MAN CAVE DWELLER.

Sleeps on Bed Made of Leaves and Some Dry Vegetation.

Fulton, Mo.—H. B. Bode, deputy state highway commissioner, has discovered that Callaway county has a cave dweller in one of the bluffs in the hills northwest of Cedar city.

Curious children first discovered the man when they cautiously crept up to the mouth of the cave and found him sleeping on leaves and dried vegetation. His fire smoldered near the entrance to the cave, and near at hand were some primitive cooking utensils fashioned out of stone.

During the day he carries load after load of fagots and logs to keep his fire going, and apparently he lives in comfort. Children reported him to be a kind looking man, with a long beard.

No Pure Water.

Owing to the extremely solvent powers, pure water is never found in nature, the nearest approach being found in rainwater, which, as it is formed in the upper regions of the atmosphere is the purest that nature supplies, but in descending it brings with it whatever impurities are floating near the surface, which in the neighborhood of cities are always numerous; hence perfectly pure water is hardly to be found even the artificially distilled being only approximately so.

WOODMEN TEAM IN GOOD SHAPE

Although the Maccabees succeeded in winning two of the three pool matches with the Woodmen last night, the latter team is practically assured of winning the series, leading their opponents by a margin of 82 points. Only one more game remains to be played, with very remote chances that the Maccabees can overcome this lead.

The Maccabees started off by piling up a safe lead in the series but fell down in several games. The last few encounters have resulted in the Maccabees cutting down the lead of the Woodmen, but it evident that the spurt has come too late.

Hutchins, the first man up on the Maccabee team last night scored an easy victory over Walsh, the respective scores being 50 and 37. Rathbun the second Maccabee man lost out to Davenport 35 to 50, but Shipman defeated Bray, Woodman, 50 to 21.

Next week's game, which closes the series, will be played on the Maccabee tables.

VOLNEY SCHOOLS OBSERVE STATE HEALTH DAY

The schools in the Town of Volney were closed all day today, the teachers and children being in attendance at the annual health day meeting which takes place in the Volney Center Town Hall.

Dr. Sears, Sanitary Supervisor of the District, gave an illustrated address with lantern slides and motion pictures. Miss Finnegan of the State Health Department delivered an address to the children. Warran S. Gardner, district superintendent of schools made an address.

The program commenced at 1:30 p. m. Following the exercises, the children will enjoy a supper furnished by the Ladies' Aid Society of the village. The trustees had made arrangements for conveying the school children to the village in automobiles and carriages.

The idea of having a health day in the town originated last year, the town board of health successfully conducting the event a year ago.

Mrs. Aldrich Declines Office She Won in California.

Los Angeles.—Mrs. Ellen French Aldrich, the first woman in California to be elected "mayoress" of a city, announced on the eve of taking office in Sawtelle that she would not accept the post.

"I want a lowly position," Mrs. Aldrich said. "I want to mingle with the people and to get first hand from them their ideas of how the city of Sawtelle should be managed and what they want. The position of 'mayoress' is too high and too dignified to allow any one to do this. I prefer to serve Sawtelle as a simple trustee."

world. We are sojourners and pilgrims. We belong to the heavenlies. God made us in His own image and breathed into us His own life. We came from Him, we are one with Him and are made for Him. Nothing less than God can fill up the demands of our nature. Our souls cry out for the living God. We are all crying out for the living God. The only difference between us is that some of us know what we want, and some of us do not. Blessed are they who can say: "Thou art my God! The Psalmist says in the 42d Psalm: "As the heart panteth for the water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O, God." My soul thirsteth for the living God. This desire for God increases, and the only one able to satisfy and quench this thirst for God is Jesus Christ. To the woman of Samaria He said: "If thou knowest the gift of God, and who it is that sayeth to thee, 'Give me to drink,' thou wouldst have asked of Him, and He would have given thee living water." Then in Isaiah we read: "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye, to the waters, and he that hath no money, come ye, buy and eat, without money and without price." This spiritual fountain meets then atural requirements of man's nature.

Hugh Price Hughes and Edward Smith were both Wesleyan ministers. They were different in temperament. They were not on terms of intimate friendship, and on many questions they were antagonists. They died within a short time of each other, and when their wills were opened it was found that each had written his own epitaph. Hugh Price Hughes left instructions that they should put on his tombstone this line: Thou, O Christ, art all I want. The other that they should carve over him this testimany: Edward Smith, who was satisfied in Jesus. This is not only the testimony of these two men, but of countless numbers who have found peace and satisfaction in Jesus as their Savior.

Jesus says: "If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink." And in Revelations we read: "And the Spirit and the Bride say come, and he that heareth, let him say come; and he that is a thirst, let him come; and who-so-ever will let him take of the water of life freely."

He Made Good.

Lord Lansdowne once had a remarkable prophecy made concerning him while he was an Oxford graduate. Jowett, his tutor at Balliol, greatly admired him and always said that he would do great things.

"There goes a man," remarked Jowett, "who is as certain to be foreign secretary in due time in whichever party he chooses as tomorrow's sun is to rise."

Of course at that time Lord Lansdowne had not the least idea of filling such a distinguished post, and yet in 1900, after a brilliant political career, he found himself at the head of the foreign office.—London M. A. P.

Delicate Instruments.

Though the man in the street might easily mistake a slight seismic disturbance for the rumbling of a traction engine or an explosion, the marvelously delicate instruments which record earthquake shocks are immune from such deceptions. Sunk in the earth on solid foundations, the recording pen of the seismometer ignores any local tremblings which have not a seismic origin, but the faintest real earth quakings, though they have traveled thousands of miles through the earth, set the pen tracing the telltale graph by means of which the seismologist calculates the place, time and magnitude of the happening.—London Chronicle.

New York—The Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers' Protective Association last night ordered a general lockout of employes to go into effect today. Notices printed in three languages were distributed amang the seventy thousand workers in 409 shops.

The lockout, which was originally planned for tomorrow, will be followed by a strike on Tuesday. There are indications that a sympathetic strike of all garment workers, of which there are more than one hundred and fifty thousand in this city, will be called.

The attitude of the workers was announced by Benjamin Schlessinger, president of their union:

"There will be no peace or let-up until we are assured of just and fair conditions," he declared.

Mayor Mitchel and Oscar S. Straus chairman of the Public Service Commission, may decide upon extreme measures to prevent the crisis. Both resent the action of the manufacturers in twice refusing to participate in a peace parley.

A prominent labor official yesterday declared the workers has a "war chest" of more than $100,000 with which to carry on a strike. They will also have the financial backing of the American Federation of Labor.

HOW TO SECURE A GOOD LAWN AND KEEP IT.—All lawns may be improved if there is a reasonably good turf, as it is possible to better it materially by reseeding, fertilizing and watering. In the spring many bare spots will be in evidence, and if the spots are small they can be reseeded. If they are large it is usually advisable to spade them up and reseed, doing the work early in the spring. If the grass is thin over the entire lawn the work should be started early in the spring, while the soil is loose and in condition to permit the seed to be covered with little difficulty. The whole lawn should be raked with an iron rake and seeded and rolled as soon as the ground is sufficiently dry.

The care of the lawn after it is established is important. Liberal fertilizing should be given, and one of the best fertilizers is nitrate of soda. Five pounds of nitrate of soda is sufficient for 1,000 square feet of lawn, applying this with a watering pot, then watering thoroughly with the hose. Bonemeal is one of the best commercial fertilisers to use on lawns, eight pounds being sufficient for 1,000 square feet. Any fertiliser used should be applied early in the spring, when the grass begins to grow. Bonemeal can be applied every month during the growing season excepting July and August. Prepared sheep and stable manure is also beneficial. Slacked lime can be applied with beneficial results late in the fall.

If a good lawn is wanted buy the best lawn grass seed to be had, well cleaned and free from weeds. Much of the lawn grass seed is from 25 to 50 per cent weed seed. If weeds are wanted do not bother to plant seeds; the weeds will grow without a special invitation.

DAHLIAS FROM SEED.

How They Can Be Started and Transplanted.

For several years I have had grand success raising dahlias from seed, starting them in a box or pan in the house as soon as April 1 and transplanting them in the garden as soon as the ground is warm enough—usually about the last of May, at which time they will have four or six leaves. From a packet of mixed seeds I have had as many as eight different colors, ranging from snowy white to darkest crimson, besides some beautifully striped and variegated. They were the admiration of all beholders, says a writer in Farm and Home.

Should there be a few single ones (as there probably will be) they are by no means to be despised, as they are nice for cut flowers. Set them out along the side of the house or each side of the door, where you can see them as you go about your daily vocations, and you will be more than satisfied with the results. Water them with the water from the weekly wash, as they are greatly benefited by frequent waterings in dry weather. Even if they are not a joy "forever," they will surely give much pleasure through the long hot days of summer.

How to Massage the Scalp Daily Without Making an Event of It.

Press the finger tips (fingers close together) to the scalp and with a gentle pressure rub the scalp in a circular manner, causing it to move. The object is to loosen it as much as possible and bring a warm glow to it by causing the blood to flow to the surface.

When this is accomplished move the fingers to another spot, and in this way go over the whole scalp. If the hair is very dry a very small amount of vaseline may be rubbed into the fingers and applied to the scalp only, as any grease will cause the hair to lie flat if applied to the hair itself.

Any tonic which is chosen should be applied with massage, as most of the benefit is obtained by the massage.

How to Make the Beds So That Slumber Really Refreshes.

To make up a bed so that it will be smooth tuck the clothes in, one piece at a time, at the sides, and complete the work all but tucking the clothes in at the foot. Now draw the clothes down, one piece at a time, as taut as possible and tuck them in at the foot. The bed will be far nicer looking than would be otherwise possible. If the bed is of iron or brass, which does not permit of tucking in the coverlet, tuck in the other clothes as directed, placing the coverlet over all.

How to Do the Family Mending in the Easiest Way.

To do quick, neat and strong mending take presser foot off sewing machine, stretch hole in material over embroidery hoop, hole as near to center as possible; insert under needle, cloth side down; set down the part that holds presser foot; sew back and forth slowly without letting go of hoop. Always sew further than tear each way. After filling in lengthwise of tear turn hoop and sew across. Use medium size stitch.

BROIL YOUR MEATS

The Fine Ancient Art of Cooking on a "Spit."

TRY THE BRAND NEW BROILER

Once Civilization Demanded a Skinned Dimetrodon Turned on a Stick, but Now We Must Depend Upon Gas Ranges and Smoky Drip Pans.

Was it in the stone age that the caveman discovered the fine art of broiling? Certain it is that the original rotisserie of Adam-Eve, Inc., was conducted without pan or fork and consisted of a skinned dimetrodon broiled over a stick. Even centuries later the "spit" was the chief form of cooking equipment, and obese barons lounged at the board while waiting for their serving of broiled ox.

But in modern times the broiling seems to have fallen into disrepute. The housewife of today hates to wash a broiler or her gas stove must be fitted with a special "broiler," and to cook by this method over either oil or open coal has disadvantages. And yet, perhaps no one method serves to cook good meat in such a perfect manner. The constant turning of the meat before the flame, so that each side is evenly browned and seared and the juice is retained, a crisp crust results—ah, what is to equal a piece of meat roti?

But when no special apparatus is at hand and broiling must be done in the double wire rack over a glowing flame, while the fat drops into the coal only to sputter up and crackle and fill the kitchen with smoke—then broiling does not seem to be worth the trouble. Yet it is too good a method of preparing meat to be abandoned because of its unpleasant features. The thing is to do away with the unpleasant features as much as possible.

This can be done if the gas stove is fitted with a regular small, convenient broiler with drip pan. But an even better plan for a gas stove, a coal range or even oil is to use one of the newest articles on the market—a broiler plate—a small device made of heavy iron, corrugated, with a small hole at one end for the escape of juice. It is fitted with a bale handle and is quite light to use. The plate can be heated over any flame and the meat laid on it. In other words, the broiling goes on over the flame instead of under it, as in the usual broilers, with the result that the food is less browned and better tasting, because it does not come in contact with the odor of the flame. No drip pan is needed under it, but a small tin cover can be put under the hole to collect the fat.

Since the meat juices are retained by the broiling method, meat so cooked is particularly excellent for children or invalids. There is less chance for the food elements to escape, less chance of richness, since so much of the fat is broiled away and only the best of the lean meat and its juices are retained. The secret of broiling is in the quickness with which it is done—just the delicious, rare quality which no other method produces. Avaunt with the frying pan! And in its place the broiler plate.

A Tactless Wooing

By EDWARD J. STEWART

The evacuation of Vera Cruz had taken place, and the fleet was ready to sail. The surgeon in charge of the hospital approached the medical director to report that all invalids had been removed.

"There's a man," said the former, "who, I think, must have died without his death getting on to the list. He was dying yesterday afternoon. I haven't seen him since and presume his body was removed. Conover should have seen to it that the record was made."

"Well, there's no time now," said the medical director, "to investigate the case. We must go aboard."

So it was that when the ships reached the United States the name of Horace Morton, petty officer, was reported, "Died in hospital."

Now, it happened that the elimination of Horace Morton was very acceptable to Mrs. Martha Jones, the mother of Ethel Jones, who had been betrothed to the sailor before he departed for Vera Cruz. He had nothing to marry on, while Philip Thompson, a plumber, who also wanted Ethel, had made considerable funds in his business and was able to take care of her in good style. Mrs. Jones had set her face against her daughter's marrying Morton, and to quiet the old lady Ethel promised that if her lover lost his life in Mexico she would marry Thompson. After this promise there was peace in the Jones family, Mrs. Jones hoping that the man who she considered stood in the way of her daughter's welfare would be snuffed out by a Mexican bullet.

But there was only a small scrap at the landing at Vera Cruz, and greatly to Mrs. Jones' disappointment, Morton was not among the killed. Then came the evacuation, and with it the mother made preparations to renew the fight in the matter of a son-in-law. But when she read in a morning paper that Morton had died at Vera Cruz she muttered silent thanks and with every appearance of heartfelt sympathy broke the sad news to her daughter, all the while laying plans for a wedding with the plumber.

Ethel shut herself up in her room for a week, then came out with a surrender, telling her mother that since her lover was dead she cared not whom she married and was perfectly willing to take the plumber or any one else. Such being the case, Mrs. Jones sent Mr. Thompson word that the way was open for him to win her daughter, but she advised him to be very circumspect and proceed slowly. She believed that Ethel thought she loved another, but that the girl was deceiving herself. A few weeks' courtship would do the business.

Mr. Thompson, who was not an adept in wooing a woman who had just lost the man she loved, began by sending Ethel an invitation to a plumbers' ball. Fortunately, he sent it through Mrs. Jones, who threw it in the fire with all haste and wrote her daughter's nonacceptance on account of indisposition.

Mr. Thompson's next move was sending a bouquet of flowers. Mrs. Jones intercepted them, separated the posy, put them in a box and gave them to Ethel as an offering of sympathy from the donor.

This was a beginning, and Mrs. Jones hoped that by carefully heading off the indelicate attentions of Mr. Thompson to bring the affair to a successful termination in due time. Why she took so much pains to prevent her daughter's being ruffled by the plumber's want of tact is not plain, because Ethel was not in a state of mind to care whom she married. Perhaps her motive was looking to the future. It is also a question as to why Mr. Thompson was anxious to marry a girl whose heart was in the grave. He explained this to Mrs. Jones by saying that a live man was better any day than a dead one and Ethel was sure to find it out. It must be admitted that there is more wisdom in the explanation than sentiment in the statement.

All things have an end, and the plumber's courtship was no exception. The wedding day came round, and with it came a coincidence. When the wedding party was assembling in walked Horace Morton, who had failed to get on the dead list in accordance with the navy regulations. And there was no time for an investigation. He had walked out of the hospital in delirium, and the party responsible for him had been looking for him up to the very moment of the sailing of the fleet homeward.

Upon his appearance as a wedding guest, pale and emaciated, there was a scattering of those present. The bride alone seemed to consider him flesh and blood and, rushing toward him, fell into his arms. He had been aware of Mrs. Jones' opposition to him and her preference for the plumber; consequently he took in the situation without its being explained to him.

"I reckon,' he said, "that since everything is handy for a wedding we may as well have one."

Mrs. Jones, seeing that she had lost, threw up the sponge. The plumber remarked that there were as good fish in the sea as ever were caught and walked away without any evident disappointment. Ethel was presently prevailed upon to celebrate the wedding with the change of grooms, and when the parson came in she was married to the sailor.

This is not the only case of a man's being officially dead and turning up at a time when he is not expected.

A Successful Model In Serge.

An unusually trig costume as costumes go today, suiting all of the needs of the well-dressed woman.

One knows not in what dictionary of adjectives to find words to describe the new tailored suits for spring. There is nothing more serviceable than serge, although it is not included among the new fabrics of the season. Skirts are naturally short and unnaturally wide, and coats must, of course, have the godet effect below the waistline.

Because this jacket looks as well in silk, satin or linen as it does in serge, the home dressmaker will be interested in today's lesson dealing with how to cut it. Five yards 54-inch material are required to make the costume. Only the back and collar of the coat are laid on a lengthwise fold of material for cutting, however. The front, the collar, the sleeve sections, skirt and strap, are laid on a lengthwise thread of the serge.

The fronts may be rolled back to form revers with a fancy collar, but if the shawl collar is preferred, cut off the upper front edges of the front and underfacing on line of small "o" perforations.

The front and back of the jacket extend below the waistline in panel style, being finished at the sides with a circular skirt section.

Jersey cloth is also used for many unusually attractive tailored costumes. Charming collars are worn with the spring tailleurs, for there are so many delightful novelties in batiste, organdy that add a more seasonable appearance to the models.

Another material for which smart dressmakers stand sponsor is alpaca. When it comes to a question of service here is a serviceable material indeed, and is used for particularly trig street costumes.

HALF WORN COSTUMES.

How to Freshen Up Your Old Gown So It Looks Actually Frenchy.

Fashions change so rapidly that women of limited means are often sore tried in their attempts to keep up with these periodic and quick movements. A Frenchwoman, whose husband was among the first to respond to his country's call, saw her opportunity and seized it. She made the fact known that she was clever at adapting clothing and that she was ready to exercise her skill on reasonable terms. Plain materials are easily added to, the introduction of contrast is often permissible, and the present vogue for trimming has greatly facilitated her enterprise. The tunic was one of her best resources when she first started her business. Now she finds that the contrast hip yoke and the panel serve her very well.

Frequently sale bargains come in admirably for her purpose, and she is always ready not only to assist in adapting, but to give her aid in choosing from the big stocks of rich and beautiful material which are shown. A serge gown done up recently had the last season's bodice remodeled into a bolero arranged over an undervest made of a piece of rich silk picked up at a sale and sold off because this winter's patterns will not be brought out again for another season.

Mint Sauce.

The best way to make mint sauce is with a boiled sugar sirup. Add the chopped mint to this when it is hot and let stand until cold. Serve cold. Make the sirup of sugar with enough white vinegar added to make a sirup of the right consistency when boiled for about four minutes.

Pure Logic.

Bad men cannot exist without good men. Goodness and badness being relative terms, if there were no good men there could not possibly be any one with whom to compare the bad men. Consequently the bad men would be to all intents and purposes nonexistent. Or, in other words, if all men were bad there would be no good men to look down upon them, and as they would not look down upon themselves and consider themselves bad they would be, for all practical and logical purposes, good.—Life.

AN ELF FROM FAIRYLAND.

Once there lived in Fairyland a capricious little elf named Quicksilver. This was not her real name, but was given to her one day by the king of fairies in a fit of anger at her waywardness. Quicksilver was never to be counted on at all. When one thought to find her visiting the Rose Fairy, whose home was by the garden wall, she had already left and was flashing here and there like a streak of lightning. She led all of the fairy folk such a dance that they decided to teach her to be more reliable. But she was such a sprightly little thing and looked so pretty in her dainty silver frock that they hesitated to change her.

One day when the queen had planned some work for Quicksilver and she had slipped away and could not be found the king's patience was exhausted, and he called his counselors to help him devise a punishment. They decided to build a little glass house for her without doors, through which she might attempt to escape, and to place a little ladder at the rear so that she might climb up and look out upon the scenes of her former naughtiness.

They had difficulty in catching her, but at last she was placed in her new domicile and forced to remain there forever. In the summer, when her friends the flowers, bees and butterflies were about, Quicksilver climbed high up on her little ladder to look at her former comrades with longing eyes. In the winter, however, when these sought shelter from Jack Frost and were nowhere to be seen, she felt sad and lonely and slipped down into her little room and would not allow herself to be seen but for an occasional peep when the day was warmer. Then she climbed in the hope of seeing one of her dear ones.

One day a wise mortal noticed Quicksilver and studied her habits. He determined to make her useful in the world by teaching them to other men. To this day we look at her as she sits in her little glass house, and when one asks mother, "Shall I put on my warm coat today?" she answers, "Go and see what the thermometer is doing."

How Silver Bow Creek Was Named.

Silver Bow creek received its name from a party of prospectors who reached its valley in the vicinity of Butte in 1864. While discussing the best name for the stream the clouds broke away, and the sunshine falling on the creek as it circled around the mountain suggested the name Silver Bow, and it was accordingly so called.—United States Geological Survey.

ROAST HAM WITH CIDER SAUCE.—Soak a twelve pound ham over night in cold water to cover. Place in kettle with one-half cupful each of sliced onions, carrots, two sprigs of parsley, four cloves, one-half bay leaf. Cover with cold water, bring slowly to boiling point, let simmer about four hours or until tender. After cooking two hours add one quart of cider. Allow ham to cool in liquor; remove from liquor, skin, sprinkle with sugar and breadcrumbs, put dashes of paprika over ham and insert a clove in each dash. Bake one hour and serve with cider sauce.

Bubble and Squeak.—Chop cold boiled cabbage fine, season with salt and pepper and fry in butter. Take some cold boiled beef, slice it thin, pepper it well, and broil it. Then pile the fried cabbage in the center of a platter. Arrange slices of beef around and serve immediately.

English Head Cheese.—Take four pig's legs, the part above foot joint, and lean part from head; put in kettle and cover with boiling water; cook until meat falls from bones. Chop meat coarsely, season with salt and pepper; after skimming fat from stock add meat; boil up once, put in mold and set away to harden.

Jellied Rabbit.—Cut rabbit into eight pieces, boil in about a quart of water; when meat falls from bones remove; set liquor to cool and remove fat; dissolve one-half box gelatin in one pint of water and add; season. Boil five minutes, strain and add chopped meat; garnish with parsley.

Beef Heart Chop Suey.—Boil beef heart, chop in small pieces. Take two minced onions, one pint tomatoes, two tablespoonfuls chopped suet, one-quarter pound of macaroni, cooked. Mix all together, put in baking dish, add cupful of boiling water. Bake forty to sixty minutes.

Ham Timbales.—Cook two tablespoonfuls of flour in one and one-half tablespoonfuls of butter; add slowly one cupful of milk and season with a dash each of salt and cayenne. When smooth and thick add one cupful of finely chopped ham, one-half cupful of stale breadcrumbs, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley and one beaten egg. Turn into buttered timbale molds. Stand them in a pan of boiling water and bake about twenty-five minutes. Unmold and serve with white or drawn butter sauce.

Poisons In the Dark.

A writer in the Farm and Fireside gives some ingenious ways to identify poison bottles in the dark and to eliminate all chance of accident from mistaking drugs. "The safest method is to run a cord through the cork, leaving about eight inches of string on opposite sides of the cork. Then drive the cork in as tightly as possible and wrap the string around the neck of the bottle in opposite directions and tie securely. If that bottle is opened it will be opened intentionally. If there are no babies on the place an easier method is to run three or four pins crisscross through the cork. The pins sticking into the fingers will prevent accidental use of the contents."

The largest skating rink in Europe, measuring about 35,000 square yards, is at Davos, in the canton of the Grisons, Switzerland, where all the great international skating competitions take place. It is generally open from the third week in November until the middle of March, and the climatic conditions prevailing at that altitude of 5,200 feet are so excellent that it is indeed an exception when the rink has ever to be closed during this period. A considerable staff of men is employed to maintain the rink in order. The ice is flooded every night and is scraped and polished in the morning with almost the same care that glass workers bestow upon plate glass.

SPRING CLEANING.

Do Most Housewives Renovate Their Beds?

AN OFT NEGLECTED SPOT.

Some People Don't Know How Uncomfortable Their Beds Are Until They Try the Luxury of a Real One. Rules For Renovating Bedding.

In going over her home on a still hunt for germs and pollution does the up to date housewife always include her beds and bedding in her investigation?

An overhauling of our beds may startle us. Ten to one the springs sag, they may be rusty, very probably there will be much dust, and they may creak and groan with the slightest touch.

The mattress may be filled with unthinkable things, and it may never have been remade.

We may find as mattress protectors comforts falling to pieces with age, wornout quilts or no protectors at all. The pillows may be heavy and musty and the ticking long since lost its freshness.

If we would keep our bedding absolutely sanitary we should observe the following rules:

Every mattress and pillow in constant use should be sent out of the house and renovated once a year.

The vacuum cleaner should be used on mattress, pillows and bedsprings frequently.

Blankets should be sent to the cleaner each year rather than washed at home, as the cleaning is more thorough and the blankets remain soft and fluffy.

A special sheet of thin muslin should go over the blankets under the counterpane. This protects them from dust and dirt.

The thrifty housewive makes also a case for her mattress, which is of unbleached cotton and can be laundered, thus insuring hygienic conditions besides saving the expense of having the mattress, which becomes soiled, recovered before it shows wear.

Now is an opportune time to buy bedding, which can be had at special sales prices that count for economy. So it behooves the wise housekeeper or the inexperienced one to save money while she can and make her family comfortable while they sleep. Many a man hasn't known why he felt tired upon getting up until a real comfort in his bed suddenly brought him to a realization of how uncomfortable the old one was.

Kimonos Deserve Attention.

Albatross continues in popularity for the dainty kimono, this model being polka dotted and trimmed with lace.

To be really desirable a kimono should be practical as well as pretty. The flimsy, fragile things are pretty, but they are of little service, hence the woman with a limited income eschews them for more sensible designs. Polka dotted albatross is suggested for the development of this design, which requires 1¼ yards 44-inch material. Either lace or ribbon may be used for the trimming, 7¼ yards 5 inches wide being needed.

Nothing could be simpler than the cutting of this kimono. The entire model is placed on the material at once, being laid directly on lengthwise fold of the albatross. If narrow material is used to make the kimono, add ⅝ inch to edge having tripple "TTT" perforations for seams and place pattern on material with back edge on a lengthwise thread of material.

The making is equally as simple as the cutting. Close the underarm seams as notched, then turn the hems on small "o" perforations.

For the trimming, sew straight gathered ruffles of lace or material to neck, sleeve and lower edge as illustrated. It is possible to ring in all kinds of variations upon the decorative idea. Double ruffles make a pretty effect—for instance, one of chiffon or soft silk and the other of lace.

WARSHIP'S GUNS POINT AT DUBLIN

London—All Ireland is now in a blaze of rebellion. That much is certain from official admissions in both Houses of Parliament today.

It was contended by the Government yesterday that the "uprising" was confined to Dublin and was "well in hand there."

Today it constitutes what Premier Asquith characterized in the House of Commons as a "conflagration.

Martial law has been proclaimed all over the country. Major-General Sir John Maxwell, lately in command of the British forces in Egypt, left for Ireland today to suppress the rebellion with all the circumstance of civil war. Meanwhile English troops are being poured into Ireland from Wales

Dublin itself seems, from the Government admissions, to be in a state of war resembling that which prevailed in the city of Mexico in the last days of Madero.

Judging from the speech of the Marquis of Lansdowne today in the House oof Lords, the insurgents are in possession of the Post Office, the City Hall, the four courts of justice and the two principal railway stations which command communication with England.

The telegraph service is broken down, and there continues an almost complete stoppage of communication between Ireland and England.

That Ireland's internal traffic is paralyzed to some extent is shown by the fact that in Drogheda, twenty-six miles north of Dublin, no Dublin papers have been received since Monday.

In Dublin Bay British warships have trained their guns on the city; but the authorities are hopeful that the military may be able to restore order without a naval bombardment.

Stilz was arrested last night at a hall where a bazaar is being held for the benefit of the widows and orphans of the Central European powers.

The tree bears a silky cotton, which is used to some extent for stuffing cushions.—Commerce Reports.

HAYTI DEFIES AMERICAN RULE

Port au Prince, Hayti—The Haytian Senate is today in open defiance and hostility to President Sudre Dartiguenave. The President is face to face with the gravest crisis in the history of his government, which is believed to be officially backed by the United States.

The Senate, under the leadership of men who were candidates for election to the presidency at the time President Dartiguenave was chosen, met today in a hired hall and organized the General Assembly, which was dissolved last month by presidential decree. Paul Laroque was elected as President of the Senate and he officially declared the General Assembly in session.

President Dartiguenave, when informed that the opposition intended to meet and organize Congress, sent word to General Legetime, for many years one of the strongest military leaders, through intermediaries that if the meeting was held and Congress met over his protest and in contravention to his decree dissolving that body he would resign, provided the American naval forces under Rear Admiral William B. Caperton, who i sin command of the United States war ships in Port on Prinde harbor, refused to back him up and disperse the meeting of the Senatorial opposition.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

"Fulton First, Last and All the Time"

Clean up; Paint up; Brighten up and Live up.

DEAR CITIZENS:

Of course, you are a good citizen of FULTON and you are glad to do all you can to help clean-up our city. We know it and still, we request you to assist us, by talking to the other fellow and to try to make him do the same thing that you have done.

Upon the stage of household health be a star performer. The very best is none to good for FULTON.

You can do a lot by asking everybody you know to do the following:

CLEAN UP, ALL ALLEYS, VACANT LOTS, YARDS AND CELLARS; PAINT UP ALL HOUSES, BARNS, FENCES, AND SHEDS; PLANT GARDENS AND SOW SEEDS ON VACANT LOTS; DRAIN ALL STANGANT POOLS.

DO THIS BEFORE IT IS TOO LATE.

Combined, we can make FULTON the healthiest and cleanest city in the State of New York. Let's slip it over on the other cities and prove to them that when FULTON starts something, you can't beat her.

HEALTH, CLEANLINESS, HAPPINESS AND PEACE will make FULTON the model city in the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

A CLEAN FULTON, FIRST, LAST AND ALL THE TIME.

Sinn Fein Headquarters Shelled by Gunboat

Belfast, via London—Liberty Hall, the headquarters of the Sinn Fein Society in Dublin, was shelled by a gunboat in the rioting early this week in the Irish capital, according to official statements given out here.

The first official intimation of the outbreak in Dublin was received here yesterday. Telegraphic and telephonic communication between Belfast and Dublin is still interrupted seriously.

The Grand Master of the Orange lodges of Ireland issued an order today to all Irish Orangemen, saying:

"In a crisis like the present it is the duty of every loyal man to place his services at the absolute disposal of the Government."

The Belfast News letter today says it understands the postoffice at Dublin has been retaken by the military forces.

The newspaper also publishes the following statement:

"The police authorities desire the widest publicity in your district of the following:

"During the night (Wednesday) a Royal naval reserve gunboat shelled Liberty Hall, the headquarters.

An official statement from the headquarters of the Irish command in Dublin received at the Victoria barracks here Wednesday morning said:

"Reports from the prrovinces indicate that normal conditions preval.

"The situation in Dublin has improved and adequate forces are at the disposal of the military authorities to cope with it."

CASEMENT ASKS FOR SILK HANGING ROPE

London—Sir Roger Casement, in the gloomy confines of a cell in the Tower of London, is boastful and defiant. He has no regrets for his part in the Irish revolt.

He has made but one request—that when he is hanged a silken rope be used. One of his ancestors, he says, was hanged for attempting to free Ireland. The honor of a silken rope was granted him, and Sir oger asks the same courtesy.

That Casement will be hanged, and speedily, is accepted as a fact. He will be tried in a short time.

What the Engineers are Doing

THIRTY thousand American engineers are making a card index survey of American industry so that it may be prepared for its vital part in defending the Country, if need comes. The past eighteen months have taught us here in America what lack of industrial preparedness has meant to some of the countries now at war. These nations had the ships and they had the men; but when the hour struck, their factories were not able to furnish the colors with arms and shells and powder. Their factories were not prepared. And our factories are not prepared.

But it is not enough to draw a moral. In the United States five great Engineering Societies—Civil, Mining, Mechanical, Electrical and Chemical—have pledged their services to the Government of the United States, and are already working hand in hand with the Government to prepare industry for the national defense. They receive no pay and will accept no pay. All they seek is opportunity to serve their country, that she may have her industries mobilized for defense.

All elements of the nation's life—the manufacturers, the business men, and the workingmen—should support this patriotic and democratic work of the engineers, and assist them cheerfully when asked. There can be no better national insurance against war.

The Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, representing all advertising interests have offered their free and hearty service to the President of the United States, in close co-operation with these five Engineering Societies, to the end that the Country may know what the Engineers are doing. The President has accepted the offer. The Engineers have welcomed the co-operation.

This advertisement, published without cost to the United States, is the first in a nation-wide series to call the country to the duty of co-operating promptly and fully with the Engineers.

STATE STREET CHURCH SENT MORE THAN 700 TO TABERNACLE LAST NIGHT

"He that is wise winneth souls," was the sermon theme reserved for the members of the State Street church, last night, when they visited the tabernacle. The evangelist developed the theme into one of his strongest sermons, emphasizing the need of personal work by every Christian.

About 7:20 the line of marched formed at the State Sstreet church, headed by the Rev. H. D. Holmes, the pastor, and from that time until the service closed Mr. Holmes remained as the leader. Upon reaching the tabernacle the adults fell back, allowing the children to enter first. Seats had been reserved for them near the platform. The delegation carried upon which were inscribed "He Included Me;" "What's the Matter with Peacock?" "He's All Right;" "Who's All Right? Peacock;" "There's Power in the Blood;" "It's Just Like His Great Love" and "Booster's for State Street Church."

More than 700 persons represented the State Street church. Prayer was offered by the Rev. Jabez Stallwood, of Oswego. The attendance yesterday afternoon was 200; offerings $2.38. In the evening 2,300 entered the big doors, and $251.65 were collected from the audience.

The theme of Evangelist Peacock's sermon last night at the tabernacle was "Personal Work." He chose two Old Testament texts, Proverbs 11:30, "He that winneth souls is wise," and Daniel 12:3, "And they that be wise shall shine as the firmament and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever." He said in part:—

The revised version renders the first "He that is wise winneth souls." Either of these translations bring out the full meaning of this text. None but the wise can win souls. You never knew a fool to make any attempt to win a soul for the Lord Jesus Christ' There is a secret in soul winning that only is revealed to those who come into close communion with God. In order to be successful in this line we must permit the Holy Spirit to guide and direct us. We must cooperate with the Holy Spirit and have the Holy Spirit cooperate with us. Without the aid of God's Spirit our greatest efforts will be of no avail. With the cooperation of the Holy Spirit our weakest efforts will bring about the greatest good. Many ministers of God and many professed followers of God fail, because they do not keep in elose touch with God. They depend upon their intellectual powers or their standing in the community when they should rely upon the Spirit of God. No man can win souls into the Kingdom of God, no matter how strong he may be intellectually, unless he cooperates with the Holy Spirit Cooperation with the Holy Spirit means to place ourselves in the hands of God and be willing to do what He commands us to do. I believe the Spirit of God is as powerful today as it was in the days of old. God never changes. He is the same today, yesterday and forever, and if God never changes it would be an impossibility for His Spirit to change. The fault is not with God, but with His people. We do not permit His Spirit to enter into our hearts and lives to guide and direct us in all our undertakings.

In looking back over the history of God's people, we ascertain that every successful leader was in subjection to the Spirit of God, and if the church to day expects to do the work God has assigned, the ministers, and layity, must be men and women filled with God's Spirit. Without the Holy Spirit guiding and directing us, it will be an impossibility for us to accomplish the work of God in this world. This is one of the weakest points in the church today. We do not have enough spirituality in our churches. We are drifting away from God and his Christ and going after an idolatrous people. We are forgetting what God has done for us, in giving His only begotten son, that we might be delivered from the bondage of sin and wickedness. We are becoming cold in the service of God and are

ABOUT COMPOSERS

Tannhauser, founded on a medieval legend, shows the power of love to redeem and save from consequences of sin and error. The grand march from Tannhauser is the opening number on the program for the Fulton Symphony Orchestra concert, Tuesday, May 2nd.

* * *

Mr. F. Jess Newton, ever alert to the welfare of the Fulton Symphony Orchestra, has famed an oboe elsewhere. The instrument is in the hands of Mr. Ray Ferguson, who is working hard to make good use of it next Tuesday evening.

* * *

Perhaps the most pleasing number to many persons on the Symphony Orchestra program will be a special arrangement of Dvorak's Humoresque by F. Jess Newton. The arrangement gives the opening to string orchestra, then the flutes are heard playing "Swaunee River" very softly as an obligato; later the reeds, brasses and percussion instruments add their strength for a few bars—gradually dropping out till strings and flutes are left alone for eight bars, closing with the string section.

Ships Shell Dublin; Heart of Dublin Burns

London—An official communication, issued by Field Marshal French, commanding the home forces, late last night, says:

"The military operations for the suppression of the rebellion in Dublin are proceeding satisfactorily.

"What may be described as the arganized forces of the rebels are confined to a few localities, the principal one being the Jackville street district, in which the rebel headquarters appear to be the general postoffice.

"The cordon of troops around this district has been drawn closer, and the rebels in this locality are now confined behind their line of barricades.

"Sniping from houses by small parties of rebels established in various parts of Dublin city continues.

"The district where this snipping is most prevalent is the northwest and the Four Courts, which is still in the possession of the rebels. The clearance of the snipers is a matter of time.

"Considerable damage was caused by fires on Thursday.

"A large fire is still burning in Sackville street.

"The other parts of Ireland which are the principal centres of disturbance are County Galway and Enniscorthy. Disturbances are also reported at Killarney, Clonmel and Gorey. Other parts of Ireland appear normal.

"The general trend of the reports received indicates that the disturbances are of a local character."

RUSSELL, OLD SHIP, SUNK BY MINE

London—The British battle ship Russell struck a mine in the Mediterranean on Thursday and went to the bottom with a loss of 124 officers and men. Rear Admiral Fremantle, Captain William B. Smith, of the Russell; twenty-four other officers and 676 men were rescued. The Russell was one of the older battle ships, antedating the dreadnought era, but she was regarded, nevertheless, as a formidable fighting machine. About the same time a German submarine was sunk off the east coast of England.

OUR MUTUAL BELIEF

Fulton people are busy at the present time discussing their individual religious beliefs. Here and there one catches bits of conversation on "I believe so-and-so while another becomes surprised at the lack of spiritual perception manifest by followers of certain creeds. However, it is noted that in one point, the chief point of all ,that all agree, and that is a belief that God is good.

Throughout the ages the one bright star shining through the clouds of earthly existence has been that of a belief in God. Never has an age presented itself wherein its people have departed from this belief. In spite of the fact that writers have presented statistics and essays setting forth as facts that each generation recedes rather than advances in religious work; in spite of the fact that ministers of the gospel have held up to our gaze those empty pews," we still have proof that humanity is living close to God. In proof let us turn to the countless agencies at work for the alleviation of human suffering. Never in the history of the world have there been such hosts of clubs, societies and organizations seeking not alone the welfare of human beings but that of animals as well. There are Bands of Mercy, Welfare Boards, Humane Societies, and auxiliaries of this and that until every little village and hamlet, as well as our big cities, are all busy obeying the commandment "Love your neighbor as yourself." Many of these organizations may not be directly religious in bearing, but surely distinctly spiritual. To be religious one is not necessarily spiritual and visa versa.

In our own city we have had countless demonstrations of the true spiritual worth of our citizens at large. Never at any time when a call has been sent out for contributions for a worthy cause has its people failed to respond. The giving has always been done in such a princely way, lavish of hand and generous of heart.

We are told of a people that "By their fruits ye shall know them.". Among our good people are those who have not alone learned the blessing of giving from their pocketbooks but also of their better selves. Haven't you met the Fulton people who gave you the glad good morning, the helpful word at the right time, and the stilled tongue on the wrong topic? They're here in Fulton. Like the first violet you may have passed them by—but they're here. Hunt them down and enjoy a real find. And—however varied may be our beliefs we are all agreed, let us remember, that God is surely good and that He is no respecter of persons.

A USEFUL CITIZEN

This man was "a conspicuous leader in the life of the country." There are thousands of counties in America and the type will be recognized in practically every one of them. So we omit the name and present the leading facts as given in the complimentary and sympathetic obituary notices of the local papers. He died in the same home in which he was born. His father built up the farm. He had continued the work and had increased the holdings until his acres measured about a square mile. He made agriculture pay and he had a profitable diary.

He was a man of rigid principles. He belonged to the minority party and ran on its local tickets even when he knew he would be defeated. When his party gained control of the state government he was selected for an important office and served faithfully and well. To him politics was a duty. He was a stockholder in a dairy company, a stockholder in the local bank, a member of the agricultural club, a trustee of his church and head of its Sunday school.

The local account says: "He was to be seen at most of the agricultural congresses, the county fairs, and at other laces of special interest to farmers. He was a delegate for many years to the General National Congress of Farmers. He attended the last Congress at Omaha."

He had a delightful family and his home was the center of neighborhood hospitality. "The news of his death spread rapidly and was received with genuine regret, for by his long years of participation in the politics of the county and by his active interest in agricultural and church affairs he had become a conspicuous leader in the life of the county."

The big news associations do not send such chronicles as this over the wires. It is a pity, for that kind of life is one of the finest forces of our citizenship; useful in what it produces, not only in crops but also in character and influence. What would America be without its country gentlemen?—Country Gentleman.

HISTORY REPEATS A FAMILIAR STORY

If we have not misunderstood the remarks of our morning and evening contemporaries in this town, the majority of them regard the Irishmen who have taken arms against England as ungrateful rebels, who deserve to be hanged.

The same papers are also vastly indignant because Germany, at war with England, has aided the Irish revolutionists in their effort to establish an independent Irish republic.

A hundred and forty years ago a handful of English subjects, distantly related to some of us, rebelled against England with the object of setting up an independent American republic.

The British and American Tory publications of that day regarded those who had taken arms against England as ungrateful rebels who deserve to be hanged.

The same publications were also vastly indignant because France, at war with England, aided the American revolutionists in their efforts to establish an independent republic.

History has a habit of repeating herself. In this case she has done so with perfect exactness.

Not a feature of the first story is omitted—not even the American Tories' part.

We notice in some of these same Tory newspapers cartoons ridiculing the Irish revolution and labeled "Made in Germany" or "Made in the United States."

The Irish revolution was not made in Germany. Neither was it made in America.

The Irish revolution was made in Ireland.

And it was made by more than three hundred years of harsh misgovernment, with the alien heel on the necks of the children of the soil.

Had the Irish people been freely granted the same home rule and practical independence that Canada and Australia and New Zealand have long possessed, they would not now be in arms against the British Empire.

If the Tories are going to denounce men for acting, as our own fathers gloriously acted, let them at least have the decency not to defame and to lie about them. —N. Y. American.

Opinions

BACK TO NATURAL CONDITIONS

Why is it that the great majority of people love the artificial more than the natural, and spend nearly all their lifetime seeking things of really no account, when only the great things which God has made will satisfy the soul? The summer is coming on, with its delightful camping season, when all who are so fortunate as to reside in northern New York can, at very slight expense, get close to Nature's heart. If there is no time to commune with the Great Architect of the beautiful out-of-doors it is really our own fault. It is because the things we prize and work for and think we cannot do without areo f more importance to us than the blue mountains, blushing sunsets and peaceful skies, green forests and lapping waters, the delicate perfume of wood flowers and the limpid song of birds. Most people are so wedded to their false gods that they actually trundle along the things from the city and village to their summer outing places to keep them from getting lonely, when they are surrounded on all sides by the most wonderful things which they do not try to understand and therefore do not see. If the horizon were surrounded by just one acre of forest and lake, rare marvelous things could be found in the limited area which would keep one studying for a lifetime, and the discovery of the mysteries of which would bring the most pronounced happiness. The baubles of so-called civilization would be left behind and would not be missed, for there would be no time for them. Who has not seen artifically colored flowers in the city marts? But what dyed flowers can compare with those so delicately or gorgeously tinted by the sun? Our artificiality is a quickly acquired habit. We are not born that way but we go on all through life trying to get pleasure out of the unnatural—trying to paint the lilies. We cannot do the job. The further we get from the natural, the more completely we are lost in the mazes of the desert of disappointment. So when the warm rains and the soft airs and shimmering days come, put on your old clothes and get out into the open with your loved ones and a book on birds and flowers or rock or stars for an evening guest, leaving behind those cards and the victrola, while you romp or fish or sail through the days, though you can get but few, and think of the beauty, the majesty and the glory of the things about you. There is that peace of mind "which passeth all understanding" and it is found only when the human heart is attuned to the harmonies of the Divine.—Malone Farmer.

LITTLE TALKS ON THRIFT

By S. W. STRAUS

President American Society for Thrift

"Nor trivial Loss, nor trivial Gain despise;
Molehills, if often heap'd to Mountains rise;
Weigh every little Expense, and nothing waste,
Farthings long sav'd, amount to Pounds, at last."
—Benjamin Franklin.

Philip D. Armour, the founder of the Armour Packing Industry, understood thoroughly the science of wasting nothing. There was a time, he said, when the parts of cattle were wasted and the health of the city injured by the refuse. But later, by adopting the best known methods, it was found that nothing need be wasted and buttons, glue, fertilizer and other things are now made from what was formerly waste material. This is the very essence of thrift, and should and could be practiced in every business office and every home. It makes the saving of money possible.

Mr. Armour said he considered the turning point in his career the time he began to save the money he earned in the gold fields. There will be a turning point in the career of every one when he begins to save, though it be but a nickel or a dime a day. These seem small sums—hardly worth saving; yet Sir George Foster in a recent speech showed that if every person in Canada would save ten cents a day, there would be a total of $250,000,000 saved a year.

Some people cannot save ten cents a day but almost every one can save a little by doing that in personal spending which is done in any well conducted business—putting a stop to waste.

All things are harder for the adult to learn than for the child, even economy. The parents, therefore should teach economy to the child. George Washington said, "Economy makes happy homes and sound nations. Instill it deep." Children should be taught to be economical in the matter of what they eat. They will thus be taught to save their health. They should be taught to economize in the matter of spending—the uselessness and perishableness of most of the things they would like to buy, the advantages of a savings account and the feeling of a security it brings. Children thus taught make good citizens—frugal, clear-headed and steady.

The members of the Congregational Church in Fort Dodge, Iowa, were probably taught economy in their youth and were teaching it in turn to their children for when they decided to build a new $60,000 church they formed the nucleus of their fund by placing barrels on the street corners and requesting residents to deposit junk, rags, old iron, rubbers and bottles—in them. One Sunday school class raised $300 alone on the sale of old paper.

WITH THE SUFFRAGISTS

In Denmark where women will celebrate the first birthday of equal suffrage on June 5, the Social Democratic Party has included two women in its list of parliamentary candidates.

* * *

The Cheyenne Industrial Club, during the visit of the "Suffrage Special" to Wyoming, not only presented a framed copy of the territorial act which in 1869 gave suffrage to the women of the state, but it extended an invitation to Mrs Harriet Stanton Blatch to become a resident of Wyoming. Mrs. Blatch with other eastern suffragists has announced her intention of establishing her residence in Kansas in order to be able to vote at the coming presidential election.

* * *

In Berlin the labor leaders are reported as much concerned over the problem of getting the thousands of women who have found employment as the result of the war to give up their jobs to men when the war is over.

In England the Independent Labor Party is planning at its annual conference to call upon the government to give women the vote at the earliest possible moment as a step 'made imperative by the entry of women into industry as a by-product of the war.

In Norway women did not reach equal political rights at a single bound but mounted on the top of the ladder round by round. Municipal suffrage to women with an income of a hundred dollars was the first round; parliamentary suffrage on the same terms was the next round; universal municipal suffrage formed the next round; full parliamentary suffrage formed the fourth round, and now after fifteen years, women in Norway have been granted the right to membership in the Council of State and their political emancipation is thereby complete.

* * *

The Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage has issued a call to the women voters to meet in Chicago on June 5th, 6th and 7th to launch a national woman's party. The message is being delivered, judging from the press reports, most effectively by the "Suffrage Special" bearing eminent speakers now touring the suffrage states.

* * *

President Wilson in his address of welcome to the Daughters of the Revolution seemed to forget entirely, so comments "The Suffragist" that he was addressing about three thousand disfranchised women. Women have told him repeatedly that they 'desire to be free and take part in the administration of a self goverened commonwealth.' Although he consistently neglects to aid their political enfranchisement he is apparently very much at ease when speaking before them of his ideals of 'free government and true republics.' "

Plant That Feigns Death.

In South America there is a plant, a species of mimosa, which resorts to death feigning, evidently for the purpose of preventing grass eating animals from eating it. In its natural state this plant has a vivid green hue, but directly it is touched by a human finger or by any living animal it collapses into a tangle of apparently dead and withered stems.

COUNTESS OF WARWICK.

AUTHORITY SPEAKS

Frances Evelyn, Countess of Warwick, Writes For Papers.

IS AN ETIQUETTE EXPERT.

One of England's Most Popular Hostesses Will Give a Series of Articles on the Charm and Dignity of Good Manners In Social Life.

It is announced that Frances Evelyn, countess of Warwick, will write a series of articles on etiquette for newspapers. In her introduction the countess states:

"If parents were more with their children familiarity with all the details of etiquette would be inherited rather than acquired. While mothers are content to leave their little ones to others, boys will tend to become rough and self conscious and girls will regard instructions as a lesson and resent it accordingly. I have made it a rule to have my children round me on every possible occasion.

"The tendency toward carelessness must be repressed by all of us, and etiquette has done much to add to the charm and dignity of life. We need more study of demeanor than do the French, Italians and Spaniards, for the Latin races have a natural grace that is only seldom found among us. The Italian peasant of the Maremma, the Spanish shepherd of the Asturias, will astonish you by his perfect courtesy, his instinctive knowledge of the right word, the appropriate action.

"We are rougher and more rude until we have been polished on the grindstone of polite custom or until we have traveled and lost our insularity.

"After all, our behavior is the reflection of our personality, and while, if that personality be gracious, knowledge of etiquette will set it off to complete advantage, an aggressive personality cannot be made tolerable by any amount of perfectly correct act"

CAN OF CORN 27 YEARS OLD.

And It's Still Good, Says Food Commissioner.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Stories are published frequently regarding vegetables and fruits that have been canned many years. Some persons have an idea that fruit and vegetables lose in wholesomeness after being in cans for a long time. This idea, however, seems to be a fallacy, according to an analysis recently made by H. E. Barnard, state food and drug commissioner, who examined a twenty-seven-year-old can of corn.

The can of corn was submitted to Mr. Barnard by the Indiana Wholesale Grocers' association, and no doubt exists as to the age of the corn. Mr. Barnard reported to the association that the corn was found in good condition "in regard to color, consistency and flavor." The interior of the can was bright. "Our investigation of this can of corn," Mr. Barnard reports, "is additional evidence that properly canned goods will keep indefinitely with no deterioration so far as food value is concerned and with little or no change in palatability."

PREFERS INSANITY TO KNIFE.

Laborer Will Not Permit Lifting Fractured Piece of Skull.

New Brunswick, N. J.—Although physicians assure him that unless he submits to a simple operation he will go insane or become an epileptic, Anton Michal of this city refuses to undergo surgical treatment.

While working for the Nixon Nitration works near here last September a fall of concrete fractured Michal's skull. Physicians say the fracture is pressing on his brain and that he cannot recover without an operation. He is suing the Nixon Nitration works for $3,600. The company cannot force him to undergo the operation, because there is a chance it might prove fatal.

In Agreement.

"Do you think your constituents agree with your views?"

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum. "I made it a point to have my views in agreement with theirs before I said a word."—Washington Star.

HOW THE FISHERMAN SHOULD HANDLE HIS SHORT BAIT CASTING ROD.—The successful fisherman is one who is familiar with the habits of the fish he seeks, and it is to his advantage to be acquainted with the waters which he intends to explore. In early spring the water is cool, and bass can be found in the shallows during the day. The likely places should be near the sheltering rocks in shoal water or near old stumps and submerged branches. Pickerel also make for the warm waters during the day, and in casting during the early months of the season work the shoal places well.

The fish at this time feed on minnows and helgramites below the surface, and the logical bait to use is the underwater type. Two styles of bait casting are used, the overhead and the underhand casts, and it would be well for the angler to master both. The underhand cast is made by reeling in the bait until it is within six inches or so of the tip of the rod. The click and drag are released and the ball of the thumb is firmly pressed on the line of the spool. The rod is swung across the body to the rear, the tip being level with the angler's breast, then brought smartly forward across the body in the desired direction, while the thumb is partly eased to allow the line to run freely.

The whole secret of casting lies in thumbing the line, and a few hours of practice should suffice to demonstrate how the trick can be accomplished. The beginner, however, will find it an advantage to practice casting with a full reel, and if the casting line is not sufficiently long enough to fill the spool a quantity of string may be first spooled and the casting line wound on the core thus made. Considerable practice is, of course, necessary before the angler can cast long and accurately, and the thumb must be educated to regulate the speed of the reel and allow it to travel freely, but not overrun.

SPARE THE OMELET!

How to Test Eggs In an Easy, Practical Way.

For the benefit of the many women who do not know the various means of testing home foods the following hints are given:

A simple test for the freshness of eggs depends upon their weight. An egg quickly loses water by evaporation through its shell and weighs less as it grows older. Place the eggs in a solution made of two ounces of salt to one pint of water. A fresh egg sinks. An egg a few days old has a tendency to rise a little in the liquid, while a stale egg floats on the top.

The light test is a very effective one. Place an opaque screen over a strong light, leaving an aperture about the size of an egg. Place the egg between the eye and light, close against the opening. A fresh egg appears clear, almost translucent, and at the large end, between the lining and the cell, a small transparent air chamber can be seen. Dark spots indicate staleness. A stale or rotten egg looks darker than a fresh one. If an egg is broken and the white and yolk are found to have run together it is almost enough proof that the egg is not fresh.

How to Crack Nuts For Fudge and Cake.

Almost all housewives know how very hard it is to crack pecan nuts. Pour boiling water over the nuts and allow them to stand tightly covered for five or six hours. The nut meats may then be extracted easily without a trace of the bitter lining of the nut. Use nut crackers and crack lightly all around the nuts. The work is quickly done and is not at all like the old tedious process of picking out the meats from the dry nuts. The meats nearly always come out whole.

How to Remove Iron Rust From Cottons and Linens.

Buy five cents' worth of oxalic acid crystals (poison), put into a bottle, fill up with water and shake. On a sunny day take clothes with iron rust on outdoors, wet with oxalic acid solution and hold in sun until stain disappears. If it does not go quickly wet again and rub between hands. Then be very sure to rinse thoroughly or the acid will eat the cloth.

How to Hang Curtains So That They Hang Well.

Curtains will hang straight if a small lead weight is sewed in each end of the lower hem. In the case of thin curtains the weights will also prevent them from blowing. They will hang as they should, following the line of the woodwork. For silk curtains get a weighted braid, which comes for dress skirts, and sew it in the hem.

How to Mix a Homemade Fertilizer For Foliage Plants.

A splendid fertilizer for all pot plants and evergreens may be made in this way: Dissolve one can of lye in two gallons of water, and put in enough bones to make a thick, crumbly mass. A few spoonfuls of this in your watering pot once a week will give a wonderful growth and brightness to all foliage plants.

AGED RANCHER MAKES COSTLY TRIP TO ST. PAUL

Loses $700 In Quick Time—He Has, However, Two Mummies and a Freak Sheep to Show.

St. Paul.—An interest in two mummies, one six legged sheep and a broken down auto truck is all John McMahon, one time longshoreman and prizefighter and later North Dakota rancher, has to show for $700 from which he has been separated since coming to St. Paul last December.

McMahon is sixty-five years old and says he ought to have known better, "but folks talk so well that an old fellow like me believes them."

When McMahon reached St. Paul he met a man who took him to his home, and there, McMahon says, he was robbed of $150. The case was taken to court, but the defendant was dismissed.

"Well, that was the beginning of my troubles," McMahon said. "The police tried to look after me, but I wouldn't allow them, and now I have only $400 left out of the $1,100 which I got when I sold my ranch near Bowman, N. D., and came here."

Shortly after this experience McMahon met Mr. and Mrs. Joseph La Porte, who were living at the same hotel with him.

"They were mighty nice folks at first and took me out for a good time," McMahon explained. "We went to shows and had dinners and nice little parties."

After the first week's entertainment by the La Porte family, McMahon said, they started to talk to him about the show business. They told him of the money they made traveling with carnival companies using the six legged sheep and the mummies for attractions.

"It looked like a gold mine to me, and I asked them to let me in on it, and for awhile I was worried for fear they wouldn't do it," the old man said. "But later they let me in, and I have been spending money on that sheep and those two fake mummies ever since."

MANY JOBS FOR BIG BOY.

A 300 Pounder Is Athlete, Cashier and Factory Hand.

New Egypt, N. J.—Thomas Van Horn, sixteen years old, six feet three inches high and who weighs 300 pounds, is Ocean county's champion big boy. Young Van Horn, a son of Township Collector William C. Van Horn, is a high school junior and near the top of his class.

He is a sprinter and has hopes of establishing a new record as a hammer thrower.

Out of school he helps in the operation of a canning factory and at night is cashier at a moving picture theater. He has been elected official scorer for the New Egypt baseball team. Because he still has considerable time on his hands and is, above all, a real boy. He is a member of the boy scouts and aspires soon to wear several scout merit badges.

EXPERTS IN TRACKING.

Australian Natives of Both Sexes Trained From Childhood.

The Australian aboriginals are the finest trackers in the world, London Answers declares.

On many occasions they have performed feats which are almost beyond belief. But to them the work is quite habitual. The boys are taught to track from birth.

The women are just as expert as the men. Horse tracks are child's play to them. They can track a horse at full gallop. They can track anything—possums, snakes, iguanas, even beetles leave sufficient trail for them to work on.

The standard of honor among these tribes is high. When one of them breaks their strict code, fearing the wrath of the tribe, he bolts and, knowing he will be pursued, uses all his knowledge in an effort to elude those in search of him. But it is questionable if there is a single case on record where he escaped.

What might be called classes in tracking are held for the youngsters. The tutor will get them in a body and then disappear into the bush and do everything he can to make them lose his tracks. He will tiptoe along fallen logs, swim a quarter of a mile along a stream, double on his tracks, and so on.

Finally he returns to the boys, who then set out to pick up the tracks.

OFFICE BOYS MADE SKATERS.

Some Use Bicycles In Long Hauls of Bridgeport Plant.

Bridgeport, Conn.—Office boys at the Remington Arms and Ammunition company's plant must have athletic capabilities to meet the requirements of the job. The corridors in the plant are so long that it is a considerable journey between many of the offices.

The company has recently gone into the traffic problem, and the result is that twenty-five bicycles and eighty-five pairs of rubber roller skates are being used by the 110 office boys in the plant. The skates are noiseless, so that a youngster can whirl in and be gone before the recipient of the message picks it up.

Broken Jaw Causes Starvation.

Woodland, Cal., March 15.—A man died in a local hospital recently as a result of injuries sustained when he fell from the county bridge at Tancred. He suffered a compound fracture of the jaw, since when he had not been able to masticate food or to take nourishment properly. Gradually he wasted away, literally from slow starvation. The victim was an expert orchardist and had lived in Woodland for several years.

Twice Married on Same Day.

Seymour, Ind.—Married twice in the same day was the experience of Miss Barbara Meyer of this city, and Virgil E. Miller of Louisville. The bridegroom was so excited that he forgot the ring at the ceremony. After the services were over Miller remembered the ring in his pocket, and as the couple insisted on a ring ceremony the minister married them all over again.

HOW TO SEND FLOWERS THROUGH THE MAIL WITHOUT WILTING THEM.

If the flowers are to be sent to town in the morning cut them during the very late afternoon of the day before and keep them all night in a large pail or pitcher of cold water. Then pack them in the morning in a box with layers of wax paper, and they will travel for hours and remain perfectly fresh. A flower is like a camel—give it a long, deep drink of water and it can go without water for a long time.

Dahlias require a peculiar treatment. When first cut plunge their stems into a vessel of hot water and allow them to remain until the water has cooled off; then put the flowers in cold water for the night, and so treated the dahlias will remain stiff and travel safely.

How to Cure Hives That Annoy Your Peace of Body.

Hives are not dangerous if you avoid taking cold. Either soda, starch or vinegar baths are curative, soothing and grateful. The soda is prepared by adding a tablespoonful of bicarbonate of soda to the bath. The starch bath, which is also effective for hives and chafing, is made by simply adding one-half cupful of powdered laundry starch to the bath. These baths may be given daily. The vinegar bath is made by putting a tablespoonful of pure vinegar into one-half pint of warm water. Sponge off parts of the body distressed and allow to dry in without using a towel.

How to Deodorize Saucepans After Cooking Strong Vegetables.

After cooking onions, cabbage or fish try this plan: Wash and dry the pan, then place a piece of thick brown paper on the stove, set fire to it and turn the saucepan over the blaze. After a few minutes remove it and the odor will not be noticed.

SPRING FASHIONS.

A Description of the New Russian Blouse So Popular.

Among the new blouses is a most alluring model called the "tunic." Of course it is Russian in type, and its important feature is an extension below the waist line, which gives the long, Russian tunic effect. This extension is either gathered or circular and falls from a trim belt to midway between hip and knee. Worn over a separate skirt of harmonizing material, the new Russian blouse gives the effect of a complete costume. The idea is a practical one, for any woman can furnish the simple, well cut skirt and purchase one of these smart blouses to complete a really stunning new frock.

In some of the smartest new waist models color is combined with white, either in the fabric itself or by the use of different materials, such as sheer silk crape and taffeta or crape and wash satin. Very striking models in these color combinations are the waists with a two inch stripe, alternating with a stripe of sheer silk crape in a similar width.

Porch Cushions.

Porch cushions are the gayest of the gay. And they are striped, in conformity with the general trend toward striped effects in decorations and home accessories of every sort. All the colors of the rainbow are seen in these cushions for the swinging seat, the settee, the rocker and general utility, but the combinations of tints have been made so skillfully that the result, while undeniably vivid, is by no means unpleasing or crude. In the khaki hued couch hammock or in one of awning stripes in black or white a group of these bright toned cushions presents a desirable contrast.

Wheat Russia Consumes.

Computing the population of European and Asiatic Russia at 180,000,000 and allowing five bushels per head for food and seed, the consumption of wheat in that region would amount to 900,000,000 bushels a year.

MOTHER IS 89, DAUGHTER 70.

Five Generations Honor Woman Who Crossed Land In Oxcart.

Ione, Colo. — Eighty-nine candles, which covered a delicious birthday cake and marked the age of the oldest pioneer resident in Ione, were blown out by Mrs. I. B. Gregory as she was surrounded by her family of some thirty-four members, five generations being represented.

Mrs. Gregory was born near Springfield, Ill., March 8, 1827. Together with her husband and one child she endured the hardships of crossing the plains in 1853 in a covered wagon drawn by an ox team. The young wife walked a great part of the distance carrying the child. The family came almost direct to Ione, and in 1854 erected a house, which has been their home since and in which the reunion was held.

Mr. Gregory died thirty-two years ago, leaving the widow and nine children, all of whom are still living, the oldest being a daughter, seventy years old, and the youngest forty-eight years of age.

MUSIC SOOTHES HORSES.

Undertaker Places a Piano In the Stable of His Establishment.

Milwaukee.—Ray Biggs has placed a piano in the stable back of his undertaking establishment at Waukesha for the sole accommodation of his horses.

Mr. Biggs said when he read a few months ago about a phonograph being used in a chicken coop to make chickens lay, he discredited the report, but now he has been convinced that music has a soothing effect on animals.

One of the men employed at the stables plays the piano proficiently, and he verified Mr. Briggs' statement that when the horses came in from a funeral procession, with their nerves at high tension, they immediately became calm and complacent when they hear the soothing strains of a popular waltz.

Mr. Biggs says he is thinking of placing a musical instrument in the stable on his farm northwest of the city, with the belief that it may have some effect on his cows when the milking hour approaches.

GIRL OF ELEVEN SHOOTS FOX.

Maine Maid Is Expert With a 22 Caliber Rifle.

Prentiss, Me.—Birdie Sibley, eleven years old, can do almost anything that any other little girl of that age can do and lots they can't or don't.

She is at the head of her classes in school, can cook a meal, sew and knit, make a garden, drive a horserake, ride horseback and if the family were short of fresh meat could go out and get material enough for a rabbit stew almost any time with her little 22 rifle.

Birdie was out with her rifle recently and saw a fox running along the edge of the woods some distance off. She took careful aim just ahead of him and fired the shot, striking the fox in his foreleg, and he rolled over and over. Quickly running toward him and packing in another cartridge, Birdie made a quick shot, hitting the fox square in the head just as he was gathering himself to make off on three legs. She hopes to get another for next year and have a fine set of furs made.

How to Regild a Picture Frame That Has Become Shabby.

Buy 10 cents' worth of dry bronze powder and 10 cents' worth of banana oil. Mix to the consistency of thick cream. Apply to the frame with a brush. Mix this only as you need it. The ingredients may be had at the paint store. Try it on a piece of wood first. Do not apply to the frame until you have obtained the proper color.

GUESTS ENJOYED MOCK WEDDING

High School Students Gave a Merry Affair at the High School Last Night — Miss Sylvester, the Bride.

The mock wedding in the Assembly hall at the high school last night was atended by a large number of guests. A merry time was enjoyed by all and in spite of the solemnity of the occasion not a tear was shed—unless caused by laughter.

The blushing bride, Miss Clara Sylvester, and the handsome groom, Herman Robillard, made a striking appearance. The bride's stature as compared with that of the groom showed it would be an easy matter for "wifey" to keep "hubby" in subjection by ably administered spankings.

The ceremony was performed by "Rev." Joseph Johnson, who wore his solemn manner in such a way as to bespeak an utter absence of the sence of his responsibility.

After a photograph of the party had been taken, thep roceedings were declared finished, but some of the guests believed that the bride should not have been deserted so quickly by the groom, who with the rest of his "gang" hied for the "movies."

The remainder of the characters in the cast were well played by Wilbur Parsons as ring beaver, Lillian Waldhorn, as flower girl, Fred Johnston as best man, Caroline Pearl as maid of honor, Wendell Carrier as father of the bride, Mary Weston as the mother, and Leonora Eames, Mae Roach, Mildred Brown and Lena Kaplan as the bridesmaids.

NEARBY FARM SALES ARE MANY

That farm properties are attractive to the outside buyer is shown by sales made recently by Whitaker & Bogardus, Inc.

John Peckham of Wisconsin has purchased of Frick and Loomis 82 acres near Gilbert Mills This is an extra productive farm with good buildings and carries upwards of 30 head of stock.

To Fred H. Wing of Portland, Maine, they have sold the Lewis Sharp farm of 52 acres on the East River Road. Mr. Wing takes possession at once and Lewis Sharp will take up his residence in this city with his son, W. J. Sharp.

William M. Forbes of Charlotte, N. Y., owner of the 55 acre farm at Volney Center, for many years owned by Mott Whitney, has sold same together with quite an amount of personal property to C. B. Lyle of Wisconsin. Mr. Lyle will take possession May 1st.

D. H. Fry of Minetto has acquired of George C. Denniston 61 acres near Palermo. This farm has a large bearing apple orchard and about 20 acres of mck land, which Mr. Fry will start at once to develop.

Mrs. Mary J. Jones of this city has brought of Lee D. Pierce a comfortable home and small parcel of land at Granby Center and is now occupying it.

PAPER DAY AND FOOD SALE FOR THE HOSPITAL

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Lee Memorial Hospital will hold a food sale next Saturday at the store of the Palmer-Hope Hardware Company.

The entertainment committee will solicit contributions from the members and any contributions from others will also be thankfully received.

Wednesday, May 10, Paper Day will be observed for the benefit of the hospital fund also, and papers should be neatly tied and placed on the curb to await collections.

K. OF C. DANCE WILL BENEFIT NEW HOME

While the members of St. Joseph's Council, K. of C., are dancing to the music of the last event of its kind to to be held in the old home in Oneida Street, next Wednesday evening, they will have the consciousness and pleasure of doing something in aid of the fine new home in East 1st street, formerly the Hunter house. The committeemen are doing all in their power to make the dance a success, which gives them every reason to anticipate a large attendance.

Twenty candidates received the second degree at last night's meeting, a luncheon following the business session, and after that one of the smokers which do so much for the life of the Council occurred.

"It pays to advertise," is the firm belief of Manager J. J. Jordan of the Electric Company. The statement was verified at last night's meeting when the genial gentleman in a neat speech presented to the officers of the Council an emblem of the order, on the face of which nestled a diminutive electric light bulb, indicating to the recipients that they were in possession of a means to light their way to greater doings. The officers who received the pretty tokens were:

J. William Branche, Grand Knight; James K. Carroll, Deputy Grand Knight: Vincent Martin, Financial Secretary; Thomas McCollum, Recording Secretary; M. M. Conley, Past Grand Knight; D. M. Sullivan, Past Grand Knight.

GRANGE WOULD HAVE SHORTER RURAL ROUTES

Early in February the legislative committee of the national grange had a conference with Postmaster General Burleson concerning certain improvements in the rural mail delivery service. The committee claimed that the long mail route served by autos is not so satisfactory to country people as two routes half as long at half the cost. Mr. Burleson said that the law compelled them to pay $2,400 for two carriers or to try to serve the same people with one auto service at a cost of $1,800. The law is too inflexible. If the postmaster general were allowed to make standards for different conditions of routes, quantity of mail handled, etc., and pay for the service according to the different standards the government could save $10,000,000 a year. Mr. Burleson assured the committee that the department did not consider economy in the service the primary consideration, and that if routes had been established that did not give constant and reliable service that they would be changed. When the committee suggested that some city deliveries now numbering as high as eight per day could well be reduced in number the postmaster general acknowledged that in some cities that condition had been developed in order to give employment to more carriers. While he considered it unjust there seemed to be no way under the law to remedy the matter.

RANDALL, HARP, WINS FAVORS

Mr. Herman Randall, of this city, who is a student in the conservatory of Music, Oberlin, Ohio, had a prominent part in the musical program at the Easter service in the First Congregational church of that city. The program was as follows:

Prelude by Whelpley; Prof. Breckenridge, organ; Mr. Hale, violin; Miss Heacox, cello; Mr. Randall, harp;

At Prayer by Faure, Miss Heacox, cello; Mr. Randall, harp.

Meditation on Prelude I, by Bach-Gounod; Mr. Hale, Violin; Mr. Breckenridge, organ; Mr. Randall, harp.

Mr. Randall also accompanied the soprano and baritone soloists and chorus of over two hundred voices in the cantata, "The Holy Land."

NEW FOOD PRODUCT APPEARS IN CITY STORES

Last week saw the introduction to the people of Fulton of a new food product already popular in other parts of the country the "Family" Soda Cracker, made by the Ontario Biscuit Co. of Buffalo. The TIMES and other leading publications of Western New York have received a long-running contract for advertising.

For months past, experts of the Ontario Biscuit Company have been experimenting and perfecting this "Family" Soda Cracker. Their high goal was nothing less than a soda cracker which (in their words) would be "the greatest in nourishment, and, at the same time, the tastiest and crispest of anything yet produced."

To insure a permanence of these qualities, considerable thought was given to the container. As a result, the "Family" Soda Cracker is put up in pails which are designed to prove most useful after the crackers are eaten, and, in the meantime, to keep the crackers ever ready for use and always crisp.

At 25c a pail, it is claimed that these crackers are not only the best, but are also the most economical for family use, because there can be absolutely no waste.

During the past few weeks, salesmen have been covering Fulton and vicinity, arranging with all good grocers to have on hand enough pails of "Family" crackers to meet the demand which will result from the advertising in the TIMES. adv

HOW CARRANZA CAN GET RID OF OUR TROOPS

If Carranza is really anxious to have the American punitive expedition withdrawn from Mexico, he can accomplish that object by capturing Villa and eliminating the danger of fresh attacks on our border by the bandits of Northern Mexico. This might be done, if the Carranzista forces keep up the pursuit of Villa, by the time General Obregon meets Generals Scott and Funston at Juarez. The acceptance by the de facto Mexican government of the invitation to the conference is encouraging, but it was simultaneous with a renewal of the resuest for a reply to Carranza's note of April 12, declaring that the time had come for the withdrawal of our troops. Carranza must understand that we cannot withdraw our troops while Villa remains at large, a menace to him as well as to us. — N. Y. Times.

becoming gospel hardened as it were. We are forgetting that God is as powerful today as He was when He created the world, and all the living things in the world, and that He has plainly told us that He will hold every man responsible for his actions in this world.

Soul Winning a Mark of Life

Soul winning is one of the marks of a live church. And the church that has the Spirit of God in it will win souls. It will be the aim of every member in that church to tell some lost soul about Christ. The influence exerted by such a body of people will be for the upbuilding of Christ's Kingdom. If the people of the world will not come to the church, we must taken the church to them. This we can do without lowering the standards of the church. I do not believe in bringing the church down on an equality with the world, but I do believe in bringing the people of the world up to the standards of the church. There are multitudes of souls in this world who have never heard of Christ. They have been reared in godless homes. They have never been taught anything about Christ. How are they to know the blessings God has provided for His people unless the people in the church are willing to go out and tell them? This is what I mean by taking the church to those in the world. This is the example Christ has left for us to follow. He went from place to place calling on men to repent, and be saved. And it is our duty as a band of His professed followers to go to all parts of the world and preach the unsechable riches of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Unless we are willing to do this, we are not obeying His commands. Dr. Shaw, in an address delivered at Northfield told how he had shocked a great many people before leaving New York on his vacation. He said: I stood upon the steps of our church and preached on a Sabbath evening prior to our evening service to the multitude that surged by. I was astonished to see how many people would stop. People who were on their way to the elevated just around the corner. People who were going to make social calls of a Sabbath evening stopped, and when I said, Now I am going to pray, and I ask you men to remove your hats there was not a man in that crowd who did not reverently remove his hat. He said that he was able to reach hundreds of people every Sabbath night that he could not get into his church. This is the proper spirit for a minister of God to have. Be willing to throw aside prejudice and go into the work, soul and body.

We must have the soul before we can plant the seed, and if we once get the seed in the soil it will sprout and grow, and God will honor the seed in the soul. We do not expect to reap a harvest if we have not sown the seed in our fields and why should we look forward to a harvest in Christ's sown the seed? Dr. Shaw also told of an experience he had a few years ago. He was called to the bedside of a dying pilot. This old man was rapidly passing away with pneumonia. This man had been pilot for the Hudson River Line for 25 years, and when he entered the old man's apartments, the heavy breathing told him that death was not more than five or ten minutes away. This made him feel serious. He had only a few moments to do his work. He told that dying man about Jesus Christ and His power to save, and His wonderful grace. The old man was very respectful, surprisingly so, but the minister soon discovered that he had not touched the keynote. Then the Holy Spirit whispered to him, Present Jesus to him as the pilot's Pilot. He stepped closer to the bed and took hold of the great muscular clammy hand beginning to get cold in death, and said Now my dear man, how many times when you have been piloting that steamer of yours, the only thing that has kept her off the rocks has been your clear eye and your steady nerve. Now you are in the straight of death, and the current is running against you, and the fog is on and you need a Pilot. Won't you take Him on board? The old man gathered up his dying strength and answered, I will, that you could hear all through the little apartment and the old man died, and just as he was dying, the doctor took up the old familiar hymn and the family joined in,

Jesus, Savior, Pilot me, over life's tempestuous sea.
Unknown waves around me roll,
Hiding rock and treacherous shoal,
Chart and compass come from Thee,
Jesus Savior Pilot me.

After this man's body had been laid in its last resting place Dr. Shaw went back to that home to inquire about the man's past life. He could not understand such a conversion as that so instantaneous and without a previous planting of the seed. The daugter said: "Our father was one of the wickedest men I ever knew. He was a man of great profanity. We would lose his tempeer daily and he would swear so that we children would want to leave the room and get away from the sound of it. But, she said, last winter when his vessel happened to be over Sabbath in New York, docked down town, he came up home about church time, and was passing your church when he heard the singing, and something led him in and he went up stairs and took a seat in the last pew in the gallery. He came home after the service and for the first time in our lives we saw father take the Bible down and begin to read it, and when we went to bed father was still reading the Bible, and after that every time his boat was in New York on Sabbath he went to your church, and after service he would come home and take down the Bible and read it after we had gone to bed. That was the sowing of the seed. In all probability that man would have died outside of the Kingdom of Christ if the seed had not been previously sown.

Personal Touch Needed

We are preaching in the pulpit, teaching in the Sabbath School placing layer upon layer in the minds of the people, yet we are not winning souls. Why? Because we are placing too much stress upon the intellectual side and not enough on the spiritual side. What we need today is something that will touch the hearts of men. Something that will bring men into closer touch with God and that will impress them spiritually instead of intellectually. In order to win a man's soul you must first win his heart. If we do not touch the heart we can never win the soul into the Kingdom of Christ. This calls for personal work. In this line we are careless and we are so set on the things of the world that we never think of speaking to any one about his or her soul. We seem to be afraid of our fellow man or we do not have enough of the Spirit of God in our hearts. A young man was once traveling from Allegheny City to Rochester, N. Y. He was comfortably seated when a man came in and asked to share his seat. The request was granted and in a few moments the older man asked the younger man his profession. He answered that he was a misister of the Gospel. The older man grasped the young man's hand and said that he was rejoiced to find such a companion. He had traveled extensively and had almost always shared the seat with some profane or drunken man. His soul seemed to rejoice as they two talked together.

This is the question every one should ask his or her companions in life "What is your profession?" Have you accepted the Lord Jesus Christ as your Savior? This is something all of us can do. We need not try to imagine that this is the duty of someone else, it is our duty, and we should count it a privilege to be permitted to speak for Christ. In speaking personally with men and women we have a better opportunity of bringing them into the Kingdom of Christ, than to be preaching or praying, or teaching in the Sabbath School. Often times people are just waiting for the invitation and are surprised that we did not come to them sooner. Personal work is the call today. Personal work on the part of the officers on the part of the teachers, on the part of the rank and file of the church, and until we have taken hold of the work and honsecrated ourselves to God, working as one individual, we cannot expect to win souls into the Kingdom of Christ Jesus. Christ is the mightiest power in the world today, if we would only permit the spirit of God to guide us in His work. No other religion presents such grand blessings to its followers as the religion of Jesus Christ. A missionary in China once overheard a group of Chinese discussing the various religions with which China is afflicted: At last one of the group said; It is just as if a Chinaman were down in a deep pit and wanted help to get out. Confucious came along and said, if you had only kept my precepts you would not have fallen into this pit; Buddha also came to the mouth of the pit and said, Ah poor Chinaman, if you were only up where I am I would make you all right. The Chinaman replied, if I were where you are I would not want your help. But then, there came along Jesus Christ, with tears in His eyes, and he jumped right into the pit and helped the poor men out. This is the love which wins souls into His Kingdom. And this is what we, as professed followers should be willing to do. Go down into the pit, and bring men and women out of the pits of hell and teach them about Jesus Christ. Urge them to give up the ways of sin and wickedness and give themselves to the Lord Jesus. We have opportunities to speak for Christ almost everyday of our lives. We are constantly coming in contact with those who are living without God and are without hope in this world. Let us muster up courage enough to ask them to come into the Kingdom of Christ. Be courageous in the service of Jesus and God forbid that we should glory in anything save the cross of Jesus Christ Consecrate your lives to the services of God. Be willing to do personal work and God will reward you for the work you have done in His Kingdom and you can rest assured that if you go out in the right spirit, God's blessing will follow your effort.

LIGHT CO. FILES SIXTY PROPERTY TRANSFERS

One thing that helped to swell the business of the County Clerk's office yesterday included the filing of sixty applications for right of way by the Fulton Light, Heat & Power company in the town of Volney, Schroeppel and Granby. In addition to those items the clerks handled twenty-four deeds and certified copies of wills transferring titles to real estate.

Other deeds filed were as follows:

Josephine C. Wells to Jennie Russell and Sarah A. Worden, property in the Fourth Ward, Oswego, $1500. Mrs. Worden has a life use to the property.

Alva C. McChesney to Earl S. Health, property in Orwell, $800.

Mary Flannigan to Lucian D. Wellington, property on Hillside Park, Oswego, indicated consideration $1,500.

Adeline Webster to Carmiella Massaro, property on the "Dutton Road" town of Granby, $1,800.

Frank LeSage to Thomas Prittie, property in Scriba, indicated consideration $1,000.

FOR SPRING WEDDINGS.

One Attractive Way to Give the Bride a Shower.

With spring already upon us, the thought of spring weddings is now in the air. This is the ripe season for linen showers and other showers of household necessaries given to the bride by all her friends. The girl who is to be married in April will be the recipient of many an entertainment before she is safely wedded, but she will enjoy nothing more than a shower if her friends have any novel ideas on the subject.

The chief point in a shower must always be its surprise; otherwise it would not be a shower. If you are thinking of giving such an affair for some friend who is soon to be married be sure that every detail is kept a secret from her. That is half the fun.

A novel idea for a linen shower can be executed in the following way: Invite the bride to be to spend an evening at your home with a few old friends. See that she arrives the first and is comfortably seated and chatting when the other guests begin to arrive. Of course the latter are in the secret or else there would be no shower.

Each guest must come in carrying an umbrella. The bride may not notice the first one, but she will certainly remark before long that every one who enters carries an umbrella. She will probably ask before the last one arrives if it is raining, in which case the guest questioned should answer, "No, but it looks like a shower."

When all the guests have arrived each one must gain possession of her own umbrella in case it has been laid aside on her entrance. At a given signal, which should be some such remark from the hostess as "Did you say it looked like a shower?" the guests should all open their umbrellas with the answer, "It certainly does."

From the steel ribs of each umbrella should be suspended by a string the parcel holding the piece of linen which the guest intends to give the bride. Any big bundles, like a tablecloth, will make the umbrella a bit bulky when closed, but in such case the guest will have to smuggle her umbrella in unnoticed. But most linen pieces can be done up in such small parcels that they can easily be concealed in a closed umbrella.

At the signal to open the parcels will all hang down by their strings. The guests must then hold their umbrellas over the bride-to-be's head. The hostess provides her with scissors to cut down her various bundles, and the point of the shower is made apparent.

AN UNUSUAL MODEL.

A Black Satin Hat to Go With Your Spring Suit.

This smart hat with a close fitting brim has a flat crown topped with a blackbird. The lines are good, and the tam effect is becoming to many types of women. The veil is a hexagonal mesh with a floral scroll pattern.

A LA MODE.

A Hygiene Note.

When a child begins with a cold isolate it from the other children in the house and do not let it attend school until it is better. Not only is a cold contagious in itself, but in children a cold is often the beginning of a contagious disease, and it is not fair to other children to let them come in contact with a cold until it is proved to be nothing serious.

There is no better gargle or nose douche for a beginning inflammation than salt and water. Of course the solution must be weaker for the nose. Nose douches should be taken only on a doctor's advice, as the membrane of the nose is very delicate and the treatment must necessarily vary with the child. Never let the child go out of doors after spraying nose and throat.

Roxbury Cakes.

One-fourth cupful of butter, one-half cupful sour milk, one teaspoonful cinnamon, two eggs, one-half cupful of raisins, one-half cupful brown sugar, one-half cupful corn sirup, one and one-half cupfuls flour, one teaspoonful of soda, one-half cupful English walnuts.

Cream butter, add sugar and beaten egg yolks. Mix and sift dry ingredients and add to first mixture alternately with the corn sirup and the sour milk. Add egg whites beaten dry, chopped raisins and nuts. Bake in small pans. This will make eighteen to twenty little cakes.

A Minor Detail.

"Why didn't you publish the account of my daughter's wedding?" she asked the society editor.

"It wasn't complete," was the reply.

"Not complete? Didn't I send you the names of the out of town guests, a description of the decorations and the bride's dress?"

"Yes."

"And the name of the minister who performed the ceremony? I took great pains to get the bridesmaid's gowns."

"I know you did. All that was in the article, but you forgot one important thing."

"What did I forget, I'd like to know?"

"You forgot to tell the name of the bridegroom."—Detroit Free Press.

Some Shakespeare Statistics.

There are 106,007 lines in Shakespeare and 814,780 words.

The longest play is "Hamlet." It has 3,930 lines.

The shortest is the "Comedy of Errors," with 1,777 lines.

The number of characters is 1,277, of which 157 are females.

The longest part of any character is that of Hamlet, who has 11,610 words to deliver.

The part with the longest word in it is that of Costard in "Love's Labor Lost," who tells Moth that he is "not so long by the head as honorificabilitudinitatibus."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Mediterranean Blue.

The extraordinary blueness of the Mediterranean has two causes. One is that very few large rivers of fresh water run into this sea; the second that the Mediterranean is practically landlocked and, being exposed to a powerful sun, evaporation is great. By actual test the waters of the Mediterranean are heavier and more salt than those of the Atlantic.

EARNESTNESS.

If you believe a thing, then believe it whole heartedly. If you deny it, then deny it absolutely. Half believing and half disbelieving is not the way to get on in the world.—Fukusawa.

He Made Good.

Lord Lansdowne once had a remarkable prophecy made concerning him while he was an Oxford graduate. Jowett, his tutor at Balliol, greatly admired him and always said that he would do great things.

"There goes a man," remarked Jowett, "who is as certain to be foreign secretary in due time in whichever party he chooses as tomorrow's sun is to rise."

Of course at that time Lord Lansdowne had not the least idea of filling such a distinguished post, and yet in 1900, after a brilliant political career, he found himself at the head of the foreign office.—London M. A. P.

Vigorous.

Victim—If your hair restorer is good, why is it that you are bald yourself?

Barber—Well, sir, once I had a very big order for ladies' plaits, and to execute it I used some extra doses of my restorer over my hair and got half a dozen long plaits, sir. But it drew all the hair out of my constitution, sir.—London Mail.

Fishing That Is Not Sport.

One way of catching herring is by driving nails into a board so that they stick out several inches. The boards are then dragged through the shoals, and the fish catch between the nails and are pulled by the boardful into the boats. In one year more than a million pounds of herring were caught at Prince Rupert and frozen by the cold storage plants to be sold for bait. Something like 125,000 pounds of codfish are annually taken for the same purpose.—Christian Herald.

Delicate Instruments.

Though the man in the street might easily mistake a slight seismic disturbance for the rumbling of a traction engine or an explosion, the marvelously delicate instruments which record earthquake shocks are immune from such deceptions. Sunk in the earth on solid foundations, the recording pen of the seismometer ignores any local tremblings which have not a seismic origin, but the faintest real earth quakings, though they have traveled thousands of miles through the earth, set the pen tracing the telltale graph by means of which the seismologist calculates the place, time and magnitude of the happening.—London Chronicle.

Competition.

"When I was first married my wife used to talk, talk, all the time."

"Has she given it up?"

"She had to. We've got two grown-up daughters now, you know."—New York World.

GOOD LAND.

A hot spring remains hot all the year round without attention, but a bath is kept hot only by constant care, and when the fire is not fed it soon becomes cold again. Good land, mark you well, is like a hot spring, and poor land is like a bath.—Ninomiya Sontoku.

Two International Spies

By ETHEL HOLMES

Before the pan-European war we Americans supposed that our affairs did not interest other powers. Since then we have awakened to the fact that every government has a spy system within the territory of every other government. England, France, Italy and other powers keep secret service workers in other countries. Of all the Germans have the most perfect and extended organization. And yet some of the principal fields of the working of the German propaganda in America have originated with the British secret service men. While these systems may have been strengthened and enlarged since the opening of the war, there is reason to believe that they have always existed.

Austria and Russia have always been watching each other on account of the persistent encroachment of the two on the Balkans. Some years ago two Russian girls, sisters, went to Vienna as spies for the czar upon the intentions of the emperor of Austria regarding schemes to carve Austrian provinces out of Balkan territory. One of these girls, Maria, obtained a position as copyist in the Austrian foreign office. The other, Vera, kept house for the two in rooms in an apartment building. Since they were in the pay of the Russian government they did not want for anything.

Maria was under the orders of Caspar Grenthall, a man who conducted one of the bureaus of the department in which she worked. He was a handsome and otherwise attractive man, and when he made love to her she reciprocated. When they were not engaged in the office he took her out to the gardens and other places of amusement and by his kindness gradually won her heart.

It was not long before Grenthall proposed marriage to Maria. Though she loved him, she hesitated to accept him. Indeed, his being a spy complicated the affair, making her very unhappy.

Then suddenly Maria received a shock. One day when she was at work a girl occupying a desk beside her slipped a bit of paper among those before her. Maria unfolded it and read that she was suspected of purloining a certain document that had passed through her hands. Grenthall had won her in order to find out if she were stealing such documents. Her room would be searched that evening.

Maria was not only disturbed at discovering that Grenthall had deceived her, but in terror at the suspicion that existed against her. Either her life or a long imprisonment would pay the penalty. As soon as office hours were over she went to her room and told her sister what had occurred. She had stolen the paper in question, and it was concealed in their apartment. Taking it from its hiding place, she was thinking what to do with it when there was a sound of persons coming up the stairs without. She had only time to thrust the paper into her bosom when the door was thrown open and in walked Grenthall, accompanied by several men. He made no apology for his entrance or for having played the spy upon Maria. He and his men began a search of the rooms.

Evidently he had expected to surprise Maria and, if the missing paper was in her possession, to find it concealed in her apartments. Not finding it after a thorough search, it occurred to him that it might be on her person. He sent one of the men with him for a woman to make the search. When she arrived he told her to find out whether Maria had the paper.

Maria, when the man who had won her heart to betray her entered, gave him a look of anger, then, when the searching began, fell upon her sister's neck, sobbing piteously. While the two women were clasped in each other's arms, their bosoms close up against each other, Vera contrived to take the paper from her sister's bosom and slip it into her own.

Maria was the one suspected, but it was not to be expected that Vera would be let off without examination. Believing that she would be searched, she cast about for some means of getting rid of the paper. She started to leave the apartment, but Grenthall ordered her back. When the woman came she made the search in one of the bedrooms, the men remaining elsewhere. Vera was with her sister. Maria was required to take off her clothes, which were carefully examined by the searcher and laid upon a table. While her back was turned Vera contrived to slip the paper into a pocket of one of the garments that had been examined. Her sister saw her do this, and hope sprang up within her.

When the search was finished and nothing found the result was reported to Grenthall. Having done all he could in the matter, he withdrew his assistants and went away while Maria was dressing.

The paper was a valuable one for the Russian government, and the sisters were anxious to save it. That night Vera, dressed as a boy, stepped out of the apartment and gained a lower suit without being noticed. The next morning, though a watch had been established, she got to the street and away without being recognized. Maria went to the foreign office, but was discharged. Had it been known instead of suspected that she was guilty she would have been arrested.

Vera succeeded in reaching Russia with the paper and was paid a large price for it. Her sister finally rejoined her there.

To Be Included In The Spring Wardrobe.

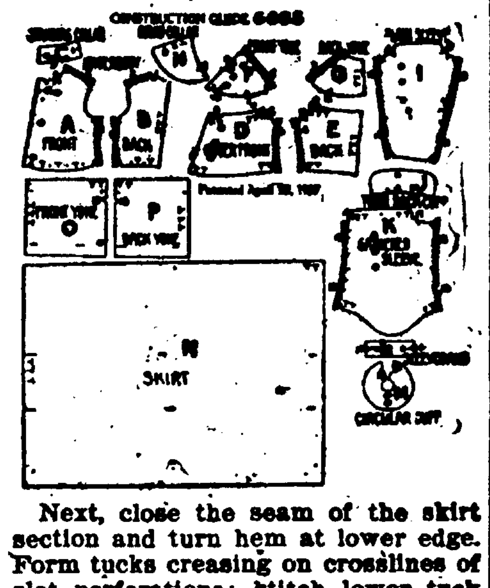
6685

Chic without sacrifice of economy is this frock of cotton voile, trimmed with organdy collar and cuffs and a silk belt.

The dress shown here is made with a deep yoke and open front, allowing for the introduction of a dainty vest, surmounted by a turnover collar. In medium size the dress requires 1 yard of linen for the waist and 6 yards 36-inch voile. One-half yard organdy will make the collar and cuffs.

Make the underbody first, then take up the outer waist. Close the under-arm seam and gather upper and lower edges of front and back between double "TT" perforations and 2 inches above lower edge. Close shoulder seam of yoke as notched, sew to upper edges of front and back as notched. Sew round collar to yoke, notches and center-backs even.

The elbow sleeve is quickly made. First plait, placing "T" on corresponding small "o" perforations. Close seam as notched. Sew cuff to sleeve, single large "O" perforations even, small "o" perforation in cuff at seam of sleeve.



Next, close the seam of the skirt section and turn hem at lower edge. Form tucks creasing on crosslines of slot perforations; stitch lower tuck 2¼ inches and upper tuck 2 inches from folded edges. Gather upper edge between double "TT" perforations. Join the yoke sections as notched, leaving left side seam free above large "O" perforation in front yoke for a placket. Turn under lower edge on slot perforations. Lap on skirt section, center-fronts, center-backs and edges underneath even, small "o" perforation in skirt section at seam in yoke; and stitch 1½ inch from folded edge in tuck effect. Gather upper edge of yoke between double "TT" perforations. Adjust to position.

Finish the waist with a soft girdle of silk or satin.

SHE SANG AWAY PAIN.

Little Girl Chanted Popular Tunes While Burns Were Dressed.

Kansas City.—"It's a long way to Tipperary; it's a long way to go."

The voice of Laura Johnson, seven years of age, floated from the operating room at the Emergency hospital and echoed through the building.

Nurses and doctors left their work, attracted by the unusual singing. One pushed open the door. On a white table lay the child. A nurse was bending over her. From the child's knees to her feet were burns.

During the painful proceedings the singing did not stop for more than a minute. Only once did the girl stop, when the pain caused her to bite her lip to keep back the tears. Then she began to sing "The Rosary."

The child was burned when she pulled a kettle of boiling soup off the stove. The child's mother, Mrs. Albert Johnson, carried her daughter to the hospital for treatment.

$200 FOR BUSHEL OF CORN.

It Took a Prize and Was Purchased by a Farmer's Paper.

Des Moines, Ia.—The Iowa Farmer of Des Moines paid $200 for a bushel of seed corn. It was purchased of Wayne W. Polk of Sidney, Fremont county, and is prize corn.

Polk won the highest award at the Panama exposition at San Francisco and also won first on ten ear sample, first on thirty ear sample and the prize for the champion bushel at the last state corn show held at Ames. The farm paper expects to use the corn in a subscription campaign.

PROOF OF DOG'S DEATH ASKED

Human Heirs Will Be Given Estate if They Produce It.

Lacrosse, Wis.—The absence of a corpus delicti has once again tangled up the proceedings in Wisconsin's oddest will case, the bequest of the estate of Mrs. Mary Johnson to her pet dog Willie. She cut off two brothers, a sister and a niece to give the property to the dog, but the dog died before the will was probated.

Relatives claimed the estate, but there was no record of the dog's death filed in the health department. The court has ruled that when the contestants can produce the man who buried Willie they will be given the estate.

Millinery Details.

More odd trimmings appear on the spring hats than one can keep track of. It should not be a hard matter to have a very individual hat this season. A buttonholed taffeta rose, flowers which are transparent, having the appearance of being candied; caterpillars clinging to foliage, pearl pins, plenty of lace, the single wide velvet streamer, braided ribbon and applique may each be made use of to great advantage. There is a trend toward high directoire hats with more or less of a scoop.

Duration of a Wink.

The time occupied by the several phases of the movement has been measured, and it is found that the mean duration of the descent of the lid is from seventy-five to ninety one-thousandths of a second.

The interval while the eye is shut was in one case only fifteen-hundredths of a second. The rising of the lid occupies seventeen-hundredths of a second. A specially arranged photographic apparatus was used. The popular phrase that something is done "quicker than a wink" is therefore expressive to a degree that may be stated in fractions of a second.—Washington Star.

First Test of the Air Pump.

The first public test of the air pump was in 1654, by its inventor, Otto von Guericke, in the presence of Emperor Ferdinand of Germany.

Guericke applied the carefully ground edges of metallic hemispheres, two feet in diameter, to each other. After exhausting the air by his apparatus he attached fifteen horses to each hemisphere. In vain did they attempt to separate them because of the enormous pressure of the atmosphere. The experiment was a great success.

A FOX AND A GOOSE.

One day a fine, large fat goose, with beautiful white and gray feathers, fell asleep by the side of a little lake.

By and by along comes a crafty and very hungry red fox.

The sleepy goose never heard him, he came so stealthily, and only awakened to her danger when he caught her suddenly by the wing.

What a cackling and hissing the goose made, and how amused was the fox to see her frantic efforts to free herself!

"No use, Mme. Goose," he mocked. "I have you fast."

"How can you be so cruel?" cried the goose. "Never have I wronged you. Please let me go!"

The fox laughed in great glee.

"Why should I let you go? Do I not need a dinner? And, pray, what would you do if you were hungry and had your dinner in your grasp, as I have mine?"

"That is easy to answer," replied the goose. "I must be truthful and say I would fold my hands, shut my eyes, say a grace and eat you."

"You are really rather sensible after all," said Master Fox. "That is exactly what I mean to do." And he folded his paws and closed his eyes.

Before, however, he could say a word away flew the goose.

"Never will I say grace again before my dinner." And he never did.

Game of Steps.

Any number of persons can play the game named steps. One player is selected who gives the number of steps to be taken. The remaining players are to walk and stop at the number of steps given by the leader. The leader turns his back and begins to count. When he has reached the selected number he turns suddenly around and faces the players. Meanwhile the players have run forward, but when the leader reaches the selected number they stop. If the leader catches any one moving that player becomes the leader, and the game proceeds.

HOW TO USE THE BIBLE IN TIMES OF NEED.

When in sorrow, read John xiv.
When men fail you, read Psalm xxvii.
When you have sinned, read Psalm li.
When you worry, read Matthew vi, 19-34.
Before church service, read Psalm lxxxiv.
When you are in danger, read Psalm xci.
When you have the blues, read Psalm xxxiv.
When God seems far away, read Psalm cxxxix.
When you are discouraged, read Isaiah lx.
If you want to be fruitful, read John xv.
When doubts come upon you, try John vii, 17.
When you are lonely or fearful, read Psalm xxiii.
When you forget your blessings, read Psalm ciii.
For Jesus' idea of a Christian, read Matthew v.
For James' idea of religion, read James i, 19-27.
When your faith needs stirring, read Hebrews xi.
When you feel down and out, read Romans viii, 31-39.
When you want courage for your task, read Joshua i.
When the world seems bigger than God, read Psalm xc.
When you want rest and peace, read Matthew xi, 25-30.
When you want Christian assurance, read Romans viii, 1-30.
For Paul's secret of happiness, read Colossians iii, 12-17.
When you leave home for labor or travel, read Psalm cxxi.
When you grow bitter or critical, read I Corinthians xiii.
When your prayers grow narrow or selfish, read Psalm lxvii.
For Paul's idea of Christianity, read II Corinthians v, 15-19.
For Paul's rules on how to get along with men, read Romans xii.
When you think of investments and returns, read Mark x, 17-31.
For a great invitation and a great opportunity, read Isaiah lv.
For Jesus' idea of prayer, read Luke xi, 1-13, Matthew vi, 5-15.
For the prophet's picture of worship that counts, read Isaiah lviii, 1-12.
For the prophet's idea of religion, read Isaiah i, 10-18, Micah vi, 6-8.
Why not follow Psalm cxix, 11, and hide some of these in your memory?

YOUR GARDEN.

How to Grow Gloxinias From Seeds and Bulbs.

If gloxinias are grown from seeds the seeds should be sown in shallow boxes filled with sifted loam. Make the surface level and sprinkle the seed thickly over it, then press them into the soil with a smooth board. Do not cover with soil, but take sphagnum moss (you can get a small quantity from the florist or seedsman where you purchase the seed) and rub it through the sieve and have it just cover the seed. As soon as the seed leaf is fully developed transplant to similar boxes half an inch apart. As soon as they are large enough put them into small pots and transplant when necessary. If the gloxinias are grown from bulbs these may be purchased for 10 cents. They require a soil of one part loam, one part leaf mold and one part sharp sand, with a sprinkling of fine bonemeal. They seldom do well in common garden soil. Give them good drainage and keep the soil evenly moist, not too wet or too dry. Too much water makes them drop their buds. You must never wet the foliage of this plant, as it greatly injures it. This sounds like a lot of work, but it isn't, and the fact about the gloxinia is that it is very easy to grow. It thrives best with strong light but little or no sun.

Do not cover the bulb. Let the crown come above the soil. Keep soil moist, but never have it like mud, as it would sour the soil and rot the bulb; also do not pour water on the bulb.

How to Clean Feather Pillows Without Losing the Fluff.

Make a bag of cheesecloth larger than the ticks. Empty each pillow into the bag and tie tightly. Fill the wash boiler with cold water, into which you have put a handful of washing soda and half a bar of white laundry soap. Put in one bag of feathers at a time and boil for fifteen minutes, pounding occasionally with the clothes stick. Take from boiler and rinse until water is clear. Squeeze out as much of the water as possible and spread the bags in the sun to dry, turning often. The drying may take two or three days. Wash and iron the ticks in the usual way.

How to Make Wet Shoes Soft and Pliable.

Shoes are now so dear that they ought to have extra care nowadays. If mothers will invest in a second grade of castor oil and grease the shoes often and plentifully and when wet if the shoes are filled with oats and left to stand overnight their resistance will be increased fourfold. The castor oil keeps the shoes soft, and the oats absorb dampness and hold the shape.

HOW TO REMOVE OIL FROM YOUR CRANK CASE.

An easy way to remove oil from crank case where oil is pumped through a sight feed would be to disconnect the pump running back to motor. Keep motor running—oil pump will force oil through pipe, which can be run into a can. This is only possible where splash feed is the final lubrication method used. Do not drain in this manner if oil is fed through hollow crank shaft or to main bearings direct. After all oil has been drained, reconnect parts and fill reservoir in the usual manner with fresh oil.

GREAT COST OF THE WAR.

Europe Spending $25,000,000,000 a Year. Mexican Invasion Cheap.

It is costing Europe $25,000,000,000 a year to carry on the war, according to figures in the April letter of the National City bank of New York. Uncle Sam's expedition into Mexico is costing $50 a minute—one nine-hundred-and-fifty-secondth of the European cost.

The annual rate of expenditure of the big fighting powers is divided as follows:

Great Britain, $5,000,000,000.
Germany, $6,000,000,000.
Russia, $6,000,000,000.
France, $4,400,000,000.

The remainder is made up by Italy, Servia, Bulgaria and other warring nations.

Learning From Tumbles.

It does not matter how many tumbles you have in this life so long as you do not get dirty when you tumble. There is the greatest practical benefit in making a few failures in life. You learn that which is of inestimable importance—that there are a great many people in the world who are just as clever as you are, * * * and you very soon find out, if you have not found it out before, that patience and tenacity of purpose are worth more than twice their weight in cleverness.—Huxley.

Color Harmony.

The key to all color harmony is simply this—that kindred or related colors harmonize, go well together, while unrelated colors are antagonistic to each other. Those colors are kindred which are side by side on the spectrum band or the color circuit. Red is kindred to orange because orange is an admixture of red and yellow; orange is kindred to yellow because of the yellow in the orange; yellow is akin to green because green is an admixture of yellow and blue.

Tips For the Housekeeper.

When frying eggs place a cover over the frying pan. This cooks the egg evenly and without turning. Poached eggs should be done the same way.

Apple parings and cores should be stewed to a pulp and then strained. This will make a jelly which spread on apple tart will greatly improve it. It can also be used for flavoring tapioca pudding.

Orange peel and lemon peel may be used for flavoring sauces and stewed fruit. They can be dried and kept in a glass covered jar until used.

If potted cheese gets crumbly or dry in the pot mix into it a tablespoonful of boiling water and have the spoon hot before measuring the water. Mix thoroughly and the cheese will be freshened and improved.

Spring Coat Of Taffeta Or Serge.

The deep cuffs are trimmed with buttons of the coat material.

Whatever her cause, no woman of six years feels that her place is in the home. She may proclaim her emancipation by wearing this stunning coat of men's wear serge. Or, it may be developed in taffeta. The proper trimming is striped silk, used on the collar and cuffs. The coat may be worn loose or with a belt onto which large pockets button. There is a choice between two styles of collars for the neck finish, the high funnel design or the turn-over collar.

In medium size the coat requires 2¾ yards 54-inch material, with ⅜ yard striped silk for the trimming. It is quickly made and looks exceedingly stylish when finished. The first step toward putting the coat together is to close the underarm and shoulder seams as notched. The large "O" perforations indicate the center front. Next, adjust underfacing to position underneath front, corresponding edges even. Face collar and sew to neck edge as notched, center-backs even, and if coat is desired with open neck, or with collar standing up, leave collar free forward of large "O" perforation.

The large "O" perforations in the pockets indicate front edge. Adjust to position on coat, lower and side edges along line of small "o" perforations in front and back, and leave the extensions free above small "o" perforations to fasten on belt.

Next adjust belt to position on coat, center-fronts and center-backs even, and bring small "o" perforation at upper edge of belt to corresponding perforation in back at underarm seam. Large "O" perforation in belt indicates center-front. Lap the pointed ends of pocket on belt matching single and double small "oo" perforations, and close with buttons and buttonholes.

Close sleeve seam as notched. Turn under edge of cuff on slot perforations lap to small "o" perforations, notches even; stitch 1 inch from folded edge. Sew to lower edge of sleeve as notched, single small "o" perforation in cuff at sleeve seam. Sew sleeve in armhole as notched, easing in any fulness.

RETURNS $35 STOLEN YEARS AGO IN HOLDUP

Evangelist, Then a Huckster, Gets Money in Conscience Letter—Accomplices Didn't Contribute.

Hagerstown, Ind.—Twenty-two years ago, as J. N. Baldwin, then a huckster, was driving to his home, five miles north of here, he was held up by three masked men and robbed of $35, the robbery occurring just at dusk on the public highway and in sight of his home. There was no clew, and the matter was dropped without investigation.

Mr. Baldwin, who seven years ago moved to Cowan, near Muncie, and is traveling as an evangelist, recently received a letter sent from this place, in which $35 was inclosed. The letter read:

Here's your money. I want to get this from my mind and get clear of this sin. All these years since I helped to rob you have been years of hell. I was but sixteen years old, and bad company got me into it. The gun I pointed at you, while the other two highwaymen robbed you was a pocketknife. The other two that helped are still living, but neither helped me make this up to you.

WHAT COLOR AMOUNTS TO IN RUBBER GOODS

Take an assortment of bicycle tires, water bottles—even automobile tires in these days—and you will find nearly every color in the rainbow.

Which leads naturally to the question: "What does color amount to in rubber, anyway?"

The answer is a matter of history and psychology. Those of you who have babies know the answer. Bright colors always have an appeal from the time we're first born. Reds are especially attractive, blue comes next, and white possibly third.

And after all is said and done, we're all of us grown-up "kids" with our natural and instinctive liking for color.

Some keen sales manager in the early days of rubber manufacture, recognized that fact and to make his articles distinctive, colored them red. There's the origin of color in rubber—and the part it plays today is not radically different.

Crude rubber is a dark brown or omber color. It is not especially attractive, and those who sell rubber goods find that colored articles always have a greater attraction for the buyer. To most demands of service the rubber manufacturer uses pigments which may add to both the attractiveness and the efficiency of the article.

Red rubber articles are possibly the most popular. This may be traced both to the natural liking for this color which everyone has and to the exceptionally good color which it is possible to obtaiin.

In some instances the coloring pigment may add toughness to the rubber—take our brown inner tube for example. But in most instances color is no more than color used to make an article distinctive or attract the buyer's eye.

HOW

To Plant and Nurture Seeds, For Your Garden

SOWING PANSY SEEDS.—A five cent package of mixed pansy seed will be sufficient to plant. They should be started indoors in a box full of rich soil and be kept in a slightly shaded place. The dirt should be damp all the time. In fact, it is hard to give pansies too much water. After all danger of frost is past they can be transplanted out of doors in any place you desire them to bloom. The north side of a house is generally the best, because pansies require considerable moisture and shade. With a little care they can be made to bloom until the frost comes in the fall. It is possible in some climates to keep the plants alive over winter, but it is more desirable to start new ones in the spring.

The plants will soon be spoiled if not treated in time. The fungoid disease is caused by spores, which float in the air and settle on the plants. The usual remedies, such as spraying with tobacco water, emulsion of kerosene and insecticides, will prove of no avail.

Plants confined in rooms which are not often aired are the ones most likely to contract the disease.

Bush Nasturtiums.—Plant in ordinary garden soil. Dig deep and break up the lumps. Select a sunny place. In May plant the seeds one-half inch deep and three inches apart. Water freely all summer.

China Pinks.—Prepare a good bed of manure for seeds. Sow in the house and in early May in open sheltered bed, eight inches apart.

Phlox.—Sow in the house and transplant as soon as frost is out of the ground in a sunny part of the garden. Plant one-quarter inch deep in good soil.

Hyacinth Bean (a climber).—Sow in the house now and transplant in early May. Soak the beans in warm water over night. Plant one inch deep in sunny position. Water freely.

Verbena (good for borders).—Soak seeds a few hours in warm water and sow in seed boxes filled with light, rich soil. Cover one-fourth inch deep, press down firmly and water. When an inch high transplant in sunny place in a garden in May, about ten inches apart each way.

Zinnia.—Plant one-quarter inch deep in good soil and as soon as frost is out of ground set in sunny places. Use in a group or border.

HUNTER'S MAKE AN ACCOUNTING

The schedules of debts and assets of the Hunter Brothers Paper company, were filed yesterday in Federal Court at Utica through Attorney E. J. Mixen, and show liabilities of $59,040 and assets of $63,000. Real estate consists of four acres worth $1,000 and 18 acres valued at $3,000. Both pieces of land are near Battle Island.

Aside from taxes of $40 the bond holders are the creditors, and they will be paid in full, according to a judgment of Judge Ray. The judgment has been affirmed by the Circuit Court of Appeal, although the claim is yet pending and undetermined.

The Fulton bond holders are Frank Stafford, $1,000; Frank Cordonier, $8,000; Edna A. Moore, $1,000; Mrs. M. A. Sanford, $2,000; W. H. Pollard, $1,000; Maria C. Strickland, $3,000; Jesse A. Morrill, $1,000 and M. A. and Maria A. Losey, $2,000. The Reformed Presbyterian church of North America, Pittsburg, Pa., hold four bonds for $4,000.

POLICE QUELL IRISH UPROAR

New York—Captain Stephen McFarland was about to call to order a meeting of the United Irish League of America at Emmet Arcade, Madison avenue and Fifty-ninth street, last night, when he saw a man and woman whom he did not recognize as members seated in the rear. He was about to speak when others in the crowd caught sight of the intruders.

"Throw them out," shouted one excited man. Instantly half a dozen others sprang toward the couple. Dr. John J. Coyle reached them first. He begged that they be allowed to leave the hall of their own accord. The attacking party fell back a few feet and Dr. Coyle asked the man and woman to leave. They refused.

Several men rushed to summon a policeman; the others forcibly attempted to push the intruders out of the hall. He fought them back. In an instant pandemonium reigned. Several women fainted, while others began to scream.

Still resisting, the intruder was forced down the steps, through the door and into the street. There he was joined by about twenty sympathizers.

The intruder and his companions took up positions on the Madison avenue side of theb uilding and began shouting "Hurrah for Casement." "Hurrah for Germany!" and like sentiments. Their shouts were heard by Patrolman Clancy, of the Fifty-first street station, on duty several blocks away.

SANDY CREEK PASTOR GOES TO SYRACUSE

Syracuse—Rev. Burton S. Barrett, of Sandy Creek, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Immanuel Baptist church in Hawley avenue, to succeed Rev. C. E. Burrell, who concluded his services the first Sunday in April to take up evangelistic work in the south. Mr. Barrett comes to the Immanuel church at a time when the society is experiencing greater spiritual and material success than ever before. With the hundred new members received as the result of the Billy Sunday campaign, there are now between 300 and 400 on the roll. Financially the society is in good condition.

Days You'll Never Forget

600 VILLISTAS INVADE TEXAS

Presidio, Texas—Between five and six hundred armed Villistas have crossed the Rio Grande River at Lajitas, Texas, seventy-five miles from the nearest railroad point, and have taken possession of the town, according to telegraphic messages reaching here today from Americans coming from Lajita by automobile.

There has been no fighting so far, according to the Americans, no resistance being offered, but several stores have been looted.

Lajitas is fifteen miles from Tolinga, where several mines, employing about thirty Americans, are situated. A corporal and twelve American soldiers are at Tolinga.

According to the Americans from Lajitas, the bandits have announced themselves Villistas and have said thye were working under General Placido Pinto Villanuevo, who, with 200 ore men, is a few miles south of the border. They are in possession at present of about twenty miles of United States territory. Grave fears are entertained for the safety of the Americans at Tolinga.

A NEAT ENSEMBLE.

The Small Things That Score For the Well Dressed Woman.

There was a time when it was far more difficult to look smartly dressed than it is today. That was the time when we wore separate belts, when there was dress braid on our skirts, when we wore separate neckwear. We had to be careful that the braid on our skirts didn't become ripped, to hang in loops of untidiness. We had to see to it that the belt of our skirt didn't sag. We had to see to it that the leather belt we wore exactly coincided with the skirt belt. We had to see to it that the ribbon or muslin collar we wore exactly made connections with the blouse beneath it. Yes, those were indeed difficult days.

Today neatness counts as much as ever, but there are not so many pitfalls for the woman who would be neat.

Neatness of footgear counts more than ever before. The shoes must be spotless, well polished and in good repair. Heels that slant are an outrage on good dressing; moreover, they are decidedly unhealthful.

It goes without saying that the hair must be neat. A hair net sometimes produces a stiff effect, but that is better than a sloppy one. So choose the hair net in windy weather, and learn to adjust it becomingly. This year, when our milliners tell us to wear our hats straight on the head, neither tipped to left or right, neat hair is more than ever essential.

Immaculate gloves count for much in producing a smart appearance. Soiled gloves, ripped gloves or worn gloves are a disgrace. Nowadays, when washable gloves can be bought at almost any price, it is possible for everybody to have clean gloves. The cotton ones, if clean, always look well—infinitely better than soiled kid ones. And a stitch now and then will keep gloves always well mended.

Then there is the handbag. In this case the more you pay the better, for an expensive handbag outwears two cheaper ones and looks better the last day it is carried than the cheap one does after the first few weeks.

There are little details, like the handkerchief, which should always be sheer and snow white, that count quite as much as some of the bigger things in giving the impression of smartness, which the modern woman aims to attain.

"BOILER PLATE" FOR BROWN SENT OUT

New York—The Evening Post says:

"Two hundred of the smaller daily and weekly newspapers of the state have received since the legislature adjourned four separate 'boiler-plate' stories telligm how Senator Elon R. Brown, as Republican majority leader in the senate, stood steadfast for true economy and retrenchment while mistaken folks clamored for 'a segregated budget,' a comparative itemized budget, and other reforms which the senator, for the best interests of the people of the state, felt compelled to oppose.

"When a statesman spends his own money on 'boiler-plate' or the money of a political committee, such as the state committee, is spent on a 'boiler-plate' eulogizing a particular statesman for his devotion to economy and retrenchment, the inference is that the particular statesman is a candidate for something. 'Boiler-plate' stories all set up in type ready to be inserted in the news columns of the papers receiving such matter. The Browr boiler-plate matter was sent free of charge, expressage prepaid, so that it cost the newspapers receiving it nothing.

REVOLT A BLOW TO HOME RULE

London—My first feeling on hearing of this insane movement in Dublin was one of horror, of discouragement and almost of despair.

I asked myself whether Ireland, as so often before in her tragic history, was to dash the cup of liberty from her lips, was the insanity of a small section of her people once again to turn al lher marvelous victories of the last few years into irreparable defeat and send her back on the very eve of her final recognition as a free nation into another long night of slavery, incalculable suffering and weary and uncertain struggle?—John Redmond.

HOW TO PRUNE TREES ANNUALLY SO THEY FLOURISH.

Prune annually, but not heavily.

Do not cut out large limbs.

Frostbitten wounds are slow to heal.

Never leave stubs in cutting off limbs.

Wounds heal most rapidly in spring.

Keep trees free from suckers.

Torn wounds are generally fatal.

Summer pruning induces fruitfulness.

Heavy pruning is always followed by a heavy growth of suckers.

Winter pruning, when the tree is wholly dormant, increases the vigor of the tree.

In transplanting cut back, top and root. Burn all the wood to prevent spread of insects and disease.
